DEATH OF DANIEL COXE.

DIED SUDDENLY AT HIS HOME ON FRIDAY EVENING.

Received a Severe Shock on Friday Af-ternoon by Being Thrown from His Miniature Locomotive—Died a Few Hours Later from the Effects.

Hours Later from the Effects. Daniel Coxe, of Drifton, died at his home on Friday evening at two minutes of 8 o'clock. His death was sudden and unexpected, and his friends and the pub-lic in general could scarcely believe the report when the news of the sad event reached town. In the afternoon he had been engaged in testing his narrow-gauged roadbed, which was relaid a few weeks aco. He was riding on engine been engaged in testing his harrow-gauged roadbed, which was reliaf a few weeks ago. He was riding on engine-No, 4, the latest of the miniature loco-motives which he had built for use on the nine-ineh track. With his train of little ears he was running at a fair rate of speed, and while crossing the turnpike near the shops the locomotive met with an obstruction on the rails and was thrown off. Mr. Cose was pitched to one side rather violently, but did not appear to be in jured to any extent, beyond receiv-ing a general shaking up. Knowing, however, that he was physically weak, friends induced him to return to his home, which was done. After being there a short while he began to grow li-none, which was the began to grow there a short while he began to grow to aid him. Drs. Wentz, Morton and Gayley re-sponded with promptness and did what they could to relieve his sufferings. The news of the accident, in the mean-time, became known here, and many expressions of sympathy were heard for the young man. None, however, thought for a moment that the end was so near, and when the announcement was made that death had overtaken Mr. Coxe the people of town were astounded and could not, for some time, really believe that it was true. If the head been absolutely incapacitat-ed for work, his indomitable will over-and even disadvantage, and on his uncle's death he was actually able to step into public life—and he was still a boy. If his life had only been spared the effect of his example, as his circle of in-calculable benefit. He was one of those men whose mere existence is an absolute or dogma, and proves over again that the fiesh merely lives that the spirit may inhabit it. Drawn as Jurymen.

He was married October 10, 1894, to Miss Margaret B. White, daughter of J.

Miss Margaret B. White, daughter of J. B. White. He was very popular in this region and all of the Coxe employes, as well asothers, admired him for his freedom of manner and goodness of heart. He mingled with the men and made their interests his own and thus gained their, good will and highest esteem. In fact, it has al-ways been said that no citizen in the lower end has been more popular than young Daniel Coxe. The deceased's ancestor, Dr. Daniel Coxe, came from England in 1702 and was married to Sarah, daughter of Judge Eckley, of the Pennsylvania supreme court. Dr. Coxe became governor of New Jersey; he died in 1730. Hi-son, Colonel Daniel Coxe, was born in 1663 and died in 1734; his son, William, was born in 1733 and died in 1801; hi-son, Hon. Tench Coxe, was born in 1755 and died in 1824; his son, Judge Charles S. Coxe, grandfather of the subject of this sketch, was born in Philadelphia, July 31, 1791, and died November 19, 1879; his son, Alexander B. Coxe, father of deceased, was also born in Philadel-phia and removed to Drifton, where he now resides. A Public Misfortune.

how resides. A Public Misfortune. From Yosterday's Philadelphia Times. The death of Daniel Coxe, of Drifton, is in more ways than one a public mis-fortune. Not only will his loss be deep-ly felt in the great mining town where he was held in peculiar esteem and af-fection; but he dies before the people of the state could learn what an extraordi-nary example he was of the power of the human spirit. Mr. Coxe had been almost from babyhood of such infirm and precarions healt that very preser-vation of life in his frail tenement was a marvel. a marvel. The greatest care was neces-sary even to mitigate his constant suffer-ing. He had not the physical stength of a child. Yet nothing could quench his passion for study, experiment and administra-tion, and though for years of his brief life he had been absolutely incapacitat-ed for work, his indomitable will over-came every disadvantage, and on his uncle's death he was actually able to step into public life—and he was still a boy.

people of town were astounded and could not, for some time, really believe that it was true.
His parents, Alex. B. Coxe and wife, had left for Atlantic City on Saturday morning. They were notified immediately, and lost no time in returning. Special Meeting of Council. There was a large attendance at the special meeting of council on Thursday evening. All the councilmen, excepting Mr. Winter, were present to take action on the report of the lockup committee in the Donop hall matter. The committee, through Chairman Brishn, reported that they had met with the owner, W. D. Cowan, and had agreed to purchase the property at $2,100. Before proceeding to business the secretary read the resig-nation of Councilman L. Winter. Something of the indomitable will power and marvelous vitality of Rt. Rev. Bishop O'Hara's who is in his eigh-tieth year, can be learned from what he accomplished in one day last week. He arose at 5 o'clock in the morning, said his oflice, which took an hour; at 6.30 celebrated mass, and after the mass confirmed a class of thirty children at Wilkesbarre, giving them instructions before and after imparting the sacra-ment. He had breakfast at s and then took the train for Ridgeberry, a distance of 162 miles. Father Hussie's church is five miles from the railway station, and Immediatelyafter arriving he had dinner, and then dedicated the church; after that ceremony he confirmed a large class of children, giving them instru-tion, and got in his carriago, was driven a few miles to visit a priest, and from there five miles back to the railway stat-thor, returning to Scranton by train.
