Americans Abroad.

Thousands of our fellow countrymen and women will doubtless take a run across the water for a brief vacation this coming summer.

A word to these, our fellow countrymen and women, may not be out of place, lest the ignorant and untraveled populations of Europe get exceedingly erroneous ideas of this Union.

Look at the exquisite pictures, the marvelous sculpture. Listen to the music, contemplate the finely finished land scapes, the lovely parks, and let the beauty and poetry of it all sink into your utilitarian American soul.

Once in awhile you will meet some of your own fellow countrymen with sprangly, bushy beards, outlandish garments and the same rusty, long legged boots they wore when they drove the cows to the swamp pasture—on the whole, looking like a grizzly bear.

Don't pour your wrongs and sorrows into other people's ears. They have enough of their own already.

When some people get to heaven, they will be surprised to find they do not take nearly so high a seat as they expected to.

In Emporia, Kan., the men seem inclined to leave the voting business to women. On the spring registration lists the names of women exceeded those of men by 277.

Perhaps railroad corporations will give some thought to T. V. Powderly's opinion on the Ann Arbor case. Speaking of Judge Ricks' injunction against the boycotters, Powderly says, "Whatever way it may end, it is in direct line with what the labor organizations have been striving for during the past five or six years—namely, the nationalization of railroads."

Count Alexander Sajonkowski, the last scion of a noble house, is a restaurant waiter in New York. People find their level in America—even noblemen—but Sajonkowski had very little common sense.

MINE INSPECTORS.

The Laws Relating to Their Appointment and Duties Should Be Overhauled.

In the Philadelphia Press of Friday last appeared a communication from one of our townsmen, and in his treatment of the subject under discussion the writer makes a number of suggestions that, if acted upon, could not prove otherwise than beneficial to the parties most interested in mining coal.

Your editorial a few days ago on the appointment of a legislative commission to investigate the ventilation of coal mines was quite right as far as it went. It is not an investigation into the ventilation of the mines that is needed, but an entire overhauling and change in the law relating to the duties and appointment of mine inspectors that is wanted.

There are eight mine inspectors in the anthracite region of this state, to inspect some 400 separate mines, which are scattered over an area of over 2,000 square miles; to attend and investigate whenever any serious accidents happen; to make extra calls and investigation when any one makes an individual complaint.

Each mine inspector has thus, on an average, about fifty separate mines under his charge, or say about one for each week in the year. If only one inspection is made in each place. But it must be remembered that most of the mines have very extensive workings, with miles and miles of main gangways, without considering the individual chambers where the coal is cut.

The ventilation machinery and circulation of air in the main entries is generally good and fully up to the requirements of the law, but the individual distribution at the face of each mine's working place is often miserable and defective.

The mine inspector orders the mine foreman or superintendent to do this or do that for the safety and health of the miners. Their answer is generally favorable, with a promise to attend to it. If it suits the management to attend to it they will do so, if not, it is left alone.

All the different mine inspection districts in the anthracite and bituminous coal fields ought to be unified and brought together under one head and management. The inspector-in-chief ought to be an eminent geologist and mining engineer.

The mine inspector, instead of being compelled to apply to the court for power to compel obedience to his orders, should have power to suspend the certificate or license of the mine foreman and superintendent, if necessary, to compel obedience.

The legislature would amend the mine law in some manner as previously indicated they would confer a far greater favor and benefit the miner far more than any commission can or will do.

Observe Memorial Day. The following orders have been issued from the Headquarters Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic:

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 1, 1893. Comrades—Another year has passed and we are again reminded that the time is approaching when we make our annual visitation to the habitations of the dead.

Let us show by our zeal in the performance of this sacred duty, that we believe it is well for the country to thus honor the memory of her defenders, and in this manner teach an object lesson of patriotism which will never be forgotten.

In accordance with the established custom posts will arrange for attending divine service, Sunday, May 28. Special efforts should also be made to have ministers of the different denominations address their respective congregations on the duty of the citizen to the nation.

Committees of the different posts throughout the department should arrange to visit the public schools prior to May 30, and call the attention of the children, by short addresses, to the lessons taught by the ceremonies of that day.

About eighteen years ago, G. G. Ruggles, then a well-known resident of Wilkes-Barre, married Miss Clara Crook, a young lady of a highly respected family, living at Vernon, Wyoming county.

Last month the deserted wife by mere chance happened to hear that her husband was living. Detective Peter Baur, of Wilkes-Barre, was put on the case, and he discovered the man at Bolton, a small town two miles from Pottsville, where he owns a large general store and is quite well-to-do.
