Entered at the Freeland Postoffice as Second Class Matter.

FREELAND, PA., JANUARY 14, 1892.

The labor reformers of Canada have decided to work for a very simple, a very democratic and, at the same time, a very self-evidently just reform. They purpose making an effort to have the municipal law so amended as to allow municipalities to decide for themselves as to how they will levy local taxation. At first glance this does not appear to be a very far-reaching measure, but should it become law tax reformers can carry on a vigorous and effective campaign looking to the placing of all municipal taxes upon land values, with excellent prospects of success.—Journal of United Labor.

FREE TRADE certainly cannot be treason when we have Blaine, as a historian, declaring that free trade was beneficial from 1850 to 1860, and further insisting that in this year of our Lord, 1892, we shall have free trade in hides with all the world, and free trade in a great many other articles with nations that are willing to take our goods in exchange. If cheap shoes are a boon, cheap clothing cannot be a plague. If free trade with one nation is desirable, free trade with another cannot be misfortune. Blaine is too astute a politician not to see the drift of public opinion, and his reciprocal talks are used only to smooth his way to a declaration for absolute free trade.

The Chileans have got a little further in putting the law on the rowdies who attacked the sailors from the Baltimore than we succeeded in doing with the New Orleans mob that lynched the Italians. They have got them indicted and held for trial and will probably convict them, while in the New Orleans case even an indictment failed. Under existing circumstances it is not clear what further demands we have any right to make upon Chili. The whole trouble has been entirely the creation of Egan and the Washington administration, aided by irresponsible correspondents, and they would have got us into a war before this, in spite of Chili's desire to avoid it, if the public and the better class of newspapers had not resolutely opposed the mischievous jingo scheme.—Phila. Times.

REPRESENTATIVES of the National Organization of Broom Manufacturers, in session at Chicago, have announced an advanced of 25 cents a dozen, to take effect immediately. Previous to the passage of the McKinley bill brooms were admitted under a duty of 25 per cent, and even that rate enabled the manufacturers to form a combine and keep up the price of this household article to the highest possible figure. The last Republican Congress, however, true to its principles and its blind allegiance to monopoly, advanced the tariff to 40 per cent, and the broom trust now comes forward and demands additional tribute to correspond with the increased duty. The advance of price on each separate broom is very little, but taken in the aggregate amounts to a large sum in the course of a year. It also shows plainly the logical results of protection, which is the very foundation of trusts and combines.

The Philadelphia Press, in summing up the political complexion of the next State Senate, announces that this district, the Twenty-first, is debatable and really ought to be redeemed by the Republicans. There are no reasons given why the voters of the Twenty-first should disgrace themselves by sending a Republican to Harrisburg as the successor of Senator Hines. As the latter is a candidate for Congressional honors the Democrats will have to move very carefully in making a selection, not from fear of defeat, but to maintain the high standard Luzerne's present member has made for the county. That this will be done we have no reasons to doubt, but the proposition to elect a Republican who will help to re-elect Matt Quay is simply preposterous. The Twenty-first District belongs to the Democrats, and Republican aspirants will save themselves considerable trouble by remembering the fact.

BECAUSE THE TRIBUNE does not support Reynolds in his efforts to unseat Congressman Shonk the White Haven Journal thinks the millennium is near at hand. It also incidentally remarks that other Democratic newspapers have expressed similar opinions to ours, "thus indicating that Mr. Reynolds is not in harmony with the organs of his party, for reasons which are variously explained." The Tribune does not know or care much for what reasons other newspapers are against Reynolds' contest. It believes he was not elected, and we are merely following the principles of this paper in refusing to boost his claim. Millennium or no millennium we will not lend our aid to an attempt to overthrow the will of the people, and anyone who counts upon us to do so, whether they be Democrats or not, will be sadly left. Democratic principles call for fair play, and that is what we want Shonk or any other man to get. This is no man's organ, and Democratic usurpers are given the same medicine as Republican thieves.

General Lilly for Congress.
General Wm. Lilly, of Match Chunk, has been prominently mentioned as a candidate for the Republican nomination of Congressman-at-large. He is known to the party leaders in this State as one of the old war-horses who is ready in every campaign with a check or small amount, and his friends base his claim for recognition on that ground. Indeed, had it not been for General Lilly's generosity in 1888 Harrison might yet be figuring as a third-rate lawyer in Indiana. When Matt Quay was running that campaign his plans were badly handicapped for the want of funds during the latter part of the contest. The Senator conceived the idea of placing another assessment upon the faithful, and thirty millions of Pennsylvania were notified to put up the necessary cash. General Lilly happened to be one of the number, and like a true Republican he asked no questions but sent his check for the largest amount ever subscribed in any political campaign by an individual with the probable exception of John Wannamaker's famous donation. With the money thus obtained Quay was enabled to buy the Presidency.

The junior Senator is not ungrateful to all his friends and it is announced that he has given his endorsement to Lilly's canvass in return for the favor rendered him in 1888. This, of course, is equivalent to the nomination, for the rank and file of the Republican party are never consulted in matters of any great importance. The nomination means positive election, and according to political prophets it may be set down as an assured fact that Lilly is the man for the position. His colleague on the ticket will be Major McDowell, of Western Pennsylvania, subject to Quay's approval. Mr. Lilly states he will accept the nomination provided it comes to him with any degree of unanimity. His only opponent is Geo. A. Castor, a Philadelphia business man, whose candidacy is in the hands of the local politicians in that city.

General Lilly is a typical Republican, not one of the rabid stripe, however, but a man who seems intensely anxious for the success of his party at all times, as his heavy contributions during campaigns throughout the State amply prove. Although he is not the man whom the Tribune would wish to see representing this State in Congress, he is far more preferable to many of his party who would like to aspire to the office, and since he is almost certain of success we are pleased to know that while a Democrat cannot be elected, the Republicans are going to give us the best man in a bad party. Next to his Republicanism General Lilly's greatest fault is being a coal operator—a mine master would be guilty of had they the opportunity.

Democracy's Great Leader.
In a comprehensive review of the Presidential situation the New York Times surveys the field and comes to the conclusion that Cleveland is the recognized leader of his party and that the people are for him. It says: "Although there has not been a time since the November elections of 1880 when it could not be said that Mr. Cleveland was the recognized leader of his party and his choice for its Presidential candidate in 1892, there can be no denial of the proposition that since the elections of last fall there has been a great strengthening of the conviction that he is the man to lead the fight for tariff reform that is so soon to open. It is not an overstatement to say that no other man is seriously thought of as the proper person to head the Democratic ticket. The results of the elections held in November have been everywhere considered as indicating that the Democratic party has but one duty to perform at the present time, and that it should perform that duty under the guidance of Grover Cleveland."

The people believe in the man; they trust in his integrity and in his great capacity as well; they have the most implicit confidence that, nominated, he will be elected by a grand vote. On the other hand, what opposes him? A small clique of peevish politicians, spittle-men, sore-headed and revengeful fellows. Not one of them has a reputation for statesmanship, every one of them is a dead weight on his party, inasmuch as the knowledge that he is a "prominent Democrat" deters many men from attaching themselves to the party with which they would gladly co-operate in the work of reforming and ultimately abolishing the tariff.

"Knights of Reciprocity."
A dispatch from the Windy City gives a glowing account of the organization of a new political band, modeled somewhat after the style of the Know-Nothing party. The following is some of the information which the leaders have given to the public. They state that reciprocity is its platform and Blaine is its chief. It is a combination of laboring men in the protected trades, farmers who are not in or are weary of the Alliance and Democrats and Republicans generally who believe in Blaine and a protective tariff. The organization is secret and out-bound. Each member must subscribe to a ritual that fixes his opinions on certain questions in black and white. It claims 5,000 members in Chicago. The results of Chicago the organization, it is said, has 3,000 members. Encampments or lodges are to be organized in every city in the land. Old time political associations will be laid aside. Its scope is immense. It takes in half a dozen great interests. In the West and South it embraces every one who is partial to Blaine and the reciprocity, and it is organized under the general name of the "Knights of Reciprocity." Executive Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson is said to have conceived the idea of the organization, and Patrick Ford, editor of the Irish World, of New York, is credited with assisting him in working out its details. Democrats and Republicans will march in its ranks and all members are under oath not to reveal the secrets of the organization under any consideration. To become a member one must be a citizen of the United States and a firm believer in the constitution and civil rights.

A Prohibitionist Sizes Up the G. O. P.
It has been the usual custom to refer to the Democratic party as the friend of the liquor element, but the Mountain Statesman, edited by Rev. J. W. Bedford, of Freeland, in an article upon the Republican party's attitude towards prohibition, gives the party of inanimate morality some home thrusts when it says: "The last national convention of the party was presided over by a wine dealer, the President they elected is a wine drinker and recently received a barrel of liquor as a present; the Vice President is the owner of the Shoreham, a licensed liquor shop in Washington; the Secretary of State has used the department of State to drum up trade in South America for the brewers of this country; and with seven-eighths of all the liquor papers now in the ranks of that party; with saloon keepers on their tickets at the recent elections; with an increase of over 60,000 liquor dealers during the present Republican administration; with 1,355 breweries in Republican States, out of a total of 1,510 in the entire nation, and the party pledged to license, we do not see how it is possible to get less prohibition in its policies."

"Seeing is Believing."

And a good lamp must be simple; when it is not simple it is not good. Simple, Beautiful, Good—these words mean much, but to see "The Rochester" will impress the truth more forcibly. All metal, tough and seamless, and made in three pieces only, it is absolutely safe and unbreakable. Like Aladdin's of old, it is indeed a "wonderful lamp," for its marvelous light is purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light and more cheerful than either.

Look for this stamp—THE ROCHESTER. If the lamp dealer has not the genuine Rochester, and the style you want, send to us for our new illustrated catalogue, and we will send you a lamp safely by express—your choice of over 3,000 varieties from the Largest Lamp Store in the World.
