But the Quarantine Restrictions Are Sc Rigidly Enforced That the Health Au thorities Say the Plague Cannot Get in the Country Through That Ocean Gate.

the Country Through That Ocean Gate. New York, Sept. 7.—From seven to four-teen miles of salt water still separate the borders of New York city from the dread Oriental plague which has stretched its arm of death across 3,000 miles of ocean. There has been no outbreak of Asiatic cholers in the city itself, according to the bulletins which are now issued twice daily by the board of health. And these bulletins are a most wholesome check upon panic, discouraging and discountenancing sensational and unscientific diagnoses of intestinal disorders in the thickly settled tenement house districts.

But in the harbor death's pirate, cholora, still threatens with breeding

But in the harbor death's pirate, cholora, still threatens with breeding swarms of bacilli the waters of both the upper and lower bays and continues to add to the number of his victims. Yesterday there was another death—this one from the Rugia—added to the grim catalogue of victims on see and in harbor.

There were twelve new cases reported—three steerage of the Rugia and eight of the crew of the Normannia, as well as one of the Normannia's passengers on Hoffman island. And also there arrived the steamship Eibe, with 460 steerage and 302 first and second class passengers, from Fermen, a port now infected, but not so when the Eibe cleared; the Corean from Glasgow, a clean port, with 230 passengers; the Fersian Monarch, from London, with 55 cabin passengers; the Elysia, from Gibrultar (whence came our last visitation of cholera), with 230 passengers, and the Cachimere, from the dangerous port of Marseilles, with 458 passengers.

All Quarantined.

There had been only one death upon all these sensers.

All Quarantined.

There had been only one death upon all these vessels during passage, and that was upon the Elbe from heart disease. But, though all these ships had a clean record, the quarantined population of the harbor keeps growing.

The special police patrol continues to guard the quarantined vessels from contact with willfully inquisitive visitors. A further precaution against bringing the germs on shore is the order forbidding bathing on the shores of Staten Island near the Narrows.

Today there is due the steamship City of New York. Among her passengers are the wife and daughter of Secretary of the Treasury Foster, who will receive, the secretary has himself announced, exactly the same treatment as all other passengers.

Upon the cabin list of the City of New York is also booked the name of Channeey M. Depew. An excursion down the bay to meet him, arranged by C. Clark, H. Walter Webb, J. M. Toucey, J. B. Dutcher and W. J. Van Arsdale, has of course been abandoned.

Will Keep the Plague Out.

Health Officer Jenkins has written to the secretary of the treasury that he will carry out the president's order that all immigrant ships sailing after Sept. 1 be detained twenty days in quarantine.

Ex-Surgeon General Hamilton, after his visit to quarantine, said he was confident cholera would not enter this city.

The commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard has placed a tug and two steam launches at the disposal of Dr. Jenkins to prevent unauthorized communication with the steamers at quarantine.

the increase of fresh cases being 138 and the increase of deaths 17.

The hearses and dead wagons are not adequate to the requirements of the city. Most burials are carried on now with absolute disregard of the usual forms. The bodies are saturated with disinfectants, hurried into plain box coffins and got under ground as fast as the men in the dead wagons can handle them. Hundreds are taken to unknown graves and relatives are left without knowledge of where or how their dead have been interred.

NANCY HANKS SUPREME.

She Breaks Her Own Record and Trots a Mile in 2:05 1-4.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Sept. 1.—Nancy Hanks has clipped two seconds from the world's trotting record, made by herself in Chicago three weeks ago, and made the circuit of the famous kite shaped track here in 2:05½. All the conditions were favorable for arecord breaking mile and Nancy proved herself equal to the occasion.

With her smooth, easy, perfect and matchless gait, Nancy Hanks trotted the quarter in 30 seconds. At the half she turned in 1:01 without a misstep. Then began her grand race home. Without a wobble and with perfect swing she shot past the third quarter pole in 1:24. Here williams came up with his runner and Doble lossened the mare's head. He encouraged her by voice and a gentle use of the whip, and without a falter she shot under the wire in 2:05½.

THE FAMOUS EDITOR AND REFORMER

When the End Came He Muttered a Fer Unintelligible Words, His Head on His Breast and Death Wrote to His Life's Story—His Career.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—George William Curtis, the distinguished author and the editor of Harper's Weekly, is dead. He breathed his last at his home in West New Brighton, S. I. At the time he was scated in his big easy chair, with his son, Dr. F. G. Curtis, of West Newton, Mass., standing by his side. Mr. Curtis' death was painless. He wa

Mr. Curtis' death was painless. He was conscious up to within a few minutes of the end. Then he sank into semiunconsciousness, but still showed that he knew when any one spoke to him. Just as he died he muttered something unintelligible and his head fell over on his breast.

Mr. Curtis had not been out of the chair in which he died for the past six weeks. His illness had all along been a puzzle to the physicians, and it is now not known exactly what was the cause of death.

Mr. Curtis' Career.

Born in Providence on Feb. 24, 1824, George William Curtis spot his early school life at Jamaica Plain, Mass.

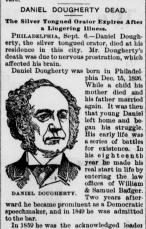

GEORGE WILLIAM CURTIS.

In 1833 he began in Harper's Monthly the department called "The Editor's Easy Chair." He continued to edit and conduct this department until the time of his death. In 1857 Mr. Curtis became the leading editorial writer for Harper's Weekly, a task that he continued until near the end of his fatal illness.

For many years Mr. Curtis was a commanding figure in New York and national Republican politics. He was a delegate to many national conventions, and in 1864 he was defeated for congress in his district. He declined consular offices offered to him by President Lincoln. In 1809 he declined the Republican nomination for secretary of state in this state. In 1871 Mr. Curtis was appointed by President Grant one of the commissioners to draw up rules for the regulation of the civil service. In 1873 he resigned because of an unfortunate difference of opinion regarding the enforcement of the rules between himself and General Grant.

In 1884 Mr. Curtis was dissatisfied with the nomination of Hon. James G. Blaine for the presidency by the Republican convenion, and he took an active part in the movement which elected Grover Cleveland. Among the best known of Mr. Curtis' literary works were "Niles Notes of a Howadji," "Lotus Eating," "Potiphar Papers," "Trimps," a novel, and "Prus and I," which is one of the most delicate and charming collections of sketches in English literature.

ward he became prominent as a Democratic speechmaker, and in 1849 he was admitted to the bar.

In 1859 he was the acknowledged leader of the Douglas party in this city. In the presidential election that placed Lincoln in the White House for the first term the Douglas party in Philadelphia polled nearly 9,000 votes, which was due largely to Mr. Dougherty's earnest efforts. In the beginning of 1861, at a public meeting in this city, Mr. Dougherty prepared the first resolution ever passed in favor of coercion against secession. In 1863 the Union League club was founded with 300 members, one of whom was Daniel Dougherty.

Mr. Dougherty delivered in 1859 an address on "Fears for the Future of the Republic" before the literary societies of Lafayette college. The utterances of the great orator on that occasion, prophetic as they proved, caused widespread comment all over the world, and Sir Edward Bulwer Lytton was so impressed by them that he quoted and commented on them in the house of commons.

The last prominent appearance of the great orator on the political platform was in 1888, when at the St. Louis convention, in behalf of the state of New York, he nom-inated Grover Cleveland. The nomination ated Grover Cleveland. The nomination so carried by acclamation by the conven-on, and Mr. Dougherty's effort on this oc-sion was said to have been one of the est brilliant of his life.
