WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, February 2, 1894. President Cleveland was one of the first, outside of his congressional col-leagues, to extend congratulations to leagues, to extend congratuations re-Chairman Wilson on the success of his tariff fight in the house. The congratu-lations were telephoned from the White House to the capitol. Mr. Wilson is not a man of robust health at best, and the continuous and arduous labor which he performed since becoming chairman of the ways and means committee has al-most completely broken him down. He has earned a rest and he will probably leave Washington to spend several weeks in some quiet place. Other Democrats at times allowed the noise of the op-position to raise doubts of the passage of the bill, but Mr. Wilson has been calmly confident from the day the bill was reported from the committee that it would pass without being materially changed. The result shows that his confidence was built upon a firm foundation-the belief that men elected to congress on a tariff reform issue would not allow them-selves to be stampeded by a manufac-tured sentiment against tariff reform.

Representative Dingley, of Maine, was the only Republican who succeeded in getting an amendment to the tariff bill adopted. He moved that the bond period provided in the whiskey clause of the internal revenue section of the bill should be three years, as at present, instead of eight years, as reported from the committee, and the house voted with Democratic opposition to the income tax amendment, which at one time seemed strong enough to endanger the whole bill, began to grow less and less early in the week and a day or two before the vote was taken had grown so insignificant that it was no longer con-sidered a factor in the fight. If the Democratic senators will do as well as the Democrats in the house have done tariff reform will soon be here, but inns do not point to speedy action

The debate on the Tucker bill for the repeal of the Federal election laws will close in the senate next Tuesday and the bill will be passed, notwithstanding the silly stories which have been widely circulated attributing indifference on the part of Democratic senators towards the bill. Not one word has been said by a Democrat to indicate that a single Demo

Democrat to indicate that a single Democratic senator will vote against the bill or remain away to keep from voting upon it. Neither is there any truth in the statement that Mr. Cleveland has expressed opposition to the bill.

Strange to say no Democrat has applied, so far as known, for the position of the few positions in the diplomatic service that carries a salary as high as $17,500. Whether this is because no Democrat hankers after a residence in the land of the czar, or that the opinion is general that the warm personal friendship which President Cleveland is known to feel towards the present minister—Hon. Andrew D. White, expresident of Cornell university—will prevent his removal, is a question.

Secretary Carlisle accepted bids yesterday for the $50,000,000 of bonds, in accordance with the official announcement recently made, notwithstanding the attempt of the Knights of Labor to prevent the issue by obtaining an injunction from the courts on account of the supposed illegality of their issue. There is some talk in favor of the Bailey

Senator Sherman strongly favors Secretary Carlisle's action, but other Republicans are trying to make trouble, hoping to gain some partisan advantage.

NEED OF THE POET.

NEED OF THE POET.

The Laws of the Mind Make Him an Important Pactor.

It is impossible for men to live in the world without poetry of some sort or other. If they cannot get the best they will get some substitute for it, and thus seem to verify Saint Augustine's slur that it is wine of devils, says James Russell Lowell in Century. The mind bound down too closely to what is practical either becomes inert, or revenges itself by rushing into the savage wilderness of "isms." The insincerity of our civilization has disgusted some persons so much that they have sought refuge in Indian wigwams and found refreshment in taking a scalp now and then. Nature insists above all things upon balance. She contrives to maintain a harmony between the material and spiritual, nor allows the cerebrum an expansion at the cost of the cerebellum. If the character, for example, run on one side into religious enthusiusm, it is not unlikely to develop on the other a comercipoise of worldly prudence. Thus the Shaker and the Moravian are noted for thrift, and mystics are not always the worst managers. Through all the Shaker and the Moravina are noted for thrift, and mystics are not always the worst managers. Through all changes of condition and experience man continues to be a citizen of the world of idea as well as the world of fact, and the tax gatherers of both are punctual.

fact, and the tax gatherers of both are punctual.

There is as much poetry as ever in the world if we only knew how to find it out, and as much imagination, perhaps, only that it takes a more prosaic direction. Every man who meets with misfortune, who is stripped of material prosperity, finds that he has a little outlying mountain farm of imagination, which did not appear in the schedule of his effects, on which his spirit is able to keep itself alive, though he never thought of it while he was fortunate. Job turnsout to be a great poet as soon as his flocks and herds are taken away from him.

TENANTED BY WILD HOGS.

A Large Alabama Tract Where No Human Being Dwells.

In the northern part of Limestone county, Ala., is a tract of land consisting of more than one thousand acres, which is not on the map of the state, nor can it be found in the register's office of that county. No ne claims it and no taxes have ever been paid on it. It is a vast wilderness, inhabited by snakes, deer and razorback hogs. It is a free hunting ground, and thousands of these hogs are killed every year, more for sport than for anything else. The hogs are wild and cannot be domesticated. Their yield is said to be enormous. Tom Booth, of Pulaski, Tenn., secured a male and female and did all in his power to tame them, but failed. He kept them a year, and at the end of that time they were as wild as at first. The more he fed them the thinner they became. Within the year they consumed four hundred bushels of corn and were as lean as church mice. During that time the sound had the summer to have a summer of these nor get them fat enough to make even song grease. Finally he gave them to a negro, who now considers himself under no obligations to Mr. Booth.

The flesh of these hogs resembles horseflesh. It is as tough as a consisting grease enough to fry a skillet of batter cakes. They go through a garden like a shovel plow, and no vegetable estapes them. They can crowd through a crack that would hardly admit a gmouse, and their sharp noses act as levers for garden gates. The Tennessens make great fun of Alabama's razorback hogs.

THE VANISHING MOOSE.

Departure of New York's Game for Parts Unknown.

A deer, when started by a hunter or friven by hounds, usually returns in a few days to the same hill or mountain-side where he was first found; but a moose, says Madison Grant in the Century, when once thoroughly alarmed, will start on a long, swinging walk, and, taking with him his entire family, leave for good. It is no of the greatest difficulties—and there are many—in still-hunting this animal, to avoid getting him under way, for then the hunter may as well break camp and try other fields, since not a moose will be found within miles. They seen a moccasin track or the smoke of a fire at an incredible distance. A fresh trail may be found one day and arrangements made to follow it and the hunters find in the morning is a trail six or eight hours old leading for parts unknown in an almost perfectly straight line. The moose is at that moment, perhaps, twenty miles off and still going.

Although moose cannot be driven to the man that makes a man feel like kicking himself, it is to be swindled when he is quietly and secretly plotting that man feel like kicking himself, it is to be swindled when he is quietly and secretly plotting to get the best of a bargain by some illegitimate means. And through fear of being ridiculed by his friends, it is seldom the vanquished will seek sympathy or redress by crying out in public of his loss. Such, however, was not the case of a German who resides at Jeddo. This gentleman had been in Freeland and was on his way when it is gentleman had been in Freeland and was on his way when it is gentleman had been in Freeland and was on his w moment, perhaps, twenty miles off and still going.

Although moose cannot be driven to water by hounds like a deer, but will turn savagely to bay, still they will not remain in a locality where dogs are running; so that when the white hunters became numerous in the North woods, and especially when they intro-duced hounding; the moose simply left the country and passed either east-ward to Maine or northward to ward to Maine or northward to Canada.

It is a well-authenticated but little-known fact that they practically left in one season. They were numerous in the Adirondacks, especially in Brown's tract—a large district in what is now the southwestern part of the wilderness—until the period between 1851 and 1855 (probably near the latter year), when they suddenly disappeared Before this several had been killed yearly. Scattered ones were shot later, but 1855 marked their exit from the annals of New York game. Years later, four or five were brought back to Saranae, but would not stay.

back to Saranae, but would not stay.

The Roman Consul.

The most honorable office in the Roman republic was that of consul.

There were always two elected every year, one each from the patricians and plebeians. The consul must be at least forty-three years old and must have held the office of quasstor, nedile practor. The consuls were the heads of the republic, discharging all public functions, such as receiving ambassadors or assembling the senate. Their insignia were those of a king except a crown. They were always attended each by twelve lictors or servants, bearing the boxes or bundles of rods with an ax in the center. The lie-tors, however, proceeded only one at a time, the lictors of the other following rols with an ax in the center. The lie-tors, however, proceeded only one at a time, the lictors of the other following him. The year was named after them, and any laws passed at their recom-mendation also went by their names. They commanded the armies of the re-public, and when both were with the same army they commanded on alter-nate days. Under the emperors the of-fice became an empty honor, though surrounded with much greater state.

pinnoforte. The volume of the insering tone will depend upon atmospheric conditions, the quality and color of the persuading tone and the sensitiveness of the responding material. There is a familiar anecdote told of a famous tenor, who by singing the tone that was consonant with that of a wine-glass, could make the glass shiver so violently that it would fall to pieces. It is because of the tonal sympathy that the cause of a harsh, rattling tone that may suddenly appear in a piano-turn of the most of the that the cause of a harm, factors, that may suddenly appear in a pianoforte is detected with difficulty. Though it may appear to be in the instrument, it is often far away and may come from a loose globe or pendant on a chandelier. Even a key in the door has been known to be the guilty cause.

The German has a relative in Freeland who is a saloon-keeper, and as the collileries at Jeddo were working very poorly he came to Freeland to spend a day with his friend. He had not been long in the saloon when a gent from Drifton, but who has since removed from that place, came in, had a few drinks with the German and later both were seated at a table enjoying a social man and later both were seated at a table enjoying a social chat. The Driftonian represented himself to the German as assistant mine foreman and driver boss at No. 1 Drifton and his power to hire or discharge men was the most important part of his position. He laid particular stress on this part of his duties and it was not long until the German began to play for a job.

The easy work, large pay and numerous advantages of working in Drifton were contrasted with that of other towns by the pretended foreman, and everything was put before the poor deluded German inglowing terms. At last he asked for work and it was given him upon conditions that he paid $5 for the job. Not having that amount of money a compromise was effected by which the assumed driver boss accepted $2 and a gallon of accepted $2 and a gallon of whiskey, and shortly after they parted to meet at the same place three days later when the man from Jeddo would be "put on." As the foreman "put on." As the foreman failed to show up since and the German walked five times from Jeddo to Freeland, he determined to stand it no longer and mate days. Under the emperors the office became an empty honor, though surrounded with much greater state.

A stringed instrument suspended in a favorable position near a pianoforte will sound when tones corresponding to the open strings are produced on the pianoforte. The volume of the answering tone will depend upon atmospheric terms of the did, those gentlemen could guess the first time who imposed upon the who imposed upon than. SAUNTERER. the German.
