Subscribers are requested to observe the date following the name on the labels of their papers. By referring to this they can tell at a glance how they stand on the books in this office. For instance:

George Cleveland 23 Jun 26

means that Grover is paid up to June 26, 1895. Keep the figures in advance of the present date. Report promptly to this office when your paper is not received. All arrears must be paid when paper is discontinued, or collection will be made in the manner provided by law.

FREELAND, PA., MAY 6, 1895.

A Hazleton paper has set up the cry that the Nescopee might run dry, and therefore is not to be depended upon as a stream to furnish water. Is this an indirect way of excusing the corporation which is making preparations to turn mine water into the creek?

The Philadelphia Press has stopped shrieking. The threat to investigate Philadelphia's municipal affairs was only a bluff, consequently the Press is calm again. For a while it seemed the jobbers' organ would have a fit as severe as the one it had when Pattison compelled it to disgorge the Bardsley rebate divvy.

County politics are decidedly dull, considering that the important offices of sheriff and recorder are to be filled next fall. In former years the buzzing of the bees in several citizens' hats could be plainly heard around the first week in May. The Democrats cannot be expected to show much concern over the approaching election, but the other fellows would be pardoned if they began to make a stir.

Colonel Laclair, the Wilkes-Barre correspondent of the Seranton Tribune, says that ex-Congressman Hines, in spite of his disastrous defeat last year, claims he is entitled to the Democratic nomination for congress in 1896, and will make an effort to get on the ticket. The same authority mentions that John T. Lenahan may also be an aspirant for congressional honors. There may be others before the convention is over.

The Upper Lehigh Coal Company is silent about that tunnel which is to empty mine water into the Nescopee creek. People accused of wrong-doing usually resent the charge if they are innocent, but there have been no denials, so far. The company has been charged with preparing to pollute this stream in the interest of certain men who are stockholders in the coal company and also in a Hazleton water company. As they refuse to refute the accusation, people cannot help but believe them guilty, especially while their actions have a guilty look.

Some people in New York city are greatly concerned lest the readers of country newspapers will not thoroughly understand the money question. The Tribune has had offers from them to furnish us "broadside" supplements to send out with this paper, said supplements to contain brilliant and entertaining articles on the money problem. To test their sincerity in wishing to correctly inform the country people on the question, we offered to use their "broadside" if they would allow the free silver men to edit one page and the "sound money" men the other. Our offer was ignored, of course. The goldbugs refused to be a party to a square debate.

Every fair-minded person, no matter how bitterly they may be opposed to the formation of Quay county, had to rejoice to see justice triumph in the house of representatives last Wednesday, when the sneaking attempt was made to kill the bill in the supposed absence of its friends. The overwhelming vote cast for the motion to reconsider shows there still remains some love of fair play in the legislature, and that the corporation and political tricksters cannot run things quite so high-handed as they would like in this matter. The fight for Quay county has been clean, honorable and open. Not a man has arisen to insinuate that anything but the fairest methods have been used in advancing it, and those who have the measure in charge deserve commendation for their refusal to imitate its opponents by trying to debauch the legislature.

If Mr. John Smoulter, as county chairman of what remains of the Democratic party, has not invited any expression of views on the advisability of holding an early county convention, he ought to do so. For many reasons we believe the early holding of the convention would be a good thing, and as we have seen no argument that is worthy of attention that it would not, we think it ought to be held. For that reason we suggest that he call a meeting of the county committee at an early date, say within two weeks, and test the sentiment and feeling of the party for the scheme. So far as we can see an early convention would injure no interest, and the selection of a strong and capable ticket and presenting it to the public would strengthen the cause of Democracy. It needs strengthening most every one will admit, and this early convention plan might be the means of doing the trick.

QUEER TEXAS SNAKES.

Some Climb Trees and Rob the Nests of Birds.

Now a Yellow Racer and a Hoopsnake Had Lots of Fun Together—The Opossum Snake Feigns Death When It Is Touched.

"There is a species of whipsnake in the Lone Star state, the male of which is jet black and the female green," said a former resident of Texas. "They are long, slim reptiles, and they climb trees and rob birds' nests with remarkable celerity.

"The yellow racer of Texas is another interesting snake. When he crawls his movements are from side to side, but when he races he undulates, with his head several inches in the air, and he can get over the ground almost as fast as a jack rabbit. You will often see a yellow racer chasing a red-bellied hoopsnake, and vice versa. Sometimes you will see them racing side by side neither seeming to try to outspeed the other, and both getting over the ground for the fun of the thing. The most amusing snake race I ever saw out there was between a hoopsnake and a racer. There was a big bulge in the hoopsnake's body, evidently caused by a large toad in his stomach, and he wobbled so that every little while he would lose his balance and tumble sideways. The racer also had a large lump in his body, but it didn't bother him much in traveling, and he stopped and waited whenever the hoopsnake tipped over. The hoopsnake would look up and start in again, and he and the racer covered more than two miles in that way, going ahead of the horse I was riding.

"While trying to net pigeons one season I saw a yellow racer crawling toward the stool pigeon. For the moment I was more concerned about a hawk that had been circling overhead for some time, and I didn't pay much attention to the snake. At length the hawk dived at the stool pigeon and knocked the breath out of it. Without waiting for the hawk to snatch the stool pigeon the racer would himself around the hawk's neck and breast. Suddenly a hoopsnake rolled past me at top speed and brought up near the stool pigeon, as if he was going to help the racer strangle the hawk. The

ABOUT DINNER-GIVING.

Some Hints for Ladies Who Like This Form of Hospitality.

Dinner-giving should not be a great tax on any good housekeeper; her domestic affairs should be so arranged and in such good running order that the mere fact of having a few extra persons to entertain is of very little moment. Table decoration, to be in good taste, should be very simple. There was a time, only a few years ago, when we ran into tremendous extremes in this regard, says a writer in Harper's Bazar. At dinners favors were sometimes given, which for many persons it was an embarrassment to accept. But we have seen the folly of all this, and have modified our ways, and now we entertain in a more temperate and certainly in a much more refined manner. Any ostentatious display of wealth is vulgar, and is generally so considered.

Candles are used for lighting dinner tables, chiefly because the light is supposed to be softer and more becoming. These are placed either in single candlesticks, disposed in some regular way on the table, or in low candelabra. Shades are used or not, as one prefers. If they are used, the table decorations should be kept harmonious in color. There is an asbestos lining which can be bought separate from the shades, and can be readily used. This prevents any danger of their burning. The candles themselves should be very cold, and if they are laid in an ice-chest all day, they will burn evenly, without any of that disagreeable melting which is so disfiguring to the candle. There are all sorts and kinds of devices used as a substitute for candles, but the best taste is to have the real thing, and with just a little thought given to the subject the wax candles ought to burn satisfactorily. Small lamps are often used, and sometimes these give no light on the table itself, illumination depending entirely upon a drop-light, which, with a handsome shade, casts a mellow glow on the table, and is absolutely no trouble at all to arrange. I have seen a pretty effect produced, when there was a chandelier directly over the table, by arranging an open Japanese umbrella so that the light was softly diffused through this medium, and at the same time one's head was protected from the heat of the gas.

Flowers should be odorless, if possible, when used for a dinner-table decoration, as strong-scented blossoms are apt to make some persons feel faint. Of course violets, roses and the like would not come under the head of heavy perfumes. The floral decoration should be kept low, so as not to obstruct the view across the table. A boutonniere is often placed at each gentleman's plate, and a long-stemmed rose at each lady's. It is a pretty fashion, sometimes observed, to put a few violets in each finger-bowl. The center-piece can be so arranged as to be fashioned of a number of bouquets, so that after dinner the man or maid can pass a tray upon which these bouquets are placed, and each lady may select her own.

Besides the flowers and the candles there are also placed on the table quaint silver bonbon-dishes containing candies, cake, etc.

When Selecting a Veil.

The salesgirl at the veil counter has some good ideas. Buy a wide enough veil, she urges, always double width, unless it is over a clove bonnet; buy a good quality—the flimsy rags are the most expensive in the end, and never look well at any time of their service; select one of fine net, with a far-apart small dot; the cross-barred meshes make lines on the face that are exactly like wrinkles, and the sprigged and befigured ones are equally unbecoming; don't use an edged veil, it only makes a thick look about the throat as the veils now are gathered under the chin, not left hanging free, and above all, don't wear a veil after it is torn; a slit across one eye or on the nose, or showing a bit of hair, is intolerable, and spoils an otherwise effective toilet, and finally, always pin, never tie, a veil.

SELF-ROCKING CRADLE.

A Novelty That Will Be Welcomed by Many Tired Mothers.

A cradle set in motion by clockwork mechanism is certainly a novelty, and will be welcomed by many overworked mothers and nurses. In outward appearance this novel cot is much the same as the ordinary wire net bassinets, suspended between two upright supports, the motor being enclosed in a metal casing, which is fixed in the front part of the cot. The mechanism is wound up with a key and started by a button, when it will produce a steady and noiseless rocking motion at a very slow and gentle speed, lasting from one to forty minutes. The swinging motion can be stopped and restarted at will by a simple contrivance, and the

LARGEST OF DIAMONDS.

Said to Have Been Sent to the Pope at Rome.

It Weighs More Than Nine Hundred and Seventy-One Carats Which, in Avoirdupois, is Equivalent to Nearly Half a Pound.

According to a cablegram received from London, the pope has received from the president of the Transvaal republic a diamond weighing 971 carats. The stone was found in the Jagersfontein mines and is declared to be the largest known.

The cablegram states that the monster diamond is of a bluish-white cast and practically perfect, its only blemish being a tiny spot in the center, invisible to the naked eye.

Why the president of the Transvaal republic has sent it to the pope is not made clear. It is not to be supposed that he has made a present to his holiness of a stone valued at $1,000,000. Probably his object was to get a free advertisement for his little republic and the big diamond found there.

The Jeweler's Circular prints a picture of the diamond, showing its actual size. This was received from a correspondent in South Africa. The Circular presumes that the diamond referred to is the one known as the Jagersfontein Excelsior.

It was picked up by a native while he was loading a truck. Although a white overseer was standing near him, he managed to hide it and keep it on his person for some time. It turned out, however, that he did not wish to steal it, for he delivered it personally to the manager. As a reward he received $750 and a horse and saddle.

The exact weight of the diamond is 971 1/4 carats, or about seven and one-quarter ounces avoirdupois. It therefore weighs uncut nearly half a pound.

In its present condition it measures three inches in length, one and a half inches in thickness, two and a half inches at its greatest breadth and one and a third inches at its least breadth. It is of a beautiful bluish color and is shaped like the broken-off end of an icicle.

The flaw in it is believed to be more serious than is stated in the cable dispatch.

patch. It is a black spot near the middle. It could be cut in two, however, so as to leave out the blemish. It would then make two of the largest diamonds in existence. At the time of its discovery it was valued at $1,000,000.

The largest cut diamond in the world is the Orloff in the scepter of the emperor of Russia, weighing 104 1/2 carats. It is cut in the rose form, with a flat surface below. According to one story, it formed the eye of an Indian idol and was stolen by a French deserter. In 1773 Count Orloff bought it for Empress Catherine at a cost of $450,000.

The next largest is the Pitt diamond, bought in 1793 by Mr. Pitt, governor of Madras, for $100,000. The duke of Orleans, regent of France, bought it for Louis XV. for $650,000. It is now reported to be worth twice that sum. At the time of the revolution it was sent to Berlin, but reappeared in the hit of the sword of state used by Napoleon I. It weighs 138 1/2 carats, but originally weighed 410.

After this comes the Florentine, or Grand Duke, now in the possession of the emperor of Austria. It is of a yellow color, oblong in shape and cut in the rose pattern. Its exact weight is given as 135.10 carats. Tradition says it was lost by Charles the Bold at the battle of Gronson and picked up by a Swiss soldier who sold it for a few pence.

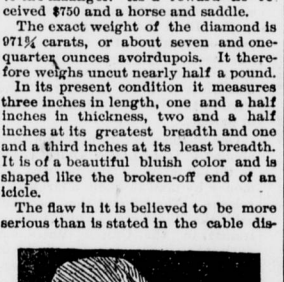

The Kohinoor, the largest diamond in the possession of the British crown, is believed to be the finest and purest in existence. It also has the most singular history. The Indian legend says that it was found in one of the Golconda mines, near the Krishna river, and was worn 5,000 years ago by Karma, one of the heroes celebrated in the Mahabharata. It passed through many hands to Baber, founder of the Mogul dynasty, in 1526. Tavernier, the French explorer, saw it in 1665.

It was then of the shape of half an egg and weighed 259 carats. It had been reduced to that weight from 795 1/2 carats by an unskillful stonecutter.

In 1759 it passed to Nadir Shah, the Persian invader of India, who gave it its name of Kohinoor, or mountain of light. In 1849, when the conquest of the Punjab was finally completed, it was surrendered to the British, and in 1850 it was presented to Queen Victoria.

When it was shown in the exhibition of 1857 in London it weighed 186 1-10 carats. Since then it has been recut, and now weighs 106 1-10.

It has been conjectured that the Kohinoor originally formed parts of the same stone as the Orloff diamond, both of them having once been in the possession of the Great Mogul. A stone of 132 carats captured by Abbas Mirza at the storming of Cooclia in 1832 may be a third fragment. This was long used by a peasant as a flint for striking fire.
