Public and Private Educational Statistics.

Figures Showing the Number of Institutions of Learning, Pupils and Teachers and the Cost—Value of School Property in the United States—Dr. Harris' Report.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Dr. William T. Harris, United States commissioner of education, has made public his fifth annual report for the school year ended November 30, 1893. It comprises three parts, the first of which is devoted to statistics. These show that in the year 1892-93 the whole number of pupils enrolled in schools and colleges, public and private, in the United States was 15,983,630 or 22.5 per cent. of the entire population. This was an increase over the preceding year of 370,697, and the total would be increased to 15,400,000 if pupils in attendance upon special educational agencies were included. The enrollment of pupils in the public schools for the year numbered 13,510,719, an increase of 1.92 per cent. over the preceding year, while the average attendance increased 3.45 per cent. The details of attendance show that children in the United States leave school for the first time at the age of 14 years, and that 10 per cent. of the population are engaged in labor or from other motives.

Value of School Property.

There were employed in that year 122,056 male teachers and 369,454 female. There has been a decrease in the number of male teachers since 1880 and the number of female teachers has increased 70 per cent. in that period. The number of school houses in 1893 was 235,426, valued with their contents and appliances at $399,435,039. The school revenue for the year was $455,000,000, the total expenditures were $153,000,000. Of this amount $104,000,000 were paid for teachers' wages; $31,000,000 for the construction of school houses and $28,000,000 for fuel, supplies, etc. In the last twenty years the value of school property in the United States and the common school expenditures have more than doubled. The number of pupils in high schools reported to the bureau in 1893 was 2,812, employing 9,489 teachers and having 232,951 pupils enrolled. Reports were received from 1,434 private high schools and academies employing 6,361 teachers and giving instruction to 96,147 pupils. There were 451 universities and colleges for both sexes. Of these 319 were in the United States, an increase of three per cent. in two years. The total number of instructors was 10,247 and of pupils 140,053.

Colleges for Women.

Colleges for women alone numbered 145 with 2,114 teachers and 29,919 students. These institutions had an increase of three per cent. in two years. The total number of instructors was 10,247 and of pupils 140,053. The amount appropriated by states for support of normal schools this year was $1,452,914, and for buildings $816,826.

BIG CARGOES OF LEMONS. Arrival of Two Fruit Steamers May Break the Present Famine.

New York, Oct. 1.—The lemon famine will probably be removed temporarily at least by the arrival here of two big cargoes of the fruit. Last week lemons sold at auction by the box at $10.25, and by the case at $12.50, while the buyer for the household had to pay from 40 to 50 cents a dozen to the retailers. The steamer Sylvia arrived here last evening from Messina and Palermo with a cargo of lemons consisting of over 28,000 boxes, and the steamer Victoria from Malaga, Spain, is due in a few days with 22,000 more boxes. The greater portion of these cargoes will be sold at auction.

TOMBSTONE RHYMES.

Remarkable Samples Discovered in New England Cemeteries. It is common to say that makers of gravestones have little regard for the truth; "monumental liars," they are sometimes called. But though the good side of the departed is generally—and properly—emphasized, there are many instances in which a spirit of frankness seems to have possessed the village poets, whose services are so much in demand on mortuary occasions.

In a Vermont cemetery, according to an exchange, one may read the following epitaph, which certainly does not err on the side of flattery:

Here lies in silent clay Miss Arabella Young, Who, on the 21st of May, Began to hold her tongue.

And here is a quatrain, never before in print, of a curiously similar import:

Here lies the body of Hannah Thurber, Once she talked, and none could curb her; Three husbands had she, all are dead, They died of carache, so 'tis said.

In the same rural cemetery where this last outspoken epiphany is found, visitors sometimes pause to smile at the ingenious grief of a widower whose change of mood in the concluding couplet was perhaps quite unintentional:

In memory of Susan Glover, My wife most true and kind; Though I should marry ten times over, Her like I shall not find.

Grammatical correctness is perhaps too much to ask of the unprofessional muse. Meter and rhyme are hard tasks, and while a man is intent upon minding them, he is almost to be pardoned for using a little too much of that very convenient article known as poetic license. In a case like the following we may praise the smoothness of the verse rather than laugh at the ruggedness of the grammatical construction:

Pause, good friend, and drop a tear, The body of John Pratt is here. This is the day when you will be Under the sod as deep as I.

The amateur poet is troubled not only by the trammels of meter and rhyme, but by the narrow space in which he is obliged to work. It is impossible to say everything in four lines, and, as a consequence, much must be left to the understanding of the reader. So it was, no doubt, with the author of the following:

Beneath this stone lies William Bett, In a river he was drowned; A squall came up, his boat upset, His body was never found.

THE GOOSE BARNACLE. One of the Most Interesting Members of the Shellfish Family.

The goose barnacle does not attach itself to an object rigidly by its shell, like the common barnacle, but by a disk, at the base of a stem or a neck, and it is from this stem or neck that it gets the name of goose barnacle. With a glue or secretion of its own it attaches itself so tightly that it is difficult to scrape it off; but the neck is flexible. The body of the goose barnacle, when its hand or feeder is within its shell and out of sight, looks something like a soft-shelled clam; and it is, in fact, sometimes called the clam barnacle. The goose barnacle is not unusual in the waters around New York.

In its earliest existence the goose barnacle, like other barnacles, is a free swimmer, but it very soon attaches itself, and thereafter it remains fast. It may hitch on to a spile in a tideway or to some other fixed object, but it is generally found moored to a floating object, a piece of wood, a plank, or the side of a vessel; fastened to a moving object it is more likely to get sufficient sustenance.

The barnacle lives upon animalcula. It fishes for its food with a feeder, which it throws out from its shell and uses something like a hand or a net. The feeder is made up of many slender little fingers, with delicate feathery lateral projections, through which the water passes easily, but which retain the animalcula. The barnacle throws this feeder out from its shell and sweeps it through the water and over into its shell again with whatever it can collect. It repeats this until it is no longer hungry.

The barnacle here pictured was until recently at the New York aquarium at Castle Garden. It was taken from the back of a loggerhead turtle captured in the bay. The goose barnacle is delicate in captivity, and this one proved no exception to the rule. In color its shell was not unlike that of a clam. The growth seen on the side and back of the shell and on the neck of the barnacle is a fine, brown, mossy, marine vegetation often seen on such barnacles. There were also on the shell of this barnacle three or four minute barnacles of the ordinary kind, extremely small, each perhaps not more than an eighth of an inch across, and yet each provided with one of those wonderful hands or nets wherewith to supply itself with food.—N. Y. Sun.

SYMPATHY FOR CUBANS. Two Big Meetings in Chicago Last Night.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Surrounded by patriotic mottoes, with the American flag in the background, the declaration of independence as a text book and the spirit of liberty as an inspiration, 4,000 persons yelled themselves hoarse last night in the cause of Cuban independence. There are no doubt have been more enthusiastic than the meeting held in Chicago itself. Central Music hall was not big enough to hold all the sympathizers and there was an overflow meeting in the auditorium of the Young Men's Christian association building. At both meetings the same resolutions were adopted and speeches were made by men prominent in civic affairs, all of which unambiguously favored the freedom of the little island in the thralldom of Spain. The resolutions express sympathy for the revolutionists; call on the United States to recognize them as belligerents and ask other countries to join in making this demand. They begin with the best known paragraph in the Declaration of Independence and end with a determination to continue the work begun at last night's big assemblages.

Messages of Sympathy. Messages of sympathy were read from Senator Cullom, Governor Altgeld of Illinois, Russell A. Alger, Mayor Pingree of Detroit, Senator Call of Florida, Mayor Bestwick of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mayor Caldwell of Cincinnati, Mayor Salmonson of Tampa, Fla., and others.

Nearly every prominent club and organization in the city was represented on the list of vice-presidents, which included also the best known business and professional men. Among the associations represented were the Loyal Legion G. A. R., Confederate association, Sons of Revolution, State Federation of labor, Irish American, Scandinavian, German and Afro-American societies.

Proceedings at Central Music Hall. Mayor Swift presided at the meeting at Central Music hall. In opening the proceedings he made no speech, but took occasion to express his interest in the cause of Cuba with the movement. Among the speakers were Rev. Dr. Guisaulus, Thos. B. Bryan, Judge Hines, Congressman Mason, Rev. Dr. Barrows, Bishop Fallows and others. The proceedings closed with the singing of two verses of America. The meeting at Association hall was no less enthusiastic or crowded. Judge Vincent made a few remarks as presiding officer, saying he was a believer in the independence of Cuba, but did not wish to see a violation of national laws. The audience was deeply interested and any good point made was taken up at once.

WOULD SEND 200,000 MEN. Spain's Mighty Effort to Crush the Cuban Rebellion.

Havana, Sept. 28, via Key West, Oct. 1.—Cable advices received here state that rumors circulated in Madrid as to the sending of from 150,000 to 200,000 men to Cuba created much surprise, and that the press of the whole peninsula is discussing the matter. Senor Castellanes, minister for the colonies, gave a guarded opinion, saying that the number had been overestimated, but added that if it became a necessity, the reinforcements would be made up to 200,000 men, but in his opinion, 20,000 will be ample. In Madrid it is also reported that Captain General Martinez Campos wrote to Senor Sagasta stating that a combined force of 100,000 men regulars and volunteers would be ample to crush the rebellion, and that in closing his letter he said that all relief expeditions to the rebels must be stopped at all hazards. The Cuban financial question has had full attention, the Spanish ministry having made ample provisions for all war supplies and expenses.
