It has been noticed that eggs through out Georgia, being packed in the strong, resinous pine sawdust of the region, have, when eaten, a decided flavor of turpentine, which, though unpleasant, may not be unwholesome. It must be hard to tell whether such eggs are fresh or not.

HARRISDURG, May 20.—There is nothing left for the lawmakers to do but work if they expect to get away by June 6. The house calendar is crowded with bills, many of which will be dropped to save time and hasten the final adjournment. The senate continues to move along in that leisurely manner which has characterized its proceedings all through thesesion. The calendar is clear of senate bills and crowded with house measures on final passage. The latter number about 200, and will have to be disposed of before the representatives will agree to adjourn.

The greatest interest centres in the house proceedings. Aside from the fafter of to-night, when members will be brought up for contempt, there will be much business of general importance to transact. To-morrow will be the busiest day, the first order being the consideration, on their only hope is in the senate or a conference committee.

To-morrow will be the busiest day, the first order being the consideration, on third reading, of the congressional, legis-lative and sematorial apportionment bills. Judging from the unanimity with which these measures passed second reading they will pass the flual stage by a comfortable majority. The representatives from coun-ties which lose in representation by the apportionment will oppose the measure. They are, however, in the minority, and their only hope is in the senate or a con-ference committee.

The apportionment bills out of the way, the house will turn its attention to the Smith school bill, which distributes the appropriation by scattering one third according to the number of teachers actually employed for a full term and the balance on the basis of the number of taxables. Mr. Smith has served notice that he will call the bill up temorrow morning. The opposition to his proposition is too strong to overcome, and for this reason the member from Bedford will try to change the bill to meet all objections. This will not be an easy task. What suits the rural members does not satisfy the "city chaps," and vice versa.

Should there be a full house on Wednesday, when the order of business will be canate bills on third reading, the Quay

Should there be a full house on Wed-nesday, when the order of business will be senate bills on third reading, the Quay county bill will be called up for final pas-sage. This measure has gone through the senate and is on the house calendar among the postponed bills for third reading. Mr. Kunkel believes he can pass it with a full house, notwithstanding the fierce opposition of the rural members.

pass it with a full house, notwithstanding the floree opposition of the rural members.

The appropriation bills are being gotten out of the way as fast as they come from committee. About forty have passed finally, and there are seventy on the calendar for second reading. These will all be disposed of this week, so that the general appropriation bill may have a clear track. Chairman Marshall is working on the bill and hopes to have it in shape to bring out this week. He stayed over in the city Saturday and Sunday to work on the bill. The various departments of state have submitted their items for the next two years. Mr. Marshall is not waiting on the chief clerks of the senate and house to get their figures in shape.

The bill will be reported with the school appropriation reduced to $10,000,000. This is absolutely necessary if the state charities are to be given a show. Chairman Marshall has figured very closely, and sees no way out of the difficulty but to reduce the school appropriation. The institutions dependent entirely upon the state will require $3,05,053. This includes the indigent insane, National Guard, peniterial read and state hospitals. The institution for the billnd deaf and dumb and feeble minded must have 847,434.50, and the private institutions dependent partly upon the state than the state of the same state of committee, and many have pensed finally.

who must be brought before the bar of the house this evening and purge themselves of contempt.

The whole trouble arose over the tendency of the members to go home on Thursday evenings and neglect the Friday session, without first obtaining the necessary leave of absence from the house. With the near approach of the end of the session work must be pushed, and a sharp lesson was needed to make the members attend to their duties. It was the first time since the session of 1850 that the speaker was sompelled to send the sorgeant-arams after absent members; but even then it was not found necessary to issue a warrant for the absentees, as enough members were found in Harrisburg to make up the quorum. On Friday, however, the full powers of the house were exhausted without securing a quorum, and the speaker was compelled to adjourn the house and issue his warrant for all those who were absent without leave.

When the speaker rapped the house to order there were not more than about seventy-five members in their seats, and the session was not fifteen minutes old when a call was narrowly averted. Representative Martin offered a resolution fixing a special order for the Fritz bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be made to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be a could be seen to the first bill to change the method of apportioning the could be a could be

So successful were they in this that when, a short time later, Representative Cochrane called for the yeas and nays on the bill imposing a tax of 4 mills on the value of bank stock, 117 members, 14 more than a quorum, answered to their names. The train had hardly left, however, when senate bills on second reading were reached and Representative Peltz moved to take up from the postponed list the Grady anti-pool selling bill. On this motion the yeas and nays were again demanded, and the vote showed 77 in favor and 18 against, a total of 36, or eight less than a quorum. Then the trouble began. Speaker Walton ordered all strangers out of the house and the doors were locked. The roll was then called and showed ninety-five members present. Sergeant-at-Arms Shoener was called to the bur of the house and instructed to go out and arrest all the memneted to go out and arrest all the mem

The first member brought in was Representative Patchin, of Clearfield, but as he explained that he had just stepped out for a moment as the doors were closed, he was oxcused. Subsequently, when it was shown that Patchin had been present and voted on the main question, he was notified that he had not been in contempt.

J. Ross Raymond, of Eric, was the next one brought in, but he explained that having been suddenly called to Philadelphia Thursday night, he had missed the morning train and had just arrived, and was also excused.

There were still only 100 members present, and after waiting for over an hour the sergeant-at-arms explained that he had searched all the depots and hotels, but had been unable to find any more members. Of the 104 who were still absent the record showed that twenty-nine had been granted leave of absence. For the others Speaker Waiton made out a warrant of arrest, which he gave to the sergeant-at-arms, and then adjourned the house until Monday evening.

The affair has created considerable excitement among the members who remained, and there is talk of inflicting some severe penalties as examples. The house has absolute power in the matter and can inflict heavy fines or even expel a member. As the arrest of the seventy-four members will inflict a heavy exponse on the state in the way of the sergeant-at-arms' fees and mileage, there is some talk of compelling the absent members to foot the bill in the way of fines.

Trolley Car Fell with a Bridge

Trolley Car Fell with a Bridge.

Normistrows, Pa., May 20.—A bridge on the Philadelphia and Reading pike crossing the Trenton cut off railroad in Plymouth township, fell Saturday afternoon, carrying down with it summer car No. 18 of the Schuylkill Valley Traction company, crossing at the time. The bridge, a temporary wooden structure, was seventy-two feet long and thirty feet high. The car contained the fatal number thirteen persons, but owing to some fortunate circumstance no one was killed, and only five were seriously injured.

HARRISBURG, May 20.— In February, 1894, as a merry sleighing party from this city was returning home, on their way through Steelton a car of the Citizens' line struck the sleigh and overturned it. Several of the party were injured, and one of them, William Mehaffle, died sometime afterward. It was claimed that his death resulted from his injuries, and his father brought suit against the Citizens' company for $10,000 damages. The jury Saturday night brought in a verdict of $1,200 for the father.

The Most Severe Form of Retrench ment Will Only Pay the Way in the Future-No Hope for the Present Debts---Efforts To Raise Money in Montreal Fail.

Very Grave.

St. John's, N. F., May 19.—Confederation, or rather the refusal of Newfoundland to enter the dominion of Canada on the terms proposed, is the sole topic of conversation here. Everybody is pleased that no attempt was made to urge the acceptance of the terms upon the house or people. The government appears to be frightened in the face of the severe retrenchment that is necessary to preserve the equilibrium of receipts and expenditures, and has postponed the introduction in the house of its retrenchment proposals until Tuesday next. These retrenchments will include the curtailment of every branch of the public service.

Furthermore, it is questionable if retrenchment, however severe, will be capable of arresting the colony's progress towards bankruptcy. There is nearly $3,000,000 of floating debt, deficts, loans due banks, interest, etc., requiring some form of settlement by June 30. The

If the Allison and McKinley forces are so evenly divided as to prevent the nomination of either, a dark horse, probably Senator Cullom, will be nominated.

Albany, May 21.—United States Senator David B. Hill was much pleased when he learned that the United States supreme court had declared the income tax law unconstitutional. The senator has received many congratulatory telegrams from all sections of the country, some of them recalling the fact that he was the only democratic senator who refused to vote for the tariff bill on account of the incorporation of the incorporation of the income tax feature in the measure. Best Decision in This Decade.

In speaking of the decision Senator II is said: "I never believed the income tax provision to be constitutional and hence sincerely regretted its unwise and foolish insertion in a tariff reform bill. The decision that it is unconstitutional will afford relief everywhere and tend to increase business prosperity which is slowly but surely reviving. Undoubtedly In some sections of the country there will arise a demand for an amendment of the constitution so as to enable an income tax law to be passed, but it will be unavailing, spasmodic, and silly. The battle has been fought and won; no direct taxes will ever hereafter be imposed by the federal government, but such taxes will be reserved to the several states. The supreme court of the United States is entitled to the thanks of the country for its decision. The decision will do more for our country, will be of more lasting benefit to our free institutions, will clear the political atmosphere better than anything that has occurred in this decade."

Remarkable Sagacity of Deacon Deeter's Setter Dog.

Nose for Woodcock Has Prob Never Been Surpassed—Trap Has the Keenest Nose Ever Seen on a Dog.

"Speaking of bird dogs," said Deacon Deeter to a Philadelphia Times man, "I think my setter dog Trap has the keenest nose I ever saw on a dog."
"Guess you never noticed my hound Towser, did you, deacon? He'll follow a deer or bear as long as they keep on the ground. Not many dogs have a better nose than he has, according to my way of thinking," remarked Al Petterbaugh.
"My dog Trap don't take to bear and deer. Birds are his game, and any time he don't smell a game bird it ain't my way of thinking," remarked Al Petterbaugh.

"My dog Trap don't take to bear and deer. Birds are his game, and any time he don't smell a game bird it ain't there, that's all," replied the deacon.

"To show you what kind of a nose that dog has," continued the deacon, "I'll tell you what he did on Cider Run last spring when I was trout fishing. Pete Kitcher and I went to Cider Run, in Wyoming county, last spring to spend a week fishing. We went into camp near a spring on the bank of the stream, where there was a deep eddy with overhanging bank. It was during the latter part of May and the weather was fine. As Trap seemed anxious to go along I took him, knowing that he would be better off there than running around at home, and I am glad now that I took him, for he developed points on that trip that made me proud to be his owner.

"On the morning following our arrival we got up early, and while Pete was preparing breakfust I stepped down to the stream to wash, the dog following me. When we arrived at the bank I was surprised to see the dog straighten out on a point just as he would when pointing a game bird, and then to his side and then in front of him, but could discover nothing to warrant his madding game so strangely. I tried to call him off point, but he remained stanch. I thought the fool dog must be crazy, so I took hold of his collar and pulled him away and into camp. While we were at breakfast I missed

"Again I looked closely, but could see nothing unusual. I left him there while I got my fishing outfit ready, and returning found him still standing there. I called him off again and started up-stream, but hadn't gone more than a mile before I missed the dog. When I returned in the evening I found Trap on point at the old spot. So he kept on for four or five days, scarcely leaving his point long enough to eat or sleep. His actions worried me, for I feared some disease had overtaken and would ruin him. On the fifth day, I think it was, Pete suggested that we find out what the dog was standing on. So we both looked closely into the water and on the bank, and finally I leaned over and looked back under the bank, and there, much to my surprise, I saw over and looked back under the bank, and there, much to my surprise, I saw a large trout lying quetly near the bottom, slowly fanning the water with his fins. I called Pete to take a look at him, for he was a whopper. We tried everything to try and make him bite, but he wouldn't do it. So Pete started for the tent and made a wire snare, with which, after several trials, he finally landed him.

"When the old fellow landed on the bank the dog backed off and came to a point, and all the while we were admiring and measuring the trout the dog took the keenest interest and kept his point. That trout was a whopper, indeed, measuring just 18½ inches. Pete cleaned him and threw the entrails into the brush. Trap followed them and again came to a beautiful point. What in 'tarnal alis that dog?' I asked Pete. 'I don't know,' said Pete, 'but I'm going to find out if I can.' So into the brush he went and brought out the entrails and cut them open, the dog watching him all the while. What do you think that trout had inside of him? You'd never guess, so I'll tell you. It was a young woodcock, about half grown. Talk about dogs' noses. Trap had been standing that woodcock for five days."

Sample of Maine Gallantry.

This incident illustrates the sort of gallantry that is most prevalent in this degenerate age: As a Knox county (Me.) man and his wife were passing the schoolhouse a flying snowball hit the wife of his bosom in the neck. He was enraged and justly, and, turning to the schoolboys, shaking his fist in anger he cried: "It's lucky for you, you rascals, that you didn't hit me!"
