Barre tells of a murder that was committed at Duryea, in the upper end of the county, early Saturday morning. The murderers are all well-known here, having resided in this vicinity until recently. Friday night at Duryea was pay day night, and owing to a late picnic train having just reached the town there was a large crowd on the streets at a like hour. Three young men, Thomas, Robert and James Oliver, became boisterous and began shooting promiscuously into the crowd. Being remonstrated with they set upon John Toole, against whom they were much embittered over differences in regard to social aflairs. They knocked Toole down and kicked and beat him unmercifulty, jumping on him while down and in addition fired several shots at him while he was lying upon the ground, none of which took effect.

While one of the Oliver boys held the crowd at bay with his revolver the other two continued to beat their victim until

Blew Up a Postoffice

A fight with burglars took place at Luzerne borough early on Friday morr Luzerne borough early on Friday morning, and they were prevented from robbing the safe of the postoffice, which they had blown open. About 5 o'clock John Clemow was taken sick and had risen from his bed to get some medicine. He had reached a lower floor when he was startled by an explosion coming from the direction of the postoffice, impediately across the way. Clemow for mediately across the way. Clemow forgot all about his ailment, but the shock did not frighten his presence of mind away, for he ran at once to a drawer, from which he diew a revolver, hastened to the front door and opened fire, pointing the weapon toward the office. In an instant Clemow awoke to the conclusion that he had stirred up a whole nest full of burglars, and from the manner in which they responded he thought they had pulled a Gatling gun on him. They did not succeed in driving him from his post, however, and he soon had them on the run.

After the shooting had ceased Post-master Killeen arrived, and on making an investigation of the safe in the office master Killeen arrived, and on making an investigation of the safe in the office it was found that the burglars had blown it open in the usual way, but it was concluded they had used more nowder than the burglars had blown in the usual way, but it was concluded they had used more nowder than the burglars had blown in the usual way, but it was concluded they had used more nowder than the burglars had being so badly stabbed that she died. it was found that the burglars had blown it open in the usual way, but it was concluded they had used more powder than was necessary. Frightened by the unexpected noise of the explosion they had no time to examine the safe, and he no time to exam found on looking them over that the books and stamps had been considerably burned, though he is unable to estimate the damage.

From marks found along the route taken by the burglars in their flight it is believed that one of the bullets from Clemow's revolver found lodgment in one of their bodies. They left a monkey wrench and a brace of a make that leads those interested to believe that the burglars are professionals.

Alf the bill boards are placarded with red and yellow posters, emblazoned with the figures of creatures from every clime, and all to be seen for the small sum of 25 cents. Children, 15 cents. Undoubtedly, in popular estimation, the chief attraction of Mr. Washburn's menagerie lies in Cupid, the little baby elephant, who is only three feet high, three months old and weighs 200 pounds. Cupid is the most gentle and tiniest of elephants, and is certainly a great feature, far ahead of any that has heretofore appeared in this town. Mr. Washburn may well feel proud of so valuable an addition to his already extensive menagerie.
