Being assured that there was no great danger he ventured in, but after walking about a short time he suddenly found himself in deep water.

himself in deep water. In his struggles he grasped his cousin, John Johnson, but the latter was unable to assist him, and to save himself he had to leave his friend and swim to the shore, which he reached utterly ex-hausted. Mellon immediately sank, and after remaining under water for about a minute, he rose again for an instant. The others who were swimming could not reach him before he went down the not reach him before he went down the second time. Although they waited near where he sank for some time he did not come to the surface again, and then help was summoned from Freeland to receiver was summoned from Freeland to receiver was summoned from Freeland to recover the body Miss Carr has been an active Moore du Watering Place. Historically, and in point of natural davantages and attractiveness, Cape May is the most important seaside re-sort in the United States. Its career as a sanitarium and pleasuring place dates back to the cloing years of the last cen-tury, and until a comparatively recent ury, and until a comparatively recen-tury, and upon its broad beach were gathered each summer capital of the nation, and upon its broad beach were gathered each summer the great political and social notabilities of the country, the intellect and the beauty of the north and the south. In the more im-mediate past it has been comparatively unheard of, a fact due partially to the interact conservatism which has always distinguished it, but more largely to the distraction of poular attention to newer and more vociferously "boomed" resorts along the coast. May is about to resume its ancient pres-tige and reassert its proud eminence among seaside watering places. This revivification of the grand old resort is anticipated as a direct result of the in-creased and improved railway facilities which will be supplied by the new South Jersey Railroad, recently com-pleted, and we way expect to hear a great deal of Cape May during the summer. The South Jersey Railroad extends from Vinsiow Juncion, on the Reading Railroad's Atlantic City line, to Cape May, with branches to Saa 18/e City, Ocean City, Avalon, Wildwood and other resorts. It has been in operation to Cape May is described as "straight as a string and as level as a table," substan-tally constructed with a view to the hightest speeds, and materially shorter than any other road to the Cape.
