overwhelmed all over the country and every state voted against the party—Pennsylvania by over a hundred thousand majority. Only two years later, in 1874, the Democrats carried the house of congress, and in two years later, in 1876, Samuel J. Tilden was elected president by a majority of a quarter of a million but was counted out by thieves and perjurers constituting the Louisiana and Florida returning boards. All experience proves that the fire tried old Democratic party always comes up smiling and victorious after an overwhelming defeat."

"The impressive scene of fraternization," says an exchange, "between eveterans of the blue and the gray which made the recent Grand Army encampment at Pittsburg so memorable had its counterpart on Friday night last in the hall of Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans at Richmond, Va, when the veterans of the Fifth teenth Connecticut regiment were entertained as guests. These evidences of good-fellowship on the part of the heroes of the great struggle will touch the better natures of all men in whom the love of country is a living sentiment, and it ought to shane into silence the lond-mouthed demagogues who are still rating the dead embers of the warm coals that might serve as partisan fuel."

The proposition to set apart three 40,000 aere tracts of mountain land in Pennsylvania upon which trees shall be propagated and protected from the ravage of fire and the ravage of men deserves the favorable consideration of the legislature. There are great tracts of land in the mountain-ous parts of the state which have been stripped of their original forest growths. The lumber men, the charcoal burners, the cutters of railway ties, the gatherers of bark for the tanneries and the improvident farmers who have cleared spaces they cannot cultivate have all had their turn of destruction. What mischief they have left undone fire has completed. As a result the springs have failed and the streams sing low. To restore the forests on these lands would be a work warranted by its sanitary advantage, but it would also be a source of ultimate profit to the state.—

Tariff Fight To Be Continued as Bitterly as Ever.

Washington, Nov. 19.—When the senate at reconvenes on the first Monday is next month, unless the programme mapped out by certain senators should be rearranged, there will probably be a renewal of the clash on the tariff question.
