

IT WAS A GREAT RACE

Columbia's Victory Was Easily Won.

Pennsylvania Boys Had Hard Luck—Their Shell Was Swamped and They Did Not Finish—Cornell's Boat Sunk and Broken in Two After the Race.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25.—Almost in the face of a stiff wind and in water so rough that the boats of her two opponents fled and swamped—one before and the other after the finish line was passed—Columbia rowed steadily on to victory last evening in the fast time of 21 minutes and 25 seconds. Cornell was second, seven lengths back. Her time was 31 minutes and 40 2-5 seconds. Pennsylvania's evil luck lasted to the end. Her shell, smashed from the waves from Governor Morton's tug last Friday and patched up till it was practically as good as new, went down over a mile from the finish. The Cornell boat was swamped just below her own bowhouse, after the race was over, by swells from the steamboats, and was fairly broken in two. Pennsylvania's shell suffered little.

Cornell Was the Favorite.
There seemed to be much less betting before the crowd moved across to the west shore than on Friday. The odds showed some change. The Cornell men, instead of giving 4 and 3 to 1 against Columbia, offered 2 to 1, which was eagerly accepted. The Columbia men had more money than anybody else here and snapped up everything that was offered. The members of the crew staked an amount aggregating fully $8,000 at average odds of 2 to 1. Cornell was a 7 to 5 favorite over the field yesterday. On Columbia against Pennsylvania the betting was even. Scarcely any bets between Cornell and Pennsylvania were recorded.

Soaked the Spectators.
At 5 o'clock rain began to fall. It came in a squall from the southeast and poured down in torrents. The wind drove it squarely into the faces of the 1,800 people on the observation train. The women in their light summer costumes winced visibly and looked dubiously at their white lace parasols. The men tried to cover their straw hats and a good many of them crawled under the cars. The rain ceased at about 5:30. At 6 o'clock the crews were ready to start, but considerable trouble was being had in anchoring the stake boats. Up to this time the water had been extremely smooth. It had been still all day except during the storm, and after the rain stopped it became smooth as glass.

A Pretty Start.
It was 6:56 when the starter's pistol sounded, and the three crews, catching the water practically at the same instant, got away together, making a pretty start. The Pennsylvania crew pulled with more vim than either the Cornell or Columbia, and set the pace for the first quarter mile. They forged ahead a couple of feet in the first half-dozen strokes, while Columbia in the center and Cornell on the outside were rowing exactly even. Cornell was pulling 44 strokes, while Columbia with her long easy sweep kept her place with 36 strokes. Pennsylvania rowed from 36 to 38 strokes at the start. Columbia pulled the cleanest stroke of the three crews and Pennsylvania the most uneven.

The Half Mile.
At the half mile the University of Pennsylvania boat lost by a quarter of a length, while the bow of Cornell's boat was a foot in advance of Columbia's. Then the shells began to strike rougher water than they found at the start. The Cornell crew on the outside got the worst of it, but Pennsylvania, on the inside, took it in the poorest shape. The other boats gradually drew upon Pennsylvania, and then it was noticed that the long easy stroke of the Columbia crew was gradually moving toward the front. Pennsylvania dropped back to the rear at the three-quarter mark and was not in the race thereafter. Cornell hung on pluckily, and at the end of the first mile the race appeared to belong to anybody.

Cornell Splashed Badly.
The first mile was made in 5 minutes, 11 seconds. Columbia had a good half length the best of it, and Cornell led Pennsylvania by six feet. At the two-mile mark with half the course yet before them Columbia had a lead of two lengths. Cornell was splashing badly, but had added half a length to her lead of Pennsylvania. The two miles were made in 10:32, quick time considering the water, which was growing rougher every minute. At two and a half miles Columbia was still going ahead and had two lengths and a half to the good. Pennsylvania was splashing so badly that her shell was beginning to settle in the water.

Pennsylvania's Boat Sunk.
At the three-mile it was Columbia's race, barring accident. Her boat led by four lengths. Cornell was pulling gamely on, but the Pennsylvania boat was getting deeper and deeper in the water, and just after passing under the bridge the crew stopped rowing. The men were sitting in water and their boat was sinking. Their launch, which had noticed their condition some time previously and had kept close to the crew, was quickly alongside and took the men aboard.

Finished in a Walk.
From the three-mile point to the end of the race was a procession. Columbia seeing that they had the race well in hand eased down a little, as the water was rough. It was 7:15:25 when Columbia crossed the line. They had made the four miles in 21 minutes and 25 seconds, beating Cornell seven lengths. Cornell's time was 31 minutes, 40 2-5 seconds.

Cornell's Fall for the Shore.
The Cornellians started off gamely to row to the west shore, about three-quarters of a mile away, on the Poughkeepsie side. Their boat had nearly as much water in it as that of the Quakers had had when it sank. The steamboats and launches that had followed the crews down were ploughing up the water at a great rate, and the Cornell crew was so low in the water that it soon gave signs that it was going down, as Pennsylvania's had done. The men hit up the famous Cornell stroke pretty close to fifty, and managed to get well in shore before the slump came.

As the water washed across the shell the men prevented from going down altogether, and a rowboat put out from shore to their assistance. Five of them grabbed the rowboat on one side and over it rolled, dumping its two occupants into the water with the Cornell crew. The rowboat went down too. The Cornell launch steamed up and picked up all hands.

Admiral Kirkland and all the officers of the ship received the emperor on the quarter deck. All the officers were presented. The passengers became frightened, and many of them tried to get under the seats. The hailstones covered the ground over which the storm passed to a depth of several inches. # THE CHINESE TREATY

Interesting Details Given Out at Washington.

The Territory Ceded To Japan and the Money Indemnity—Condition Regarding the Inhabitants of the Country Given Up—Li Hung Chang's Successful Efforts.

Washington, June 20.—Copies of the full text of the treaty of peace between China and Japan and of the documentary history of the negotiations have been received in this city. The general purport of the document signed at Shimonoeki, Japan, April 17, 1895, and ratified by exchange of signed copies at Chefoo, China, May 8, 1895, has already been made public, but many interesting details have not been furnished by telegraph. The territory ceded by China to Japan, including all fortifications, arsenals and public property thereon, is described as follows:

The Territory Ceded.

The southern portion of the province of Feng-Tien, the line of demarcation beginning at the mouth of the river Yalu; thence to the mouth of the river Au-Ping; thence to Feng Huang; thence to Heichang; thence to Ying-Kaw; thence by the river Lino to its mouth. All the places named are included in the ceded territory. Also all the islands belonging to the province of Feng-Tien in the eastern part of the bay of Lino-Tung and in the northern portion of the Yellow sea.

Formosa and All Its Connections.

The island of Formosa, together with all the islands appertaining to it. The Pescadoras group, that is all the islands lying within the 119th and 120th degree of longitude east and 23d and 24th degree of latitude north. The alignments of the frontiers described shall be verified and marked by a joint commission, whose work shall be done within a year.

The Indemnity.

Of the 200,000,000 Kuping taels $160,000,000 in gold indemnity to be paid by China, half is to be paid in one year in two equal instalments, the last payable in seven years. Interest is fixed at five per cent, but if China pays the whole sum (she may anticipate payment of all or any part of it) within three years, all interest shall be waived and the interest for two and a half years or an shorter period if then already paid shall be included as part of the principal.

Regarding the Inhabitants.

Inhabitants of the ceded territory desire to reside outside may do so and two years is given them in which to sell their real estate and retire. Inhabitants then remaining in the territory shall, at the option of the Japanese government, be deemed Japanese citizens.

Occupation of Wei-Hai-Wei.

Three separate articles relate to the temporary occupation of Wei-Hai-Wei by Japanese troops. The force shall not consist of more than one brigade; China is to pay one-fourth of the cost of the occupation, fixed at 500,000 Kuping taels ($400,000). The territory to be occupied shall comprise the island of Lau-Kong, and a belt of land of Japanese King, and along the entire coast line of the bay. Civil administration shall be in the hands of Chinese officials, who must conform, however, to the orders given by the commander of the Japanese forces in the management of the troops.

Original Demands Modified.

A study of the documentary history of the negotiations shows that the original demands of Japan were materially modified before they took final form. In the treaty under the protests of Li Hung Chang, the venerable Chinese plenipotentiary—the amount of indemnity was reduced from three hundred to two hundred million taels with easier terms of payment. One place, Wei-Hai-Wei, was accepted for temporary occupation instead of two, including Feng-Tien-Fu (Moukden) in the province of Sheng-King; the opportunity of substituting a financial for a territorial guarantee, and other modifications.
