FREELAND, PA., APRIL 2, 1894.

No Time for Chicken-Hearted Fakirs.

The opinion of Democrats on the conduct of their representatives in congress who have tried to build barriers to oppose the march of tariff reform may be gathered from the way in which Mr. Belthoover's case has been handled in the York, Adams and Cumberland district. There is no longer any room in the Democratic organization for those temporizing statesmen who are loud for tariff reform everywhere else except in their own particular localities. What ever demoralization exists in the Democratic ranks may fairly be attributed not to any sneaking preference for protection, but to sheer disgust at the failure of the party to redeem its promises.—Philadelphia Record.

The remarks of the Record are both timely and true, and if Democratic voters are given control of the congressional convention in this district Luzerne's "Belthoover" will not succeed himself. Hines made a record as a jumping-jack on the tariff bill, and his clamoring for protection to coal disgusted the men who sent him to congress. Neither will his baby act in refusing to vote when the bill first came before the house be forgotten. He thought by holding aloof and assisting to prevent a quorum he could compel the president to give him the selection of the internal revenue collector and he would rather sacrifice the principles of the party than submit. Hines is one of the men who aided at every step those who were opposed to redeeming Democracy's pledges, and to give him a renomination would be putting a premium upon party traitors. We want no more men of the Belthoover or Hines stamp.

The Fourth Never Considered.

It is strange that in the distribution of offices that the fourth representative district of this county is never considered. It was always regarded as the Democratic stronghold, but for all that the Democrats of the district have never yet been honored by giving any of its members a political position. In one or two instances a Democrat from the lower end has been appointed to a position in the Wilkes-Barre courthouse, but even in these cases the appointee was a relative or a close personal friend of the person in whose power it was to make the appointment, but in no case was the appointment given to the person who was backed by the people of the district. No person seems to care anything about the fourth district until election time. The voters are then patted on the back and praised, but when the election is over they get the dump if anything is to be given out.—Plain Speaker.

The Tribune has been teaching the above to its readers for the past two years, and we think the Democrats of this locality have agreed with us in the matter. The responsibility for this condition of affairs rests with the Democratic voters themselves, in allowing the party organization in the county to remain under the rule of a Mutual Admiration Society, with headquarters at the county seat. When this little clique of political wirepullers is deprived of the power of dictating nominations and patronage the fourth district may get its share. As it is, the district is now out of the Democratic column, and there are poor prospects of getting it back unless a change is made in the county leaders.

Rules for Fishermen.

Open season for fishing in the state of Pennsylvania: Speckled and lake trout, April 15 to July 15; black bass, pike and pickerel, June 1 to January 1; German carp, September 1 to May 1. The penalties for violation are from $5 to $50. No person shall cast, draw, fasten or otherwise make use of any seine, drift-net, fyke-net or nets of any other description, or use any other appliance for the catching of fish, except rod, hook and line, in any rivers, streams or waters of this state. The penalty for violating this provision is $100, cost of suit and forfeiture of boats, nets and all appliances.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

Chicago, Ill., March 23, 1894.

EDITOR TRIBUNE.—When I wrote you a few days ago I mentioned that I would send you full particulars of how I am and have been doing since leaving Freeland. I send you in this letter clippings from the Burlington, Iowa, papers, which you can show to any persons who doubt my account of how things were with me here. I also intended to send you the accounts of my two battles with "Gypsy" Gleason, both of which I won, but have not the papers at hand just now. But if anybody wants to know about these fights they can write to Mr. Green, sporting editor of the Burlington Gazette, who will furnish all information about them. He will give full particulars of the contests, which came off at the Boston Club Rooms in Burlington.

My reason for sending this letter is to let some of the people of Luzerne county know that I have found out all about the schemes that were laid there to trap me. It took a long time to discover why Harry B. McCoy, the alleged champion welter-weight of the west, should stay in Hazleton for two weeks without making himself known. He was there in August, 1892, the month I defeated Lewis Landmesser in Freeland, and in the following November I received some very enticing offers from him to come west.

He guaranteed me that lots of money could be made in Iowa in the prize fighting business, and wanted me to go with him. After the works closed down at Humboldt in June I started out and got to West Hazleton for several days when he was east and that aroused my suspicions. The people there knew all about me defeating Landmesser, but they did not know his name. They were anxious to get a fight on with McCoy and myself. I concluded there was something "crooked" with the man, and soon found out I was right. I refused to go into the "fake" business with him, although he offered me every inducement to let him knock me out in a fight. Some of the people in there will understand me when I say that the next time they try to get even with me for "crossing" Landmesser they should be careful who they pick out to defeat me. McCoy can never do it, and he will not even enter a ring with me on the "dead square." The people in Burlington tried to force him to fight, but he wouldn't do it unless I arranged a "fake."

Then McCoy and Billy Layton, the champion welter-weight of the south, fought a "fizzle" there. I exposed the whole affair in the Burlington Black Eye, as you can see by the clipping enclosed, and challenged both men. I made Burlington so hot for them that they found it to their interest to get out of the city, and neither of them dared to accept my offers. I did get a match partly arranged with Layton, to come off between the 18th and 20th of last August, but he disappeared on the 15th of that month and hasn't been heard of since. Anybody that wants the full history of that affair can write to John Todd, who held the purse, or to Senator Dodge, my backer, and these men will bear me out.

My coming out here was a scheme worked by people near Freeland to trap me and do me up, but the men they picked on would not dare to face the music when the time came. I have the whole history of it and they can't fool me with their false friendship. Billy Jones' eyes are sharper than some people in there think. I have traveled this country too much to be caught napping by these people, and they can't "rope" me in when they feel like it.

I will say this much that there was never a man left Freeland who held his own in any profession better than I have done, and the same I will do as long as I claim Freeland my home, and I am not going to forget old Freeland.

Oh, Freeland, forever my home,
I love you wherever I roam;
My heart, like a fawn that has strayed,
Yearns for the place I call home.

I expect to be here for only a few more days, and will then go to New York or Philadelphia, unless fighting is allowed to go here again. I may call up and with kind regards to all my friends in Freeland, I remain, Yours respectfully,
BILLY JONES, alias (in Iowa)
BILLY MABER, the Australian.

PICKED UP BY THE WAY.

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD IN THE TOWN AND VICINITY.

Matters of a Local Nature Written Up and Placed Before the Readers of the "Tribune" by the Sautterer—Something Here May Interest You.

In looking over some of the published extracts of Mine Inspector Lewis' report for 1893 I notice that, with few exceptions, it is the same old story over again. The long list of fatal and non-fatal accidents are there as usual, and notwithstanding the many improvements made in the methods of mining coal, it seems there is no alternative in the end but to nurse the wounded and bury the victims as they are brought to their homes, bruised and bleeding from a disaster over which the unfortunate in most cases had no control. It is sad to think that human lives are sacrificed year after year, and that but little effort is put forth to lessen the number of victims who are annually offered up to King Mammon.

In the list of fatal accidents the showing is not very creditable, there being an increase of ten in this district over 1892, while the non-fatal accidents have decreased eleven. The fatalities are divided up about evenly among the larger producing companies, with the exception of the Upper Lehigh Coal Company. Although the death-rate of the district increased and the company mentioned mined over 350,000 tons of coal, there was not a fatal accident at any of its collieries during the year. This is a showing that certainly reflects credit upon the management, and is due, not to good luck alone, but to the efficiency of the gentleman under whose control the workings are directed.

Taken as a whole, the company's superintendents have no superiors in the state as far as qualification in the coal industry is concerned. Their methods are all practical and based upon long years of experience, and when an emergency arises in which danger threatens the lives of their employes they are always to be found on the ground in company with the foreman directing the work until the threatened danger is over. While accidents will occur to the most careful, occasionally, yet it is evident that the officials of this company have exercised very good judgement in the many details which can only make coal mining a less hazardous occupation, for the collieries over which they have charge are among the most dangerous, and have been for the past three years, in the Lehigh region.

There appears to be an excellent opportunity here for the investment of capital in tenement houses. The number of people now looking for residences that rent from $7 to $10 per month is surprisingly large. Of vacant storerooms there is an abundance in town, more than will be occupied for a few months, but the dwellings are very scarce. Now if some enterprising capitalists would build a number of neat houses they would reap a fair percentage on the money invested, and there would be very few of them empty at any time of the year, providing a reasonable rent was asked.

The building of dwellings, for some reason or another, has never found much favor with persons who had money to invest in property here. Instead, they nearly all preferred to erect a combination storeroom and residence, spending as much on one building as would put up two or probably three houses. The result of this policy can be seen today in the many storerooms that are vacant, while the residence portion of the property is occupied.

This is plain proof that dwellings are needed at present a great deal more than business blocks, as of the latter there appears to be sufficient for some time to come, or at least until several of the handsome but vacant storerooms are rented. Real estate is always a good investment, especially in a town like Freeland, which is good yet for many, many years, and the men who will put their spare dollars into dwellings will show good judgement.
