nest in the cheese case.

The county detective arrived upon the scene of the Early murder forty-eight hours after the body was found. This tardiness may have not been the fault of Mr. Eckert, who is known to be very busy these days, nevertheless the time lost before commencing an investigation was valuable and cannot be recovered. The guilty party had an opportunity to be half-way across the continent, something which would not likely occur if our county was governed by competent people or if the lower end had a county seat of its own. Murderer after murder has escaped through just such tardi-tions that prevail in the anthracite coal regions.

Some action should be taken this summer in regard to better fire protection for Birvanton. That is the only part of the borough where the force of water from the mains is not sufficient to reach the tops of the houses. The property owners there are not yet asking for sewers or anything else that will entail expense, but they do feel the necessity of having their homes better secured against fire. The last blaze on the Hill showed the danger and the inability of the present apparatus to cope with it. There is nothing to be gained by delay, for something must be done sooner or later, and the borough council cannot act too quickly in giving Birvanton people protection of some kind.

ON THE OCEAN WAVES.

Transatlantic Excursions and Peo ple Who Go on Them. es at the Departure from New York ovincial Districts Arc Relied Upon Chiefly to Furnish the Passen-gers of the Ship.

Chiefly to Furnish the Passengers of the Ship.

The outgoing ocean steamers on regular lines are not carrying many passengers these days, says the New York Sun, but an occasional transatiantic excursion starts with a full complement. To witness the departure of such a steamer will convince one that the United States as a nation is far from being in pecuniary straits. Excursions to New Orleans, Florida or Montreal may be considered as side trips in comparison with a tour of many thousands of miles, crossing the ocean twice, taking in southern Europe and northern Africa, and requiring two or more months of time. It would seem as if the question of expense cut little figure when the manager of such a trip has succeeded in convincing people that they will get their money's worth. The experienced manager of any enterprise of this kind knows that he must offer an apparent bargain. A shipload of, say, 500 passengers can be taken at much less than regular rates, and they will afford the promoter a handsome profit. Many months of preparation are required. In fact, the first move is made early in the preceding summer. The country is divided into states or sections, and representative men are secured to vouch for the affair. In this business, as in many others, the best support comes from outside of New York. The proper sort of advertising matter is furnished to the district or state manager and is distributed not broadcast but to selected persons. The manager tries especially to get one or more big men in each section, taking them free if necessary. An ex-congressman or senator or governor is a good, attractive card. So is a preacher of note. Once a person decides to go he is expected to make a deposit as a guaranty of good faith, and some passengers pay the whole cost on the installment plan.

A few days before the departure of such an excursion the ticket-holders begin to drop into New York to make final purchases for the journey. It is interesting to study these excursionists. They are typical citizens, and more than half of them will drop a few tears as they wave their hats, handkerchiefs and flags and say good-by to those left behind on the pier. Not a man, woman or child of them but has a love of country. They are supplied with all the remedies for seasiekness, but nothing that prevents homeslekness.

From one little town comes the old doctor. He has worked hard perhaps for forty years, and has planned time and again to spend a few months in Europe. The time has come at last. He has pushed collections, got a neighbor to take his practice and had his life well insured, and now he is away. There may be no one on the pier that he knows and all his folks may be at home, but he climbs up into the rigging and waves his hat and hurrahs like a boy, and the cold wind makes him wipe his eyes.

The majority of these people are mid-but he climbs up into the rigging and waves his hat and hurrahs like a boy, and the cold wind makes him wipe his eyes.

The majority of these people are middle-aged. One sees on board many a husband and wife. Occasionally these are accompanied by a small family of nearly grown children. All of the passengers have personal experiences to relate. One old man tells of having saved money all his life for such a trip, and now that his wish is to be gratified he isso thankful that he wants everyone to know it.

In the crush a family have become separated. The father wants to be sure the son is aboard, and the wife, nervous lest she shall lose both husband and son, objects to his leaving her. The fretting lasts but a moment, for the boy turns up all right. Some of the folks from up the state and near by are accompanied by friends, many of opposite sexes. They frequently hold hands, and some stand with arms around each other. Many of these people have never seen a steamship before, much less the ocean. They are disappointed at the size of the vessel.

Before sailing time many acquaintances are made. The ship does not go out like a regular liner. The first warning whistic for visitors to leave has little effect. Time and again the signals given, but the crowd won't go. One makes a remark about the cold weather and another comforts him by saying that three eceles from Sunday they will be in Jerusalem. Then some one starts three cheers, no one knows what for, but all hurrah in time, but late. The ship basks out and hundred of little flags are waving good-by.

MARY LOWE DICKINSON.

Just Elected President of the National Council of Women.

Mrs. Mary Lowe Dickirson, who has just been elected president of the National Council of Women at the Washington convention, is a writer of market ability, but is, perhaps, more widely known in the educational field. She has thousands of friends throughout the United States who recognize the quality and extent of what she has accomplished in this direction. She was born in Massachusetts, but after her marriage resided for some years abroad, and is now a resident of the city of New York. An early experience in life as a teacher led her to realize the need for a more practical education for girls and women, and she has sought to teach better systems of training. Her latest work of importance was in Denver, Col., where she held a full professorship in English literature. Such an estimate was placed on the value of her services, not only as an instructor, but as a social and moral influence, thather chair was one of the first to be fully endowed, and when ill-health obliged her to resign this position the chair was named for her, and she was made emeritus professor, and holds now its lectureship in English literature. She has been secretary of the woman's branch of the American Bible society, national superintendent of the so-called department of higher education in the Woman's Christian Temperance union and president of the Woman's National Indian association. She conducted for six years a magazine devoted to the care of invalids, and held an associate editorship with Edward Everett Hale in his Magazine of Philanthropy. She is now president of the order of King's Daughters, and editor of its magazine. Her principal literary works are "Among the Thorns," "The Amber Star" and "One Little Life," novels; and, in poetry, "The Divine Christ" and "Easter Poems."

CAMERA OBSCURA.

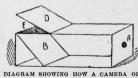

How to Make a Useful Little Machine Whitch is Not Patented.

In a letter to the Art Amateur a scheme for making a simple camera obscura is described. As the directions are simple and practical we reprint the letter, which runs as follows:

"Sin: Let me call your attention to a simple little device to aid the student in sketching. It is such as any of your readers who is handy with the glue pot, saw and plane can make with a very little outlay of money.

"It is called the 'camera obscura.' With its assistance the young sketcher out of doors can get his perspective correctly, and not only that, it is a help for drawing the interior of a room. The most beautiful cloud forms, too, can be traced on the ground glass before they can change, and the picture or sketch thus obtained can readily be enlarged by anyone. Proceed in the following manner:

"Have a box made twelve inches in length, four in depth, and six in width. In the middle of one end of it let a hole be bored (as at A in my diagram), in which insert a double convex lens, and at the other end, inside the box, place a piece of looking-glass (as at B), inclining it at an angle of forty-five degrees, or midway between horizontal and perpendicular, so as to reflect objects upward. Part of the top of the box must be made to act as a lid or cover upon hinges (as at D), and the

Dismal Failure—His Home Life at Pretoria.

His honor, the president of the South African republic, writes a correspondent of the Gentlewoman, is one of,
if not the most, remarkable characters at present occupying the political stage of South Africa. The Transval, over whose destinies President Krugergion in South Africa, if not in the world—an independent Dutch republic founded by the Boers who were ousted from the Cape colony by what they were pleased to term English misrule.
Their bitter antipathy to British misappropriation of a territory colonized and conquered by their fathers drove them further afield to the unexplored tracks beyond the Vaal river, where as God's chosen people they could read their Bibles, and harass the natives, far away from Cape officialism.
Unlike his neighbor president, Mr.
Reitz, of the Orange Free state (another thriving offishot of Dutch secession), who is a man of academic and forensic standing, Mr. Kruger's marvelous administrative capacity is based solely on his native and untrained talents. He is sixty-eight years of age, a Boer of the Boers, shrewd, obstinate, combining the gaucheries of an English rustic with an amazing astuteness which would become many a skilled diplomat. Ungainly of figure, a South African James the First, he is gifted with far more caution than the Stuart monarch. He shines more at the council than the social board; in fact, he detests social functions, and many are the with far more caution than the Stuart monarch. He shines more at the counicil than the social board; in fact, he detests social functions, and many are the true anecdotes of his solecisms and eccentricities.

When visiting the neighboring colony of Natal on one occasion, he and Mrs. Kruger firmly refused a sumptuous lunch prepared by a loyal township en route, and, to the consternation of the caterers, proceeded to discuss a chunk of dried beef—"biltong"—and equally dry bread which was produced from the presidential pocket! When at Government house, in Natal, his honor was asked to take Lady——in to dinner. With rural simplicity and imperfect English corn, is not shyahr; and even at corerement house, Natal, presidents may, and do, disdain forks, misuse servicties, and fail to grasp the true import of a finger-bowl.

At a recent conference on the vexed question of Swaziland between Sir Henry Loch and his honor, the latter, when dining with the high comusisioner of our gracious majesty, stoutly refused Perier and Jouet, preferring the charms of a mixture of milk and water—a remnant of his patriarchal upbringing. And cigars! Uncanny things for a Boer president, who smoked a capacious pipe charged with Boer to-bacco to conteract the evil fumes of "Fior Fina."

In his modest home at Pretoria, a one-storied, low-roofed building, appropriately situated opposite the Dopper church, where he and Mrs. Kruger are regular attendants, they dispense a homely but hearty hospitality, which is not to be wondered at, when the president's salary is £7.000 per annum, with an allowance of £300 for coffee! Coffee is the favorite and almost exclusive beverage of his subjects, and on the stoop, or open veranda of the presidency, surrounded by public offices which cost £75,000, President Kruger puffs his pipe, sips his coffee, and matures schemes which puzzle and perpets the minds of British and colonial diplomats, who can do much, but they can't circumvent the burgher president. Mrs. Kruger is, like the majority of Dutch women, very stout, and was born and bred in the Transwal. The daughter of Mr. Oppermann, one of the old burghers who are gradually dying out, she is an able and sympathetic helpmate to the president in his dispensing of coffee and shaking of hands, which is indulged in to an alarming extent in Boerland. Her disposition is very sweet; ever ready to give a helping hand to need and poverty in the capital. There is little to chronicle of her, because she possesses those true womanly virtues which shun unnecessary publicity, and find their true sphere in the domestic circle of the presidency at Pretoria.
