that he had won not only a personal victory, but a substantial triumph for the entire priesthood.

Levied Upon Dr. M. auage's Church.
New York, Dec. 19.—Dr. Talmage's congregation was thrown into consternation when in the midst of their pastor's conversational discourse Friday three deputy sheriffs presented themselves in the vestry and took possession of the spacious tabernacle under a writ of execution. The writ directed the sheriff to seize such property as would satisfy a judgment of $1,04.85, obtained against the church by Adolph R. Tong, a painter, for an unpaid bill. A watchman was left in the church and remained there over night, the trustees promising on Saturday to satisfy the judgment, and the sheriff called off the watchman. Dr. Talmage made no reference to the incident in his sermon Sunday.

Cardinal Gibbons Present.
SCHANTON, Pa., Dec. 21.—Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore, and Arbishop Kean, of the Catholic university, Washington, with other church dignitaries, are here to participate in the golden and silver jubilees of Right Rev. Bishop O'Hara. An escort committee with a special train met the cardinal at Wilkesbarre and escorted him to this city. Here the head of the church in America was given a royal welcome. Columns of uniformed societies were lined at America wai given a royal weicome. Con-umns of uniformed societies were lined at the Central Railroad of New Jersey de; at and were re-enforced by thousands of elti-zens irrespective of creed. A BRILLIANT RAILROAD COUP.

New York and New England Buys the Connecticut River Road. New York and New England Buys the Connecticut River Road.

Bostox, Dec. 17.—The action of Vice President F. H. Prince, of the New York and New England railroad, in purchasing the Connecticut River railroad after it had been unanimously leased by the directors and turned over to the operating department of the New Haven road is regarded as one of the most brilliant coups ever made in the New England railroad field. The Connecticut River road is the main north and south artery of central New England, and its acquisition would have been of value to almost any line in New England, and its acquisition would have have mas another direct blow at the New York and New England, which the New Haven has so long desired at its own price.

a pool of blood in the sitting room of the house. A cigar box in which money was kept had been broken open, and something over $100 was gone. In the woman's hand were several gray hairs, clutched in the struggle which had evidently taken place. The detective arrested McGuine at once on suspicion, but he told such a good story that he was released. His story was confirmed by Warren Brazington and William Hummell, both employees of Noah Gregory. Brazington was afterward shown to have been an accomplice in the robbery and is now serving a term in Auburn state prison for perjury. McGuine was rearrested, tried and convicted of murder in the first degree.
