Labor in Pennsylvania.

Labor in Pennsylvania, says the New York World, is very often in trouble. The state is in natural developed resources the richest in the union, and it has received the most ample tariff protection. This protection, it is now pretended, is for the benefit of the American workman, for the advancement of his interests, for the increase of his wages.

Notwithstanding all this, capital and labor are at war in Pennsylvania. They often are at war. Protection has made capitalists rich. It has enabled them to live in luxury far from the grim surroundings of their mines and mills, to maintain palaces in New York, in Paris, in London and in the hills of Scotland.

Mr. Carnegie goes back to his home in which he was born a peasant richer, by means of taxes taken from the American people, than this nobility whose hereditary castles he rents. He founds libraries and music halls and lives like a gilded prince on his bounty-fostered profits.

His workmen, on the other hand, are always struggling for their rights. If they secure a share in the growing prosperity of the business of their employers it is because the latter cannot afford to stop their works for a struggle.

On a rising market the wage-earners are the last to feel the benefits, and usually they gain their end after a protest, a threat, or an actual strike. On a falling market they are the first to feel the reverse, for the protected manufacturer insists on not losing any of the benefits of his bounty.

If prices fall off the workman must make up the deficiency out of his stipend. If orders entirely fail the works close, pay stops, and in this way the operatives of Pennsylvania lose from two months to 200 days every year. If labor becomes too troublesome by insisting on its rights the manufacturer imports cheaper and more subservient men from abroad.

The story of labor in Pennsylvania is one of painful suffering or strenuous struggle. The fiction that capital is asking for taxes and bounties from the consumers in order to divide the money with its wage-earners is not believed in the mills and mines of the Keystone state.

There the men who work with their hands know full well that what they gain from their employers is by compulsion, the compulsion of strikes or of the demands of business.

Protection is for the rich to make them richer. It is hostile to the poor, and the poor are beginning to know it.

Nowhere was the Fourth celebrated with more enthusiasm than in New York, where the Tammany Tigers held their annual patriotic and political meeting. Addresses were made and letters read from all the prominent Democrats of the country, including Ex-President Cleveland. His name was given one of the greatest demonstrations it ever received, and as it was mentioned by every speaker the meeting was almost one continuous cheer for our next president.

The expected fight between Scranton and Connell for the Republican congressional nomination in Lackawanna county will not take place this year, as the latter has withdrawn from the contest on account of illness. Great preparations had been made for the battle, and the disappointment among the G. O. P. warriors in the Wyoming valley is intense.

GENERAL JAMES B. WEAVER is the People's party candidate for president, but the people's candidate is Grover Cleveland.

A COMING GOVERNOR.

Elias Carr, Candidate of the Democrats of the Tar Heel State.
Elias Carr, the gubernatorial candidate of the Democrats of North Carolina, is a practical farmer who has made money at the business. He is a well educated man, and had no idea that he would be so highly honored by his party. The only Carr who was a candidate before the convention was Jules S. Carr, the wealthy tobacco manufacturer of Durham. Mr. Elias Carr has been president of the North Carolina Farmers' Alliance, and has held minor elective offices in his county. He will be the next governor of North Carolina without doubt. In his speech accepting the nomination Mr. Carr said: "I know how to do only two things: One is to superintend a farm, and the other is to vote the Democratic ticket."

ELIAS CARR.

An Impregnable Candidate.

For the third time the Democracy of the nation summons Grover Cleveland to lead it against the host of Republicans. The third time he is summoned from private citizenship by the almost unanimous voice of his party, with the approval of hosts of independents and amid the applause of patriotic citizens generally, whose interest in good government and honest administration is not hedged in by party lines. It was the desire—aye, the demand—of his party that the brave, courageous, honest president who suffered defeat in the first battle for the people's cause should lead them on in the final and decisive battle, when promises of victory are so abundant. The forces that compel the nomination of Cleveland will be potent in the election. Grover Cleveland will be chosen to the presidency by the largest popular majority and by the largest electoral vote ever given to any candidate.—Utica Observer.

UNION, HARMONY, DEMOCRACY.

Differences of opinion and judgment in Democratic conventions are by no means unwholesome indications, but it is hardly conceivable, in view of the importance of our success to the country and the party, that there should be anywhere among Democrats any lack of harmonious and active effort to win in the campaign which opens before us. I have therefore no concern on that subject. It will certainly be my constant endeavor to deserve the support of every Democrat.—Grover Cleveland's Card to the Public.

Stevenson a Strong Man.

Adlai E. Stevenson, the nominee for vice president, is a man of education, ability and high character. Unlike his Republican competitor, Mr. Stevenson has held an elective office, having served in the lower house of congress.

Mr. Stevenson is exceedingly popular at home, as the record of his candidacies shows. He lives in a state which Senator Palmer is confident can be carried for the ticket.—New York World.

The White House Chair.

Air—"His soul is marching on,"
We have nominated a winner for the vote in '92.
We've picked a man to lead the van, and think that he'll suit you.
He was tried before in '84 and pulled the country through.
Seated in the White House chair.

Q Cleveland, will you meet you?
Q Cleveland, will you greet you?
In triumph we will seat you
In the White House chair.

The tariff is the issue, and the voters understand.
A candidate to mend it is the popular demand,
A Democratic ruler of the tariff tariff band,
Seated in the White House chair.
Chorus.

We know the foe with heavy blows stands ready organized,
We know that you, with courage true, have never temporized.
With patriotic duty nor a public trust despised,
While filling the White House chair.
Chorus.

In the battle next November we will fight the people's cause
Under Grover Cleveland's banner of just and equal laws.
We'll never lower his standard, nor after fighting pause
Till he's in the White House chair.
Chorus.

We are hunting up a relic for the fair in '92—
A likeness of the foreigner who came across the sea
To pay the loss of tariff on things which should be free.
With Harrison in the chair.
Chorus.

Another thing we ought to have, and for it we'd be praised,
And sight of it would please us all and make us much amazed—
A picture of the workman who had his wages raised.
With Harrison in the chair.
Chorus.

Harrison's men will court again the tariff plutocrat,
And scheme to carry their ticket through by "tricking out the fact."
But what the people favor is the honest Democrat
Seated in the White House chair.
Chorus.

With Cleveland as a leader, pure, strong and undefiled,
We'll go before the masses with our issues reconciled,
And when the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

When the votes are counted the license shall be filed
Giving him the White House chair.
Chorus.

A Lively Well.

A Bellaire, O., dispatch says: "There is much excitement in this section over a wonderful well on Pawpaw creek, near Salem, a village on the Cleveland and Marietta railroad, fifteen miles south of Summerfield, Noble county. A well was drilled to the depth of 1,400 feet about nineteen years ago. Oil or gas was not being found it was abandoned. Several years later water and gas commenced coming from the hole in great force, which threw the tubing out. That gave it a chance and it washed out a large cavity, forty feet in diameter. Six or seven years ago it ceased to flow. Jacob Martz, about two years ago, filled the hole with logs, stone and earth and built a large barn on stone pillars, one of which stood in the center of the cavity.

"Recently gas burst up alongside the pillar with a report like that of thunder, a large flow of oil and water followed, and before a half hour passed around the pillar began to sink and was soon out of sight. In twenty-eight hours a basin some thirty-five feet in diameter and no one can tell how deep was formed and was filled with water, which is constantly in motion, and the earth for several feet around it also moves up and down. It is believed that the well is an outlet for a subterranean sea of oil, gas and salt water, and that it is in the Maxburg oil and coal fields. Thousands of people visited it and are afraid to make an investigation. The oil, when separated from the gas and water, is of first class quality. The roar of escaping gas and the underground grumbling can be heard for miles around."

Mars Approaching the Earth.

The month of August next is expected to bring important, if not wonderful and sensational, developments in the study of our mysterious heavenly little kinswoman. Aug. 5 next Mars will arrive at a point directly opposite this earth, which it reaches but once in fifteen years, when the distance between the two planets will be reduced from 141,000,000 to 35,000,000 miles. Upon that night a thousand telescopes will be leveled at the planet, which will repose in resplendent beauty in the southern skies, and a thousand eyes will seek to pierce the veil of distance that conceals the knowledge for which science thirsts.

Wonderful results are expected by reason of the marvelous improvements that have been made in astronomical instruments within fifteen years and since the last most favorable observation was made. With the powerful lenses and the photographic appliances of today it will be as if the far away visitor, tempted by curiosity, had drawn nearer to the earth than ever. Although Mars will be 35,000,000 miles away, the powerful Lick telescope will magnify her to a size as if viewed at a distance of but 17,500 miles.—Washington Star.

Count Herbert Bismarck and the Italian.

I met at a recent entertainment a gentleman who had just arrived from Italy, and who had gone much into Italian society during a prolonged stay in Rome. He told me that Count Herbert von Bismarck, when he lately visited that city, contrived to make himself very unpopular by his arrogant and aggressive manners. On one occasion he pushed so rudely against an Italian officer of high rank that the personage thus assailed gave vent to his indignation in very forcible terms. Without a word of apology the insolent Prussian retorted angrily: "I am Count Herbert von Bismarck!" "That, sir, is an explanation of your conduct, but it is no excuse," was the response.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

The Soda Water Season Open.

Soda water fountains are blossoming out all over the east side for the summer season. There seems to be more soda water drunk there than anywhere else in the city. Prices are one, two and three cents a glass. The highest price is for a new flavor which seems to be fashionable on the east side, though it has not yet apparently become known elsewhere. It is spelled in different ways, but the usual spelling seems to be Aramatariene rose. This is the costliest flavor that there is. Another popular flavor, which sells for only two cents, is rosberry, according to the soda water spelling.—New York Sun.

A Seventy-Five Foot Dive.

At Arctic Springs Floyd Williams, a twelve-year-old boy, climbed a tower seventy-five feet high and, reaching the last turret, dived off into the river. The descent was made in safety, and the boy after coming to the surface swam around for several minutes. It is regarded as a marvellous act. The tower was built expressly for Professor Leuvenmark, the famous diver, who gave an exhibition on Sunday by diving from the top, and who was said to be considered the only man in the United States able to dive safely from such a distance.—Cor. Indianapolis Journal.

Teacher of One School Forty Years.

Mr. Carlos Slaughter, who for forty years past has been the principal of the Dedham High school, will tender his resignation. There is much regret that he is to leave the school. The Dedham High school was founded in 1851 and in 1852 Mr. Slaughter became its principal. From early manhood Mr. Slaughter has been an educational instructor. He was born in Theford, Vt., July 21, 1825. He was graduated from Dartmouth in 1846.—Boston Herald.

The Fish Caught the Man.

While capturing a large gale in the river Monday, a fisherman became entangled in his line, was dragged from his skiff by the fish and nearly drowned. Help arriving, he was rescued and the gale landed. It weighed 153 pounds.—Velasco Cor. Galveston News.

Snow and Apple Blossoms.

When the apple trees in Franklin county, Me., were in blossom on a recent Sunday, snow claimed to be from six to nine inches deep covered the Rangely district, and a man rode in his sleigh through the streets of Phillips.

Agassin's Charmed Life.

Frank Agassin, the sole survivor of the cave in the Anaconda mine, is in the general ward at the Sister's hospital in this city. He says he feels a little sorer on his right shoulder and left hip than when first taken out. This is ascribable to the muscular reaction after the terrible strain of remaining fifty-five hours in a cramped position, his left leg doubled up on his breast. There is also a pain in some of the internal organs. The attending physicians at the hospital apprehend no ill results, but say he will recover in a few days. His mind is not the least impaired, apparently.

Agassin was born in Paris and came to this country in 1882. He had a similar experience to his late one when working in a mine near Georgetown, Colo. He was caught in a drift by a fall of rock that kept him a prisoner six days before he was released. Then he had plenty of water, as there was a spring at the end of the drift where he was, and was not cramped as he was this time, having plenty of room to move about.

He had no idea of the passage of time during his incarceration. When he found himself imprisoned, with no possible chance of escape except with the aid of others, he shouted several times, but getting no answer he concluded to keep quiet till he heard something. At intervals he could hear the rumble of cars passing on the level overhead. He made no call for assistance again until he heard the sound of his deliverers at work, when he called out, and to his great relief was answered. He has had an experience such as not one man in a million has survived, and from coming through two such trials successfully may be said to bear a charmed life.—Helena Journal.

Suicide Prevented by a Dog.

A noble shepherd dog, the property of Joseph Langin, has performed a remarkable feat that entitles it to wear a medal for bravery. The brave animal plunged from the foot of Soudard street into the raging torrent of the Mississippi, and seizing a drowning man by the collar of his coat swam with him to the shore, thus saving him from certain death.

The rescued man was Joseph Reinert, twenty-one years of age, who resides in the same house with Langin. Reinert had been playing cards with Langin. Some words passed between them, and Reinert, who had become very morose, vowed that he would commit suicide. He left the house and ran down to the river. Langin followed, but by the time he arrived at the levee Reinert had plunged into the water and was being swept rapidly from view. Langin was helpless to save him, as he could not swim, but his dog, who had followed behind, plunged in and reached Reinert just as he was disappearing.—St. Louis Republic.

Long Distance Telephone Lines.

The long distance telephone system has already attained large proportions in this country. Beginning two or three years ago, in an experimental way, through New England and New York state, lines were next run across New Jersey to Philadelphia and thence onward to Baltimore and Washington. Until recently the line between this city and Buffalo was the longest in the world used commercially, being about 450 miles and giving excellent service. Between Boston and Pittsburg, via New York, communication is often had over 600 miles of circuit. A little while ago a trial was made between Newark and Boston, connecting through Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Erie, Buffalo and Albany, giving about 1,000 miles.—New York Telegram.

Peculiarly Afflicted.

One family in Utica is peculiarly afflicted. They have hay fever in the house six months of every year. When the trees bud the wife comes down with it, and for two months she wheezes, sneezes and coughs night and day. At the end of the two months she lends the disease to her husband, who keeps it until the grass is ripe and haying begins, at which time he transfers it to his sister, who is also a member of the family. For two or three years the family has been regularly visited by the disease, and now the coming of summer is hailed with anything but pleasure, for it brings misery with it.—Utica Observer.

Dug His Way Out of Jail with Toothpicks.

A Navajo Indian, arrested for theft at Gallup, N. M., was fed before being put in jail. While at dinner he provided himself with a couple of toothpicks. After incarceration, a few minutes' work with the toothpicks enabled him to loosen a piece of wood 2 by 4 that was stuck in the wall next to the cell door. This removed, a large rock about twenty inches square dropped out of the wall into the main room of the jail, where he found an iron stove poker, which he used to pry off the inside door casing. This done, he was a free "Injun," and is still at large.—Phoenix Herald.

Paper Making at the World's Fair.

The proposed exhibit by the paper makers at the World's Columbian exposition will mark a wonderful advancement in this branch of manufacturing, which is now fifth in the list of American industries, having risen from the tenth place since 1880. It is important not only in its magnitude, but, to quote the motto of a leading paper trade journal, "The consumption of paper is the measure of a people's culture."—Engineering Magazine.

Quakers Fighting Over a Church Organ.

The Friends' church at Odon is in a factional fight over the use of an organ in worshiping. At the meeting Sunday the antagonists were barred out, but they snatched in the windows, interrupting the services. Both sides will appeal to the courts.—Cor. Indianapolis Sentinel.

Hallstones Kill a Farmer.

A disastrous hailstone visited this section Monday afternoon. Nathan John, a farmer, was killed by hailstones while plowing.—Canton (Miss.) Cor. Chicago Herald.
