FREELAND, NOVEMBER 12, 1891.

UNDER the law requiring candidates to file itemized accounts of their election expenses Albert Klein, Socialist candidate for the Assembly in one of the New York districts, acknowledges having spent 55 cents during his canvass. He doesn't state who the other ten men were that were with him at the time.

W. T. STREAR says the trouble with the Prince of Wales is that he wanted "thrills," and there was nothing in the dreary, aimless life of the heir to the throne to give them to him, so he had to find them as best he could, in ways commendable or otherwise. That is the trouble with many people they want "thrills."

LAST January there was in this country the largest sum of money per capita that was ever known in the history of the nation, although many individuals are sure they did not get their share of it. The amount per capita was $24. The large gold shipments have reduced it somewhat, yet even now, if it will be any consolation to you to know, there is for you and every member of your family, though you can't see it, $23.37.

ACCORDING to Charles A. Dana, the following was Horace Greeley's code in journalism: "Always give a hearing to your opponent. Never attack a man and refuse him an opportunity to defend himself in the same column. Be always as considerate of the weak and oppressed as of the powerful. Waste no strength in advocating things impossible of accomplishment. Never compromise your opinion on account of subscribers or advertisers."

The editor of the Williamsport Republican was langed in effigy Tuesday night by a number of citizens. The figure was run up on the middle span of the river bridge, and late passers supposed it to be the body of a man who had committed suicide. Mr. Dwyer, the editor, when informed of the occurrence was greatly amused. The publication which led to the deed was to the effect that the County Commissioners could have saved $50,000 by building a new bridge, and insinuating that all was not straight in the transaction. Editors can stand harmless fun of that kind, so long as the citizens do not try to hang them, minus the effigy.

An underground city is reported by Russian newspapers as having been found in Russian Turkestan, near the Bokharan town of Kariki. The entrances are by a series of large caves in the side of a rocky hill. Effigies and inscriptions have been found, and also designs upon gold and silver money, which lead to the belief that the town dates back to some two centuries before the birth of Christ. There are a number of streets and squares surrounded by houses two and three stories high. Urns, vases, cooking pots, and other utensils have been found in great abundance. The symmetry of the streets and squares and the beauty of the baked clay and metal utensils attest the fact that the people had reached an advanced stage of civilization.

ROBERT WATCHORN, State Factory Inspector, has returned from his trip to Europe. Mr. Watchorn says the condition of the American miners is not to be compared with the coalfields of Europe. Over there they are better paid and the employment is more regular. He says the lowest rate of wages paid the European miner is $10 per week, to which is added a dividend of 40 per cent of the sales. After investigating the facts Mr. Watchorn thinks the diggers of Pennsylvania have nothing to congratulate themselves upon when the respective conditions of home and foreign labor is put side by side. The labor unions of England have ameliorated the workingman's condition. The organizations are very compact, and see to the welfare of every toiler.

The reasons given in Senator Gobin's resolution declaring that the Senate has no jurisdiction in the Boyer case may prove awkward hereafter. The Senate is made to declare that the charges preferred by the Governor against the State Treasurer are charges of misdemeanor in office, "for which said officers could be proceeded against both by impeachment and by indictment," etc. Suppose the Governor should take the Republican Senators' view of it and call the House in extra session to prepare articles of impeachment. Without considerable juggling the Republicans of the House will find themselves in a predicament, being obliged either to disagree with their brethren of the Senate as to the character of the charges, or else to boldly refuse to indict on charges based on admitted facts—or else to indict. It was a wise rule of an old French king never to give any reasons for his acts. He knew, what the Senate may learn, how awkwardly they turn up to confound the reasoner.

Strikes and Lockouts.

The annual report of the Secretary of Internal Affairs on the industrial statistics of the State will soon appear. Its publication has been delayed in order to procure the statistics of the last census relating to the leading manufactures of the State. It was confidently believed that these could be completed, but so much of the work in the census office that it was suspended from lack of funds that it was finally determined to publish the report without these statistics. As soon as they are completed, however, they will appear in a separate form.

The statistics of strikes and lock-outs from 1887 to 1890 are given. In the report for 1888 all the strikes for the preceding six years were published, and the record is here presented for four years more. The most important ones during this period were the strikes of the employees of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company, the Reading Iron and Coal Company and the Lehigh region miners. In the four years, 1887 to 1890, inclusive, there were 51 strikes and lock-outs. Of this number 44 were for an increase of wages and 7 against a reduction of wages. Of the 51 strikes and lock-outs inaugurated, 19 were successful, 7 partly successful and 31 were total failures. From this report it can be seen that the odds are against the workmen in strikes and lock-outs.

The report closes with a description of the railroad relief associations of the State. They have been established by the Pennsylvania Railroad, Cumberland Valley, Lehigh Valley, Philadelphia and Reading and the Baltimore & Ohio—in short they include all the more important lines in the State. The report of the Factory Inspector also appears in this volume, though it properly forms no part of it, as the Factory Inspector is not under the supervision either of the Secretary of Internal Affairs or the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics.

Cleveland the Coming Man.

It seems to be admitted that the one man who looms up conspicuously for the Democratic nomination is Grover Cleveland. The platform on which Flower won in New York represents quite accurately Mr. Cleveland's views. Revenue reform and sound coinage were the shibboleths. Mr. Cleveland's activity in the campaign is believed to have materially contributed to Flower's success, and it would seem as though Tammany Hall would have reason to give the ex-President as emphatic support next year as it gave him half-hearted aid or open opposition in previous campaigns. Governor Hill's chances were largely based on the assumption that he was the only Democrat who could be confidently relied upon to carry New York. The great majority for Flower upsets that calculation. Then again, Hill is suspected of a leaning to cheap silver notions, and the Ohio election has settled all question of the Democratic platform's position with regard to the currency.

Governor Campbell's principal stumbling block in his campaign was the silver plank in his State. Therefore, as the Democratic party triumphed upon the principle of free silver, it is not surprising that the current of events has brought him closer into line with the organization in his own State, his friends have much reason to claim that the logic of the situation points clearly to his nomination, and that his chances of occupying the White House, also, have been strengthened by the late elections. It is certain that Pattison's boomlet will die out immediately and will be laid away with Campbell's. Russell and Boies will be strong Vice Presidential possibilities, and either will make a good companion for Grover.

What the Elections Show.

The elections of last week leave a very large margin for conjecture about the distribution of the electoral vote of 1892. Neither party can confidently claim the possession of anything near the 223 votes necessary to elect a President. Under the new apportionment the twenty States that cast their electoral votes for Harrison have 249 votes. But this year majority in the Electoral College is wiped out when the following States are ranked as doubtful:

Table with 2 columns: State and Votes. Indiana 15, Iowa 13, Massachusetts 15, Michigan 14, New York 36. Total 83 votes. These reduce the available strength of the States that went Republican in 1888 to 156 votes. Add to these the 17 votes of the new States of Idaho, North and South Dakota, Washington and Wyoming, and the total is still 50 votes short of a majority.

Under the newly established district system in Michigan its electoral vote will be divided, but only six votes are claimed by the Republicans. As to these the voters of Indiana, Iowa and Massachusetts and the election would be a tie. Let the Democrats carry New York, Indiana and eight districts in Michigan and their victory would be complete. Let the fact be admitted that Illinois, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Wisconsin are no longer securely Republican States and the problem becomes still more complicated for the party that won in 1888.

New York Patriotism.

In the "Tar and Tartar" there is an elaborate melody of American patriotism airs at the close of the third act. The leader of the orchestra has arranged them so that the people on the stage sing the "Star Spangled Banner," "Dixie" and "Yankee Doodle" at one time without any discord. There is a tremendous amount of marching and countermarching, and the singers raise the roof with their songs. The arrangement is so popular that four or five encores are demanded every night. New York audiences are not supposed to be particularly patriotic, and the applause was set down as a tribute to the skill of the musician who had made the arrangement of the songs, until the other night, when some foreigners who were sitting near the stage grew weary of the music and began to hiss. Instantly there was an outburst of cheers and applause which startled the attendants of the house. The song was redemanded three times more, and when the Spaniards got up and left the theatre, the people glared at them in a fashion that surprised me. I had no idea that a New York audience could be brought up to such a pitch of patriotism.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"She Couldn't Marry Three."

One of the greatest successes on the road will play an engagement here shortly. It is one of the most colossal theatrical enterprises ever sent from New York. During the past summer over twenty men, scene painters, machinists, upholsterers, carpenters, etc., have been constantly at work building the most stupendous scenery and effects. It can be best appreciated from the fact that not one piece of the local scenery is used in the production. The stage is stripped bare on the company's arrival in town, as every piece of scenery for the entire play is special, and from the accounts which precede the company, some of the scenic effects are simply wonderful.

John O'Donnell, Sr., of Eckley, will be a candidate before the Foster Democratic Convention for the nomination of supervisor. Mr. O'Donnell has been a resident of the township for several years, and his friends have already begun working for his success.

Drunkness, or the Liquor Habit, Positively Cured by administering Dr. Haines' Food Specific.

It is manufactured as powder, which can be given in a glass of beer, a cup of coffee or tea, or in food, without the knowledge of the patient. It is absolutely harmless, and will effect a permanent and speedy cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. It has been tried in thousands of cases and in every instance a perfect cure has followed. It never fails. The system once impregnated with this specific, it becomes an utter impossibility for the liquor appetite to exist. Cures guaranteed.
