AFTER THE STRIKE.

Everything Moving Again and Peace Prevails Along the Line.

Trains of all kinds are moving with their accustomed regularity on the Lehigh Valley, and the familiar faces of the old employees are to be seen again in their usual places. The terms of settlement, which gave dissatisfaction when announced, are now accepted as the best that could be made by the leaders.

To prolong the trouble because the employees could not go back in a body would be unwise on the part of the labor chiefs, and would undoubtedly take from the men much of the public's sympathy. So far the company has shown that it intends to live up to that portion of the agreement which says old employees shall have the preference when men are hired, and until that is violated there will be no grounds to object.

The insinuations thrown out by some newspapers which professed to sympathize with the men, that the leaders had betrayed their trust for money, are not worthy of notice. That the strike was managed and conducted with credit to the men and their orders, and settled upon the best terms that would likely be presented, are facts that disapprove the silly mutterings of editors who feel aggrieved because they were not called upon to assist in putting an end to it.

In conversation with members of the trainmen's brotherhood we learned that their opinion of the people who are proclaiming the men were defeated is anything but pleasant, and they are justly regarded with suspicion. The men themselves know what they have gained, but if any considerable portion of them could be discouraged and made disgraced with their leaders, as some newspapers are trying to do now, the brotherhoods would soon die out on the Lehigh Valley and the company would have full sway again.

The victory was the most complete won by strikers in recent years, and within three months the full extent of the terms of settlement, all of which are not known to the public, will prove this assertion, providing the employees stick to their orders and take no notice of disgruntled newspapers.

The brotherhoods have chiefs that any organizations could be proud of, and their records will not suffer by their acceptance of the best terms that could be had to settle the strike. The Philadelphia papers, which dealt with the men in their news and editorial columns most unjustly, had to acknowledge it ended in the employees' favor in their financial reports, as the following from the Press shows:

The settlement is a victory for the men and a decisive blow to the Wilbur management. It has been the general opinion on the street that the strike was a foolish piece of business on the part both of the company and the employees. The differences on the face of affairs, were trivial and should have been arranged without subjecting the men, the company, or the public to the expense and the inconvenience of which they have been put. The story having been taken, however, and the expense having been undergone, it was supposed that the company's officials would stand firm, but the men have apparently won a greater victory than any railroad employees in this country since 1887, and the company has won practically nothing.

PICKED UP BY THE WAY.

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD IN THE TOWN AND VICINITY.

Matters of a Local Nature Written up and Placed Before the Readers of the "Tribune" by the Saunterer—Something Here May Interest You.

I did not have an opportunity of interviewing many people on the electric light company's bid to light the streets, but the few to whom I did speak expressed themselves as favorable to its acceptance. One gentleman in particular told me that he heard others discussing it, and all considered it a reasonable price, $75 per year for a 2,000 candle-power light until 12 p. m. every night for the first twenty and $70 for each additional light. He said he had heard of only one person who appeared to oppose it, and that party took his objections from the proposition made five years ago by the Freeland Gas Company. That company offered to furnish electric light, 1,200 candle-power, at $60 per year. The unreliability of the company and its failure to specify for how long and how many nights each month the light would be furnished would make comparisons between it and the offer now before the council unjust.

I have secured a few figures about electric lighting from a copy of the "Review of Reviews," which is considered a very good authority. In an article on the subject it gives returns from 23 cities and towns that operate their own plants. The average price per arc light is $86.64, as against $106.01 in 29 cities and towns that are lighted by private corporations. This shows that where the light is owned and properly managed by the town it can be done cheaper than by the other method, but even then it is considerably above the figures asked by the Freeland company. For unknown reasons municipal control of light is not so successful as it should; and it is out of the question entirely to think of yet for Freeland, but I will mention two instances for information to any who may be interested in the matter.

Lansford owned and ran its own plant for some time, found it unprofitable, sold out to the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company and now pays $100 per year for each light. On the other side, Weatherly, also owning its plant, has about 30 lights burning and the estimated cost is $60 per year, the lowest rate, it is said, in the state. Now for a few places known to us all which are lighted by private parties. The figures apply to the cost per year. Allentown has 110 lights and pays $100 per light; South Bethlehem, 55 lights burning until midnight, $81.82 per light; Mauch Chunk, 30 lights burning all night and every dark night, $120 per year, and Hazleton, about 90 lights all night, $100 per light.

Should the council decide to accept the offer presented to them last Monday evening, Freeland it seems from the above figures, would get a light of more candle-power at a cheaper rate than the average paid by other towns. It may require about thirty lamps to light the borough, and taking that number as a rough estimate, the cost would be as follows: Twenty lights at $75, $1,500, and ten at $70, $700; total, $2,200; average price per light, $73.33. When the Points and Birvanton are annexed, if they ever are, from fifteen to eighteen additional lights will have to be furnished, thereby lowering the average price still further. However, whether they be annexed or not is a matter of no importance now and concerns no one but themselves.

In the company's proposition there is at least one feature that may meet with some opposition. This is the time of shutting off the light, 12 p. m. Paradoxical as it may seem, it is nevertheless true, that between 12 p. m. and 1 a. m. there are more persons on Freeland's streets than during the hour previous. I have no solution to offer for the cause of people being more numerous than that between 11 and 12 o'clock, but a tour through town any time after midnight reveals many queer things. A light that would burn until daybreak would not be a minute too long, and 2 a. m. should be the very earliest to shut it off. However, if the proposition in the main is regarded favorably by the council and taxpayers, the hour of extinguishing the light ought to be adjusted without difficulty.

The inhumanity of some people is brought to the surface in strange ways at times, and, to my thinking, a brutal illustration of cold-heartedness occurred here a short while ago. On Thanksgiving Day several Huns quarreled at the Points, with the result that one was carried to the hospital with a fractured skull and another was arrested and placed in Freeland lockup. The privilege of placing prisoners in the lockup here is granted to township constables and other officers, but I think the borough ought to insist that persons confined there are properly treated. They are fed and attended to if arrested by the police of the borough, and the same should be compulsory on the part of others.

The Hun I mentioned was taken to the lockup shortly after noon on Thursday, and left there without a morsel of food or any attention given to his injuries, for he was also battered and bruised, until about 9 or 10 o'clock on Saturday, about forty-five hours. A case of that kind is a disgrace to the officer who arrested him, and a repetition of it should not be tolerated here. Let the prisoner be even a murderer, it is not just to treat him so inhumanly. It is scarcely necessary to state it was not an ordinary officer or constable who was guilty of this criminal neglect; it was one of these presumptuous people known as the coal and iron police, who appear to hold their positions solely because they are heartless and cruel to those who fall into their clutches.

The intelligence of a good, well-bred dog is well-known, and that something more than instinct guides their actions is beyond doubt. Among the numerous hunters of this locality is J. P. McDonald, and he recently received a fine hound from a Wilkes-Barre friend. The dog arrived here by express, safely boxed up, and was joyfully welcomed by his new master, who intended to give him a trial soon. Joe tied him securely in the stable, fed him about 3 o'clock, and after supper went out to see how he liked his new home. You can imagine the look of astonishment that swept over J. P.'s countenance when he found the hooks, chain, dog, etc., were gone. Not a trace of the animal could be found, and the hunter went to bed that night a most unhappy man.

Now here is where the dog's intelligence comes in. Early the next morning Mr. McDonald received a telegram from the former owner, stating that the dog was in Wilkes-Barre, and asking whether it escaped from Freeland or from the express company while en route. That dog, evidently, was not satisfied with the appearance of the Points, or else he was a Republican and disliked to reside in the Democratic stronghold of Foster. But whatever were his objections, he did not stay to present them, but packed up and traveled from here to Wilkes-Barre, over roads he had never previously seen, and arrived at his former proprietor's door during the night. How he managed to cover those thirty miles so quickly without a pilot is a mystery. SAUNTERER.

D. 1887, hereby gives notice that he will attend to the duties of his appointment at the office of John D. WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, December 8, 1893. Secretary Carlisle has not completed his annual report and does not expect to finish it before next week. It will probably be one of the longest and most comprehensive papers of its kind ever submitted to congress, owing to the bad condition in which the Republicans left the finances of the country. The absence of this report, although not the only reason, was one the principal reasons for the delay in getting the new tariff bill before the house. It would have been sufficient of itself, as it is necessary for that report to be in the hands of members before they take up the tariff.

Chairman Wilson's present intention is to report the tariff bill to the house next Wednesday, and he hopes to make public his twin measure, the internal revenue bill, at about the same time. The last named bill would have been ready before this had not the revised estimates of the officials of the treasury department shown that the deficiency in revenue caused by the reductions in duties and an extension of the free list made by the new tariff bill would be in the neighborhood of $60,000,000, which was some $25,000,000 more than had been estimated by members of the ways and means committee. This, of course, necessitated a revision of the internal revenue bill, which is to be made to supply the deficiency caused by the tariff bill.

As there is no estimate for the expenses of the bureau of American republics in the figures submitted by Secretary Gresham, for the next fiscal year, it is safe to say that there will soon be no bureau of American republics. It was a sort of side attachment to the beautiful paper—Blaine reciprocity programme. Its cost has been annually about $30,000, principally for salaries, and the benefit it has been to the country has been undecipherable. Secretary Morton regards the money spent at the forty-eight agricultural experimental stations—one in each state and territory—as largely wasted, and having recommended in his annual report that they be abolished he left this $720,000, which it would require to run them, out of his estimates for next year.

Governor-elect O'Ferrall, of Virginia, will retain his seat in the house until the Christmas recess, as his resignation will not take effect until the 28th inst. He will be inaugurated governor on the first day of January and will, contrary to custom, deliver an inaugural address, something that has been done by only one other governor of that state since the war. He has been warmly congratulated by his colleagues with whom he is deservedly popular.

Congress got down to work very smoothly. The regular business in the house is the Oats' bankruptcy bill which will be disposed of late this week or early in the coming week. The senate has listened to some stump speeches on the Hawaii question, and taken up its routine work in its usually leisurely manner. A concurrent resolution was unanimously adopted by congress accepting the bronze statue of General James Shields, which was unveiled by a daughter of General Shields, in the statutory hall of the capitol, Wednesday afternoon, and thanking Illinois for having presented the statue. The ceremonies attending the unveiling were imposing and interesting and were participated in by a large number of prominent people, including Governor Altgeld, whose oration in honor of the "warrior, jurist and statesman" made a splendid impression upon those who heard it.
