ARISTOCRATIC AIRS.
Caste Distinctions Established Among People Who Travel.

"It is rather tiresome," said a Wagner parlor car conductor to a New York Herald man, "the airs people put on in a parlor car. The moment they get seated they begin to behave like kings and queens and to order people around as if they had been using to having servants at their beck and call all their lives. If you want to see a rapid change from a plain American citizen to a haughty aristocrat just watch the passengers troop out of the waiting-rooms to the trains. You can tell a mile off which of them have seats in the parlor car. Their noses hang high in the air and they get around with a sort of supercilious strut. The ordinary day coach passengers as they go alongside of a Wagner car, from the windows of which the haughty faces are peering, assume a sort of hang-dog look, as if they belonged to an inferior race. They sneak into their humble coaches and make themselves feel as small as possible. Meanwhile the parlor car people, bulging out with their self-importance, have been using to having hats up in the car and donned little skull caps. Then they promenade up and down the platform, talking in a loud tone of voice to each other in a way never adopted by the plain passengers and glaring fiercely at everyone who hasn't a place in the parlor car. When the car starts they swing themselves aboard with an air that makes folks who don't know them think they own the road. When a parlor car passenger sees a friend in an ordinary coach he pretends not to. If the ordinary coach man foists his presence on him he gets superciliously treated. The relations of these two are never the same again. The sense of equality has been lost and the parlor car man regards the other forever afterward as a lower class citizen. It's the most pronounced case of the caste feeling. Parlor cars divide the people into nobility and plebeians just as much as titles of nobility—in the minds of the occupants of the parlor cars."

IN THE WOODS.

Massachusetts' First Governor Loses Himself on His Own Farm.
Local anecdotes enliven history and illustrate it, but few authentic ones survive. An old record of the early sixteen-thirties—when Boston itself was a "howling wilderness"—tells us how the first governor of Massachusetts lost himself one night on his own farm, or where the city of Somerville now stands.

"The governor, being at his farmhouse in Mistick, walked out after supper, and took a piece in his hand, supposing he might see a wolf (for they came daily about the house, and killed swine and calves, etc.), and being about half a mile off, it grew suddenly dark, so as, in coming home, he mistook his path, and went till he came to a little house of Sagamore John, which stood empty.

"There he stayed, and having a piece of match in his pocket—for he always carried about him match and a compass, and in summer time snake-weed—he made a good fire near the house, and lay down upon some old mats which he found there, and so spent the night, sometimes walking by the fire, sometimes singing psalms, and sometimes getting wood, but could not sleep.

"It was, through God's mercy, a warm night; but a little before day it began to rain, and having no cloak, he made shift by a long pole to climb up into the house.

"In the morning there came thither an Indian squaw, but, perceiving her before she had opened the door, he barred her out; yet she stayed there a great while essaying to get in, and at last she went away and he returned safe home, his servants having been much perplexed for him, and having walked about and shot off pieces and hallooed in the night; but he heard them not."

Wilson Andrews, of Penn Haven, and a Hungarian were killed on Thursday on the Lehigh Valley Railroad by being struck with a passenger train. Andrews was 37 years of age, leaves a wife and two children and was a member of Freeland Council of the Junior American Mechanics.

PICKED UP BY THE WAY.

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD IN THE TOWN AND VICINITY.

Matters of a Local Nature Commented Upon and Placed Before the Readers of the "Tribune" in Large Letters—Some Paragraphs May Interest You.

I met one of the property holders of that section of Pine street upon which the viewers passed judgement last week, and he was very sarcastic in his remarks about the treatment the residents of that portion of town are getting. "Do you know," he said as he sat upon an oil barrel at Koons' store, "we have been trying for two years to have that street opened and it seems every time we try we're getting further away from it. We had the viewers, who were appointed by the court a short time ago, at work again on Tuesday, but none of the people interested appear to be satisfied with their decision. I don't blame the viewers, mind, because they were in a very unpleasant position and probably done the best they could under the circumstances. However, I do say that the assessment put on the property holders is too high and should be cut down one-half at least."

"Now, you see it's this way," he continued. "It is enough for us people to buy the lots and sidewalks without being compelled to buy the street, and this is where the kick comes in. My part of the assessment as levied by the viewers would amount to $53.63, and there are about ten others who would have to pay the same sum. After the street would be opened the whole public could use it, yet an attempt will be made to make a few of us pay for what will benefit the whole town. I don't object to paying about $25, nor does my neighbors, but to buy about 500 feet of a street would be rather generous on our part and I am decidedly against being so charitable."

"How about the men who are trying to sell—are they satisfied?"

"No," he replied, "they are more displeased than the residents, and I understand one of them is going to appeal from the decision of the viewers when the matter comes up in court, and if he does he will likely upset the whole business again. But in case he fails and the matter is approved by the court, as decided upon by the viewers, then all we can do is to petition the council for a reduction in the assessment and I believe it will be their duty to at least give it their careful consideration, as they have already assisted in making public improvements that were not any more deserving than the opening of this street."

With this my friend got up off the barrel and left me fully satisfied that there was at least one man in Freeland who sympathized with the residents who are without a street.

No one was better pleased than myself upon reading Mr. McHugh's communication in Thursday's TRIBUNE. I feared that my reference on August 10 to the Foster school report was to pass unnoticed, and had about concluded to mention the subject again, but since Mr. McHugh has volunteered a very satisfactory explanation no further discussion of the report is necessary. The secretary's letter, however, bristles with uncalled for sarcasm and contains misrepresentations of my statement, and to the latter I propose devoting some space. The letter I will divide into three parts.

The first is the acknowledgment of an error in the published report, and the fact that there is such an error, even though it be only a typographical error, is sufficient proof that my article on the 10th inst. was based upon substantial information. The citizen of Foster who called my attention to it held in his hand a copy of the Progress of July 28. The report, as it appeared therein, was incorrect, and, to repeat the words I wrote then, I stated, "there seems to be a mistake somewhere"—because I thought the error might have been made by the auditors or printers in arranging the report and so mentioned in my article. Mr. McHugh acknowledges that mistake, and it is one which the board or its officers are certainly not responsible, and for which no one has yet accused them. Therefore, his indignant denial of something with which the members are not charged amounts to nothing.

In the second part into which I have taken the liberty to divide his letter is the portion relating to the other fellow—my informant. I thank the Foster citizen for giving me the news I made public, but I am not going to fight any battles for him upon this or other matters which he only casually referred to in our conversation. I did not wait to hear what they were, consequently they do not give me any concern. I presume the local papers will grant him space to air his grievances, and he ought not refuse Mr. McHugh's invitation to make them public, especially when he is guaranteed they will be made "as clear as the unclouded sun at noonday."

The third and last part of the letter is of very deep interest to me. The secretary, whether deliberately or unintentionally I do not know, has misrepresented what I have published. When he says it was stated in my article that the report shows a shortage of $270 he makes a charge which I consider my duty to refute. I understand my position and responsibility as a writer for newspapers too well to make the assertion that Treasurer Hanlon or any other official's account shows a shortage unless I have the necessary proof to substantiate such a statement.

But I have said there seemed to be a mistake in the treasurer's account as shown to me in a Freeland paper dated the latter part of July, and I have proof for that assertion in the secretary's own letter. A mistake was made, not of $270 as I formerly thought, but one of $10,270. I did not know then who was at fault and therefore charged no one with the error. I pointed out the mistake without fear or favor, just as I would have done if it was in the report of any other public body.

There was no reference or intimation of "shortage" or "suspicion" of any officer or member of the board. Mr. McHugh himself introduced these words. Neither was there any perversion of facts and figures, nor was there anything that deserved to be termed "damnable" in my article. It was a plain announcement that the report seemed to contain a mistake, and all the undignified and ill-tempered invectives that may be hurled in this direction will not alter that self-evident truth.

The integrity or honesty of any director has not been questioned, and the secretary's challenge to Saunterer to prove an assertion which has not been made is on par with his denial of a charge of which the board or its members were not accused. Barring the explanation, which shows that the error was caused by the insertion of $1,148.75 instead of $11,148.75 for teachers' salaries, the letter served no purpose but to make public the fact that its writer grasped conclusions not thought of or referred to in any respect by the SAUNTERER.

OHIO CHEMICAL CO., -GENTLEMEN-—Some time ago I sent for 400 worth of your Tablets for Tobacco Habit. I received them all right and, although I was both a heavy smoker and chewer, they did the work in less than three days. I am cured. Truly yours, MATHEW JOHNSON, P. O. Box 46, PITTSBURGH, PA.
The OHIO CHEMICAL CO. -GENTLEMEN—It gives me pleasure to speak a word of praise for your Tablets. My son was strongly addicted to the use of liquor, and through a friend, I was led to try your Tablets. He was a heavy and constant drinker, but after using your Tablets but three days he quit drinking, and will not touch liquor of any kind. I have written four months before writing you, in order to know the cure was permanent. Truly yours, MRS. HELEN MORRISON, CINCINNATI, OHIO.
The OHIO CHEMICAL CO. -GENTLEMEN—Your Tablets have performed a miracle in my case. I have used morphine, hypodermically, for seven years, and have been cured by the use of two packages of your Tablets, and without any effort on my part. W. L. LOGGAY.
