PRESIDENT AGAIN.

Grover Cleveland Once More the Head of the Nation.

HIS SECOND INAUGURATION.

The Oath of Office Administered by Chief Justice Fuller.

Vice President Stevenson Sworn In by Levi P. Morton, the Retiring Vice President—President Cleveland in His Inaugural Address Gives His Views on Finance, Economy, Civil Service, Government Paternalism and Tariff Reform—A Magnificent Parade—The City in a Blaze of Splendor at Night—A Brilliant Ball Winds Up the Inauguration Festivities.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Grover Cleveland of New York, thrice nominated for president of the United States and twice elected, was Saturday successfully inducted into that high office for his second term with all appropriate ceremonies and the gathering of a mighty multitude, and with the accompaniment of a blinding snowstorm. But notwithstanding every disadvantage of weather the last occasion was greater than the first. Had the atmospheric conditions been anything like favorable, instead of being as bad as they could possibly be, there would probably have been 60,000 men and a number of ladies marching or riding in the parade, as against 25,000 in 1885. They were all here waiting to fall in line, but at the last moment many of the organizations were compelled to desist from participation. Nevertheless the occasion was made memorable by the vast attendance.

The governors also of 11 great states—New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts in the north and east, Pennsylvania and Maryland among the middle states, Georgia, North and South Carolina and Louisiana in the south and Wisconsin in the far west—participated in the national ceremonies, and thereby emphasized the complete restoration of national unity. The order of proceeding was almost identically the same as four years ago, with the

In this year of grace courtesy between the outgoing and incoming powers has reigned supreme, as witness the banquets given by the senate without distinction of party to President Morton and Secretary Carlisle; the reception tendered by Vice President Morton to Vice President Stevenson, and the marked civilities exchanged between Presidents Harrison and Cleveland. "I desire the ideas of President Harrison carried out as to my conveyance to the inaugural ceremonies," wrote Mr. Cleveland. "A very sensible suggestion is attributed to him, and that is that I ride in his carriage as he did in mine on the 4th of March, 1885."

THE MARCH TO THE CAPITOL.

And so it was. All the ceremonial acts and the other niceties of the day were observed between them with a cheerful alacrity indicative of almost cordial friendship. The scene along the line of march was such as no city but Washington and no street but its broad, well paved Pennsylvania avenue could produce. Public and private stands along the line of march from the capitol to a point beyond the White House had an estimated seating capacity of 60,000 persons, and every one of them was crowded. Profiting by past experience and bearing in mind the discomfort occasioned by the wretched weather of four years ago, nearly all of the stands were made both wind and waterproof, and thus afforded a more pleasant shelter than ever before.

The finishing touches to the decorations were not accomplished until almost the last moment, but they were effective, though not so varied or artistic as those which New York, under the direction of its committee on taste, displayed on the occasion of its Columbian celebration. The preponderance of red, white and blue bunting, unrelieved by other tints, gave an air of sameness to the general effect which might well have been avoided.

They were received by President Harrison in the blue room. Five minutes later the president and his successor reappeared, and entering an open carriage the march of the procession to the capitol was begun. President Harrison wore an overcoat with fur collar and cuffs; Mr. Cleveland's overcoat had a plain velvet collar. Both of course wore silk hats. They rode in President Harrison's carriage, drawn by four bay horses.

THE OATH OF OFFICE

Administered to Cleveland by Chief Justice Fuller and to Stevenson by Vice President Morton.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Capitol hill, as far as the eye could reach from the eastern front of the capitol, was an undulating sea of humanity assembled to witness the administering of the oath of office to the new president by the chief justice of the United States and to hear as many of them as could get within earshot, the inaugural address.

The picturesque and thoroughly republican practice of taking the oath of office and delivering the inaugural address in the open air in the presence of the people was begun by Zachary Taylor in 1849. Previously the inaugural address had been read in the senate chamber.

The proceedings at the capitol followed a prescribed programme issued by the committee of arrangements, as follows: The east doors of the senate wing of the capitol were opened at 10 o'clock a. m. to those who were entitled to admission, and the doors of the senate chamber were opened at 11 o'clock a. m. to those entitled to admission. The president and the president elect entered the senate wing by the bronze doors in the east front, each accompanied by a member of the committee of arrangements. The president went directly to the president's room, and the president elect to the vice president's room, where they remained until they entered the senate chamber. Having been introduced by the committee of arrangements, they occupied seats reserved for them in front of the presiding officer. The committee of arrangements occupied seats on their left.

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.

The vice president elect was accompanied to the capitol by a member of the committee of arrangements and proceeded to the vice president's room, where he remained until he entered the senate chamber, where the oath of office was administered to him by the vice president.

The diplomatic corps assembled in the marble room and proceeded in a body at 11:15 a. m. to the senate chamber, where they occupied seats on the right of the chair. The chief justice, the associate justices and the ex-associate justices of the supreme court also occupied seats on the right of the chair. The supreme court entered the senate chamber a few minutes before the president.

In the Senate Chamber. The heads of the executive departments, the major general of the army commanding, the admiral of the navy and officers of the army and navy occupied seats on the left of the chair.

The governors of states, ex-senators of the United States, judges of the court of claims and of the supreme court of the district, and the commissioners of the district, occupied seats east of the main entrance. The members of the house of representatives entered the senate chamber by the main entrance at 11:30 a. m. and occupied seats on the right of the chair next to the diplomatic corps.

After the organization of the new senate under the call for an extra session was completed by the swearing in of the members elect, among whom was Martin of Kansas, those assembled in the senate chamber proceeded through the rotunda to the platform on the central portion of the capitol in the following order: The marshal of the District of Columbia and marshal of the supreme court, the ex-vice president, the supreme court, the sergeant-at-arms of the senate, the committee of arrangements, the president and the president elect, the vice president and the secretary of the senate, members of the senate, the diplomatic corps, heads of departments.

The major general of the army commanding, the admiral of the navy and the officers of the army and navy, members of the house of representatives and members elect, governors of states, ex-members of the senate and the United States, officers of the senate and officers of the house of representatives.

On reaching the portico the president and president elect took the seats reserved for them, the chief justice on their right and the sergeant-at-arms of the senate on their left. The committee of arrangements occupied seats next to the president and president elect. The ex-vice president and associate justices of the supreme court, the vice president, secretary and members of the senate occupied seats on the right.

The diplomatic corps occupied the seats on the left of the president. Heads of departments, the major general of the army commanding, the admiral of the navy and the officers of the army and navy who by name have received the thanks of congress, governors of states and ex-members of the senate took seats west of the president. The members and members elect of the house occupied seats reserved for them in the rear of the above.

Then came the solemn ceremony of administering the oath of office to Grover Cleveland, which act made him in fact the president of the United States. Amid a silence that was impressive Chief Justice

INJUSTICE AT STOCKTON.

Linkerman & Skeer's Employees Must Go or Deal in the Company Store.

A few days ago mention was made of an order passed by Linkerman & Skeer, operators of the Stockton collieries, prohibiting Hazleton and other merchants from driving into that town to supply the employees of the company with groceries, meat, etc. The notice, however, had little effect on the merchants, who continued to send their agents there to take orders and deliver goods. We are informed that the company have now adopted a more direct and effective means of coercing their employees into dealing in the store, that of serving notice on them that unless they buy their mine supplies, groceries, etc., from the company store they will be obliged to vacate the company's houses and seek employment elsewhere.

Our informant says that one of the men receiving such notice went to the office of the company to inquire the cause thereof, when he was informed that if he desired to remain he would have to buy in the company's store and from the company's butcher. All this in "the land of the free and the home of the brave."—Standard.

Jeffrey Denies a Rumor.

Representative Jeffrey circled among friends in town yesterday. In conversation with a representative of the Tribune he stated he had heard rumors about town that he had failed to show any courtesy or give any attention to the delegation which went to Harrisburg from here last week to protest against the new county bill.

Mr. Jeffrey claimed he has been placed in a false light by some parties in this matter. He says he was appointed on the committee on appropriations by the legislature, and when the delegation arrived at Harrisburg on Tuesday he was busy with legislative business. He left the capital at 3 p. m. that day for Hazleton, to view the hospital there, and could not have been seen by anyone that evening in Harrisburg, as some people allege.

He denied that he was in any manner discourteous to the delegation, and said he would have given them any information they wished if he had not been otherwise engaged. He was very much annoyed at the rumors circulated through town and hoped the people would not believe him guilty of neglect of office when he was fulfilling as faithfully as he could the duties of his office.

Breakers on Fire.

No. 2 breaker at Highland, owned by Markle & Co. caught fire in some unknown manner late Saturday afternoon. The whistle summoned help and the men living in the neighborhood responded quickly. After considerable trouble was expended in quenching the flames, but not before a large part of the machinery of the breaker was damaged, and the carpenters, who were put to work repairing it yesterday, expect to have it all right in a day or two.

The No. 2 breaker at Oakdale, owned by the same company, also had narrow escape from destruction on Thursday night. In some unaccountable way it caught fire, but had not made much headway until it was discovered and after a little hard work extinguished.

Judge Green's Successor.

Governor Pattison on Thursday sent to the senate the nomination of Mason Weidman to be judge of the Schuylkill county court, vice Judge Green, deceased. Shortly after its receipt in the senate in executive session, Senator Keefe, of Schuylkill, objected to the consideration of Mr. Weidman's appointment at that time, and at his request it was laid aside.

The objection to the confirmation of Weidman is based on the allegation that he was appointed through the influence, and that the judgeship should be given to a Republican, inasmuch as the Democrats now have two of their party on the bench in Schuylkill.

Sold by Dr. Schlicher.

That old established cough remedy, Down's Elixir, still more than holds its own in the public estimation, despite sharp and active competition. It is a "home remedy," and in this locality needs no words of praise from us, so well and favorably known as it is.

It is the standard remedy for coughs, colds and all throat troubles, with great numbers of our people, and their continued use and unsolicited recommendation of it speaks volumes in its favor.—Burlington, Vt., Free Press, January 26, 1882.

Died at Danville.

Catherine McGill, a patient in the Danville insane asylum, died at that institution last week. No record of her relatives can be found further than that she was admitted in 1887, having been sent there from the Lauraytown almshouse. If any one belonging to her desires to claim the body they should communicate with poor director Monroe, of Hazleton, at once.

Wanted by the Police.

Manus Dugan, 21 years old, formerly of Freeland, is wanted badly by the coal and iron police. He is the man who shot Joseph Maure at Shepton on Monday. A reward is offered for his arrest.—Sentinel.

The receivers of the Reading system are suspending many car inspectors, section hands and all employees without whose help they can get along. President McLeod had a $50,000 car built for his private use just before the crash, but that probably has nothing to do with the case.

That Freeland is a town which could support a first-class opera house was plainly shown during the past week. For seven nights in succession large audiences have been the rule, and tomorrow evening's play will draw well also. The people deserve better accommodations from the proprietor.

"The Cannon Ball Express."

The attraction at the opera house tomorrow evening will be Robt. Donnelly's latest and most successful comedy drama, "The Cannon Ball Express." Of a recent performance the Philadelphia Times says:

"The Cannon Ball Express," a four act comedy drama, written by Robt. J. Donnelly, a New York journalist, was given its initial presentation yesterday at the Grand opera house before an audience which even crowded the standing room space.

It was enthusiastically received, especially the sensational features, which included the explosion of a bomb and the destruction of a confederate prison, the hero's escape on the "Cannon Ball Express," from which the drama takes its name, and his rescue from a quartz crusher, which is in full operation.

The story is simple yet effective, and shows the scheming of a villainous uncle for a fortune, his ultimate defeat, and his restoration to the rightful heir.

A spice of novelty is thrown around the play by its semi-military character, the opening scene being laid in a Confederate camp, but interest is maintained until the close, when the happy denouement is made. Edwin C. Hayes sustains the leading role, that of Dick Noel, a Union cavalryman, and was very clever in his interpretation.
