

PICKED UP BY THE WAY.

THINGS SEEN AND HEARD IN THE TOWN AND VICINITY.

Matters of a Local Nature Written up and Placed Before the Readers of the "Tribune" by the Saunterer—Something Here May Interest You.

The announcement made a short time ago that the D. S. & S. Company was going to build a large iron roundhouse on the flat between No. 2 breaker and Freeland, for the accommodation of its locomotives, which in a few years may number a great many more than at present, has caused real estate in the Points to advance considerably in value, in the estimation of its owners. The property owners of that section of town have been watching the movements of the company with unabating interest since its formation, and all improvements and additions to its services at Drifton are cheerfully received by them. To add to this and make real estate still more valuable there are prospects of the same company extending its line to Freeland at no distant day, and it is expected that the town will be favored with a large depot and freight house. Of course there is much conjecture about the extension of the road to Freeland, but outside of the officials very few know anything definite about it.

Another glimpse of hope is cherished from a rumor that the shops at Drifton will be removed to another location nearer Freeland, in the near future, and enlarged to more than twice their present size, in order to meet the increasing demand that is arising from the D. S. & S. Company's rolling stock, and the mine and breaker machinery. When all the various mining operations of the Cross Creek Coal Company, and the large additions to the rolling stock of the D. S. & S. Company are considered, it is reasonable to expect that the latter project will become a reality. There is not a great deal of room to enlarge the shops at their present location, and although several small additions have been made lately, much more will be required when the new rolling stock begins to show wear and tear.

The chances of John Leisenring, of Upper Lehigh, for the Republican congressional nomination were advanced several points last Monday by the action of the district convention deciding to stand by any candidate from the district who may seek the office. As Mr. Leisenring is the only aspirant who is in the race in earnest from the lower end, this assurance of united aid of the district is very encouraging to his friends. His ability to fill the position cannot be questioned, and as he has always been a staunch supporter of the party his nomination would be acceptable to Republican voters.

Should Mr. Leisenring be fortunate enough to become the nominee there would be but little doubt of his election. His opponent on the Democratic ticket will be the present incumbent of the office, according to the arrangement made by the county seat clique, but Hines will not get 60 per cent. of the Democratic vote in this part of the county if Leisenring is pitted against him. I can say this because I know it to be a fact from the information gathered in speaking to Democrats who do not make idle boasts about bolting unless they mean it. A conversation with party workers in this neighborhood will reveal a great deal of dissatisfaction, and it is of such a quality that it will be useless to attempt to heal it up. If John Leisenring is nominated Billy Hines' votes in the fourth district can be easily counted.

A SCHOOLBOY'S MISTAKE.

This Story Contains a Lesson for Teachers as Well as Scholars.

A Brooklyn schoolboy about twelve years old was strongly attached to his teacher. His mother was poor, and the lad never was so fortunate as to have pocket-money. Some of his schoolmates often gave flowers or fruit to the teacher, and it was a cause of constant regret that he could not show his affection for her in the same way.

In this frame of mind he was assailed by a terrible temptation. In his mother's room he found ten dollars that belonged to her. These he stole, and bought with them handsome presents that he eagerly presented to the teacher.

It was precocious folly and speedily exposed, for his mother, missing the money and knowing that he had been in the room, suspected that he had taken it. She charged him with the theft. At first he attempted to deny it, but soon became confused, hung his head and confessed that he had wanted to please his teacher by giving her presents, and had used it for that purpose.

His excuse was that other children gave her presents, and received in return smiles and thanks, and he never had a penny so that he could "give her things," and let her know how much he liked her. He did not want the ten dollars for himself, but only for gifts for her.

The boy's mother reminded him of her own poverty, and that the ten dollars could not be replaced without weary days of labor and self-denial on her part. In taking the money he had not only become a thief and almost broken her heart, but he had also left her at her wits' end to know how she could earn enough to get food and pay rent that was due.

Hardly any act of this boy could have been more cruel and heartless than his robbery of his hard-working, care-worn mother that he might have the means for rivaling other boys in giving presents to the amiable teacher who had made herself a general favorite. True sentiment, like charity, begins at home. It is a sickly and unwholesome thing when it involves those at home in suffering and disgrace.

The boy's crime was the same in kind as that of embezzlers and defrauders who prove false to their financial trusts, covering up their crimes until exposure stares them in the face. Very often their motive for wrongdoing is ambition to live handsomely, to entertain their friends lavishly, to belong to expensive clubs and to drive fine horses. In the end, their wives and children have to pay heavily in misery and disgrace for their self-indulgence and crimes.

Older and wiser heads than the sentimental schoolboy have made the same mistake of betraying dear ones at home by yielding to false sentiment and living beyond their means.—Youth's Companion.

SIMPLE LITTLE SLED.

Very Popular Among the Boys of the Province of Quebec.

Among the young habitant boys of the mountainous district of Quebec, Canada, a little sled is used which is novel and simple in construction and affords such famous sport on the steep mountain roads that I can certain its introduction will be heartily welcomed. Any boy can construct one in a few moments, and the cost is practically nothing.

A good smooth stave from a barrel having been procured, an upright bunk about twelve inches high is securely nailed to it. On the top of this bunk a seat is nailed. This may be also a piece of barrel stave about fifteen inches long. The sled is now complete. The accompanying illustration will assist my description.

Now for a slide down some small hill to begin with. Seated on the bunk seat, both hands holding the ends of the seat, and both feet touching the snow to help balance the little craft and to steer it, away you go. Such an exciting run, such fun, so easily guided and controlled, no danger, for a firm pressure of the feet on the snow brings the little craft to a standstill at will, and as it weighs but a pound it is so easily carried up hill.

I have seen these little sleds used by boys and girls of five or six years of age on the roughest and steepest mountain-sides on the snow-crust, and they were always under such perfect control that I never heard of an accident.

Twenty or more of these little craft can be made from one barrel with a pound of three-inch nails.—G. M. Fairchild, Jr., in Harper's Young People.

Had Tested Them.

"We got hardwood stails in our house," bragged Jimmie. "So've we," retorted Mollie. "I fell down 'em last Tuesday, an' they was awful hard."

THE COLLEGES.

PRINCETON will debate with neither Yale nor Harvard this year. The systems of debate in vogue at each college are so different that it is impossible to find any common ground upon which to stand.

At a Lehigh college meeting held to discuss the subject of either dropping lacrosse or baseball on account of lack of funds to support both it was decided to make an attempt to raise the money and to keep both teams.

JOHN HORKINS has received a valuable collection of fossils from Robert T. Hill, of Washington, a geologist connected with the government survey. The collection contains more than four thousand specimens and is considered one of the most complete in this country.

The students of Harvard and the University of Pennsylvania are to compete for a prize of two hundred and fifty dollars, offered by John C. Ropes, of Boston, for the best essay submitted by a candidate for a degree in either of the above institutions on the subject: "The Causes of the Russian War of 1812."

ALEXANDER MAZYCK, who died at London, Canada, on January 27, was the oldest living graduate of Princeton college, having graduated in 1839 in a class of forty-three members. By his death William Clay Wallace, of Newark, N. J., of the class of 1823, becomes the oldest living graduate.

The library of Yale university has just received from Robbins Battell, of Norfolk, a gift of a richly-bound copy of the very rare octavo edition of Perceval's poems, prepared for a memorial of the erection of a monument last year by a few of the poet's friends over his grave in Wisconsin.

PRETTY FEMINE CONCEITS.

ONE of the pretty conceits of the day is a boudoir made entirely of white fur. Very large white fur rugs are also greatly in vogue, and are not expensive, three good-sized goat skins sewn together making a reasonably large rug.

A HANDSOME cover for a piano can be made by using a square of plain satin, with border twelve or fifteen inches wide of gold or silver wrought satin. A center of pale gray, with a border of still paler gray, or a plain yellow center, with gold-wrought border, is very effective.

The elaborate millinery lamp shades have overreached the mark and are no longer considered in the best of taste by people with pretensions to refined artistic taste in such matters. The softly-tinted, fluted porcelain shades or the plain ground glass globes toned down by a simple little silk shade, are always pleasing.

A BAMBOO lounge gives one cold chills, but it can be transformed into a thing of beauty with small expense. Get golden brown or dark red corduroy and make thick-tufted cushions for the seat and back. They can be made in sections and tied to the lounge; then have three or four big down pillows covered with India silk to scatter over it.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The average term in school days for the union is 130.

NEW JERSEY has the longest school term in the union, 192 days; then Rhode Island 188, and New York 187.

The school term in the South Atlantic states is only 91 days. Florida has 120, Virginia 118, North Carolina only 90.

The total expenditure for education in the United States is $128,780,333 a year, most of it raised by taxation.

In the south central states the school term is 181 days, Kentucky leading (109 days), Texas second (105 days) and Alabama last (79 days).

THERE are enrolled in the public schools of this country 13,371,593 children, an increase of 28.31 per cent. since 1880, against an increase of 24.85 in population.

PENNSYLVANIA, Iowa, Ohio and Illinois all lead New York—the most populous state—in the number of school-houses, and Iowa relatively makes much the best showing. Texas, of course, leads the south by many a length.

THERE are 219,992 school-houses in the United States, and one can well say they dot every hilltop. Of these 23,142 are in the South Atlantic and 28,992 in the south central states.

IN A BUFFALO'S HEAD.

A Hunter Kills a Bull with a Charge of Small Change.

The buffalo of Geylon carries his head in a peculiar manner—the horns thrown back and his nose projecting on a level with his forehead—thus securing him from a fatal front shot. This renders him a dangerous enemy, as he will receive any number of balls from a small gun in the throat and chest without showing the least distress. An account of a dangerous encounter with this animal is given. The writer had fired without killing the buffalo and had not a ball left. With a stealthy step and a short gun the bull advanced upon the man, seemingly aware of his helplessness.

"Suddenly a bright thought flashed through my mind. Without taking my eyes off the animal I put a double charge of powder down the right-hand barrel, and, tearing off a piece of my shirt, I took all the money from my pouch, three shillings in six penny pieces and two anna pieces.

"Quickly making them into a roll with the piece of a rag, I rammed them down the barrel. They were hardly well home before the bull sprang forward. I had no time even to replace the ramrod, and threw it into the water, bringing my gun on full cock at the same instant.

"I now had a charge in the gun which, if reserved till he was within a few feet of the muzzle, would certainly floor him. The horns were lowered, his points were on either side of me, and the muzzle of the gun barely touched his forehead when I pulled the trigger and three shillings' worth of small change rattled into his hard head.

"Down he went and rolled over with the suddenly checked momentum of his charge. Away went B—and I as fast as our heels would carry us, through the water and over the plain, knowing that he was not dead, but only stunned.

"There was a large fallen tree about half a mile from us whose whitened branches, rising high above the ground, offered a tempting asylum. To this we directed our steps, and after a run of 100 yards we turned and looked behind us. The buffalo had regained his feet and was following us slowly. We now experienced the difference of feeling between hunting and being hunted.

"By degrees the bull's pace slackened and he fell. We were only too glad to be able to reduce our speed, but we had no sooner stopped to breathe than he was up again and after us. At length, however, we gained the tree and beheld him stretched powerless upon the ground within 200 yards of us."

Unappropriated Syllables.

In the early days of the gold excitement in California a young German from Michigan departed for California, and, after prospecting for awhile, settled there. His name was John G. Almondinger, and wishing to Americanize himself as much as possible he applied to the legislature of California and had his name changed to John G. Almond.

A few days later a man named John Smith applied to the same legislature, and after reciting a long catalogue of the ills to which he was subject owing to his unfortunately common name, he said in conclusion: "And whereas I have noticed that you curtailed the name of J. G. Almondinger to J. G. Almond and have not disposed of the 'inger,' which seems to be lying around loose, I respectfully request that the same may be added to my name." The result of this appeal is not stated.—Youth's Companion.

Why She Didn't Run Away.

A lady who had reached the time of life when she began to resent every birthday as a personal affront was attending a sewing circle at the parsonage one day when the cry went up that there was a mouse in the room. Every lady in the room, except this one, fled, screaming. She remained in her chair, as pale as death. Hearing the uproar the pastor, who was in his study, came in to see what was the matter. "It's a m-m-mouse!" the pale lady gasped.

"Indeed! And why didn't you run with the rest? Aren't you afraid of mice?"

"I am mortally afraid of them!"

"Then why, please, did you stay in the room?"

"I was in hopes," the lady flattered, "that I might be scared out of a year's growth!"

Tabby Lives on Vegetables.

There is a cat in the seclusion of Hampton Court, England, which has become a strict vegetarian, certainly on principle, since there is plenty of meat to be had. This eccentric creature, black from nose to tail, has taken for her chief diet sweet runner beans. Cucumbers she also likes, and carrots, if they are boiled, while she occasionally nibbles away at other vegetables. But, for some inscrutable reason, this singular cat will not touch fruit, and although she will drink milk, she rejects the bread that may be mixed with it. Altogether, there is some talk of taking this queer animal to London to have the philosophers talk over her.

A Unique Case.

The Vermont state supreme court met at the state house and rendered a decision in the case of the state vs. John O'Neil, of Rutland, Vt. The court denied O'Neil's petition, for an arrest of judgment and sentenced him to a fine of $6,160 and two months in the house of correction.

This is the most unique case ever before the Vermont courts and has been on trial for 12 years in one form or another. O'Neil, a liquor dealer in Whitehall, N. Y., sent liquor to Rutland in jugs. He was arrested in 1882, convicted before Justice Wayne Bailey in Rutland for 457 offenses and sentenced by Bailey to 28-829 days, or over 70 years, in the house of correction. Defendant appealed to the county court, when he pleaded guilty of 307 offenses, reducing the penalty to about 60 years. He appealed to the supreme court on the ground of excessive and unusual punishment, but the decision of the lower court was affirmed. The case was then taken to the United States supreme court on the plea that the Vermont prohibitory law was unconstitutional. That court decided that it had no jurisdiction.
