ANOTHER SLOPE FLOODED

Colliery at Beaver Brook Drown Out by a Small Creek of Water.

No. 11 slope at Beaver Brook, which is known as the wet slope since its in-fancy, was the scene of a mighty torrent of water a few nights ago, and but for the fact that it was the time when all workmen were at home, a sorrowful tale of woe would be left to be divulged. For some time past different parts of the mine gave threatenings of a fall, but by the good support and careful manage-ment of the officials in charge it was thought that it would be avoided.

Near morning on Saturday, after two miners named Clemens and Boyle had just passed through the gangway and up the traveling way to the surface when the heavy cave occurred in one of the worked out breasts, taking down with it a large body of water from an over running sulphur creek, and which pour-ed down continually until both pumps were covered.

Pumpman John McFadden had a narthrough the ga: gway after the cave. The only remedy left was to make for the slope, which was no easy task in that gloomy location, and besides the water was rising minutely at a terrible

He, however, succeded in making his way up the slope, and had it not been for close acquaintance with the sur-roundings, he would have been left to suffer the horrors of the rapidly gaining

Another Authentic Portrait of Columbus.
An alleged discovery at Naples of a beautiful authentic portrait by Titian of Christopher Columbus has caused a great sensation there. Our correspondent writes: The full length life size portrait was shown to me by Signor Cannavina, the antiquarian, who purchased it from Count Aldobrandi at Bologna. The whole, with the exception of the face
and hands, had been coarsely painted over. This extraneous coat being removed, the figure in the uniform of a Spanish admiral was revealed.

The pose and coloring are very quiet,
the face is that of a man with hair just turning gray; the eyesare blue, thoughtful
and even sad; the mouth is firmly cut,
and he wears a pointed, short blond beard
and mustache. On the tapering fingers are three massive rives. The envires.

Surprised While Stealing a Ride.

Aman named Edward Fuller of Philadelphia tried to steal a ride on a Pennsylvania railroad passenger train from the Broad street station, intending to get off at a suburban station. Instead of getting on a local train he boarded the Cincinnati and St. Louis express, getting between the tender and baggage car. He could not jump off and was sitting on the platform when the locomotive scooped up water from the tank between the rails. As the tank in the tender filled up it overflowed and almost drowned Fuller, who to escape opened the baggage car door and entered the car. The huge volume of water poured in after him and deluged the car, destroying the contents of a number of trunks. Fuller was arrested when the train reached Harrisburg and is now in jail for malicious mischief.—Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

Effect of a Popular Song.

A shining light of the variety stage has really come to play a prominent part in the social life of New York city. Some time since a vaudeville songstress named Lottie Gilson caught the fancy of the metropolis with a song entitled "Daddy Won't Buy Me a Bowwow." The tuneful ditty is now heard in every drawing room and at every musicale in New York. The refrain has become a sort of catchword and points half the bits of repartee exchanged in the resorts and rendezvous of fashionable folk. A gloomy look or a somber air invariably brings forth the explanation that its cause is due to the circumstance that "daddy won't buy me a bowwow."—Exchange.

Ready For the Eclipse.

The total eclipse of the sun, to occur in April, will, it is generally supposed, be one of the longest in duration of the present century. Extensive preparations are being made all over the world for its observation. One English party goes to Bathurst, Africa, and one to Pernambuco, Brazil; the Bureau des Longitudes, Paris sends an expedition to Africa.
