Vernon avenue, Chicago, and whose visit to Keckuk, Ia., will long be remembered, was at one time afflicted with a nervous malady which at times drove her nearly to distraction. "Those terrible headaches are a thing of the past," she said the other day to a Gate City representative, "and there is quite a story in connection with it too.

"My aervous system sustained a great shock some fifteen yers ago, brought on, I believe, through too much worrying over family matters, and then allowing my love for my books to get the better of my discretion where my health was concerned. Why, whenever my affairs at home did not go along just as I expected, I would invariably become prostrated from the excitement and I would consider myself fortunate indeed if the effects of the attack would not remain for a week. I was obliged to give up our pleasant home not far from the Lake shore drive, because I could not stand the noise in that locality. I could find no place in the other words of the system was always on the point of explosion. To add to my misfortunes my complexion underwent a change and I looked so yellow and sallow that I was ashamed to venture from the house at all. "Madam, said my doctor to me soon outer an unusually severe attack of the malady, said my doctor to me soon after an unusually severe attack of the malady "unliess you leave the city and seek some place of quiet, you will never recover." So on my published condition. I picked up the Gate City one day and happened to come or my piliable condition. After I had taken several boxes of them I was roady to go back to Chicago. My nervousness was gone and my complexion was as fresh as that of any sixteen-year-old girl in Iowa, and Pink Pili

Paris Ever Famous.

Paris Ever Famous.

Paris was a famous and cultivated city ages before Venice. If we search for them, we may find in it historical associations that may vie with those of any city in the world, except Rome and Constantinople; and even its antiquarian and artistic remains are seldom equaled or surpassed. At Rome, Florence, or Venice, the tourist talks of old churches, nalaces and remains of churches, palaces, and remains; at Paris he gives himself up to the boule-vards, the theaters, shops, and races. The profoundly instructive history, the profuse antiquarian remains of the great city, are forgotten—carent quia vate sacro.—The Spectator.

GREAT WALL OF CHINA.

It Was China's Northern Rampart and a Stupendous Fortification. This excellent picture of a bit of the great wall of China shows it at its best. At Nankow, where the photograph was taken, the wall is in excellent preservation. In fact it is not probable that any of the original wall is shown in the picture, for this sketch is in the mountains north of Pekin, and practically has been rebuilt two or three times since it was first reared.

Long ago Mongolla was not a part of the Chinese empire, as it is to-day, and the Hiungnu ancestors of the Mongolians were China's most terrible enemy.

that it is supposed to have contained about 160,000,000 cubic meters of solid masonry, we may gain some idea of the soldiers, and this fact in itself was a protection to China, as it increased the density of population along the frontier. For fourteen centuries the wall helped to protect the empire from its northern foes. Then more because so much haste was made to erect it. Several hundred thousand the Hiungnu ancestors of the Mongolians were China's most terrible enemy. innabitants. The mere wear and tear of the ages alone would have toppled much of it in ruins. The time was when it was a crime punishable with death to so much as scratch it with a pin. Yet it is doubtful if to-day much of the original wall is left. What is now seen of it is the patchwork of the centuries during the time when the wall was China's great bulwark to the north.

Thieves in Naples Sewers.
There is a band of thieves in Naples which, like rats, frequent the underground sewers and bore their way into shops for the purpose of robbing tills and goods. Not long ago a leather dealer, on unlocking his warehouse, found a large hole in the flooring, and skins and money gone to the value of 3,000 francs. He called the police, and several of them, together with some sewer men, penetrated to the dark vaults, slipping and sliding along the mud of the sewers, and with a single lantern. They had not gone far when they discovered a man and called him to stop. But with a cry, "Madonna! Don't kill me," the man fled along the sewer, the people firing after him and following him for at least a mile, passing under three or four streets, but without success. The police are now watching the sewers like cats, but there are many escape holes.—London Dally www.

New Frying Pan.

A frying pan constructed on an Improved principle has been invented by Inspector Ludbrooke, of the Great Western Railway, England. His pan consists of an outer plate of sheet iron and an inner one of burnished steel, and between the two is a thin layer of abestos, the advantages claimed for it being that it cannot get overheated and burn the contents; that the fat will not splutter over the sides, and the juices of the meat are retained.

Vast Armaments of Europe.
Thirteen million bayonets prop up the Czar's throne. That is the full strength of the Russian army on a war strength of the Russian army on a war footing. Germany comes next, but after a long interval, with 3,700,000 soldiers; Italy has 3,155,000 and France 2,500,000 excluding 350,000 auxiliaries. Austria's fine army, which in quality is reckoned scarcely second to Kaiser Wilhelm's, contains a maximum of 1,794,175 men. England at home and in her colonies can mobilize a force of 662,000. The little martial republic of Switzerland can summon 486,000 soldiers to her banners in an emergency, and even poverty-cursed Spain boasts of 400,000. Austria, of all the powers, has the most burdensome military establishment. Her annual expenditures has the most burdensome military es-tablishment. Her annual expenditures on her army are $255,000,000, while Russia's, with an army seven times as large, are only $186,000,000, and Ger-many's $113,000,000. In proportion to many's $113,000,000. In proportion to size, England's army is perhaps the most costly. Her 692,000 men require $89,000,000 annually for their support, or only $33,000,000 less than the amount which provides France with an enormous host of more than four times England's numbers.—Boston Journal.

The Case Altered.

The Case Aitered.

The sort of sentiment which the French system of mariages de convenance, or in plain English, of marriage for money, produces is well illustrated by a story which a French paper tells. Marte, a young lady, announces to ber parents that she has accepted the hand of Monsieur X.

"Child, you are crazy!" exclaims Marie's mother.

"But why, mamma?"

"Young X will have no money for many years, because it all belongs to his grandfather, and after that comes his father, and you will be old before you get at the property."

"But, mamma—"

"No buts about it—you are a bad and undurful, bild!"

"No buts about it—you are a bad and undutiful child!"

"But, mamma, it is the grandfather whom I've accepted!"

"The grandfather! Oh, you little angel!"

Chemistry of III-Temper.

Prof. Gates, of Washington, has entered upon an almost unknown domain of psychical science. He claims to have made the discovery that the emotions produce a physical reaction which discloses itself to chemical tests, and that the benevolent sensibilities, such as kindness, cheerfulness, etc., exert a good effect on the bodily health, while the malevolent feelings exert a correspondingly bad effect.
