WINGS.

Wings that flutter in sunny air; Wings that dive and dip and dare; Wings of the humming bird flashing by; Wings of the hawk in the purple sky; Wings of the eagle aloft, aloft; Wings of the pigeon upon the roof; Wing of the storm bird swift and free; With wild winds sweeping across the seas— Often and often a voice in me sings— O, for the freedom, the freedom of wings!
O, to winnow the air with wings! O, to float far above hurtful things! Things that weary and wear and fret— Deep in the azure to fly and forget; To touch in a moment the mountain's crest, Or haste to the valley for home and rest; To rock with the pine tree as wild birds may, To follow the sailor a summer's day, Over and over a voice in me sings— O, for the freedom, the freedom of wings!
Softly responsive a voice in me sings— That hast the freedom, the freedom of wings! Soon as the glass a second can count Into the heavens thy heart may mount, Hope may fly to the topmost peak, Lone its nest in the vale may seek; Outspreading the sailor Faith's pinions may Touch the ends of the earth in a summer's day. Softly responsive a voice in me sings— That hast the freedom, the freedom of wings! —Mary Butts, in Youth's Companion.

IN GOLD TIME.

BY ROBERTA LITTLEHALE.

He was straight, and grizzled, and keen of eye. He had worked, and fought, and gambled his way through the lawlessness and passion of the state's early life into the decency and uprightness of a successful contractor. His name was Bill Bowen. As a civil engineer, I came more or less in contact with him, and rejoiced in the largeness of his mental mold, as well as in the business sense of security he let me enjoy. One summer's night we took a drive to a distant town on the San Joaquin river. We were to look at stone for a bridge building, and the blistering heat of the day made us willing to lose our sleep for the more comfortable traveling by starlight. The horses jogged lazily through the course, thick dust on the river's levee, and the insects from the grain fields and the frogs from the sloughs had things wholly to themselves until Bill suddenly interrupted: "Mrs. Chase is pretty enough yet to understand why she sent two fellows to the jail, isn't she?" "What are you talking about?" I answered. "Oh," said Bill, pulling himself up, "I forgot you didn't struggle with the rest of us through those groggy days." I knew Bill well enough to let him relapse just so many minutes; then I said: "Judge Chase's wife is lovelier at sixty than most girls at sixteen, but I hadn't any idea she figured so romantically in the early days as to send anybody overboard."

"H'm," replied Bill, reflectively. "The horses traveled on without attention, and I waited in patience. 'You know what it was like,' he began at last. 'Men with guns from all over the union and gold the heaven we sweated for. Prayers, and court, and the gambling tables all running under one roof, and nary a woman's face showing up in the mass to give us courage. To be sure, there were vixenish ribs 'o' Satan who robbed, and killed, and drank with the worst of us; but until '31 we'd never the woman for reverence. Then, by degrees, the lawyers and a stray merchant or two aired their families, but things wasn't dizzy till pretty Grace Blanchard got out with her father."

"Understand, she carried herself as she'd ought to; but, understand, there was men among us as was born and bred to live with blood. The mass of us had to take out our satisfaction in looking at her; but for two the favor in old Blanchard's eyes was easy reading, and it wasn't long seeing the course the straw took. "Ned Emory was a long, lean, blond fellow, with a bladed fine face and a way that made friends of the toughest. They said he looked a swell when he called at the Blanchard's, but I never saw him but like the rest of us—red-shirted and overalled, and an angle to his pistol that made him a joy. "George Stokes—'Shorty,' we called him—was a man with an answer that ripped like a knife and a head that made success of everything, because he could work crooked as well as straight. He'd been on the bench, but he'd located a vein at Mariposa, and was overreaching up there in '52. Naturally, he lost opportunities, not being right on the spot, and the danger began. "The Blanchard house was swelled larger than most of the cabins, and had two long windows that opened onto a porch. Things might never have been so bad but for those two lidless eyes in front. "One fatal night Shorty Stokes rode into the settlement—but I am getting ahead of affairs."

Bill tossed his cigar into the tules, and hurried the horses into effort as the interest of his reminiscence swept him on. "The girl carried herself after the fashion of high steppers, and neither fellow could swear where he stood. It was laughter and spirit for both of them, they said, and nip and tuck for the yielding. The pace was the sort that exhausts men, and Shorty's brain for lawyering cooked up a scheme for his rescue. He was for their going together some night before her, and, after a formal marriage proposal, each argue his claim and fitness for ten minutes by the clock, their honor at stake to stand by her decision. "It got about afterwards that Emory wouldn't consent until he saw the devil to pay in Shorty's earnestness, and they swore with their fists in each other's to carry the thing through to the finish. The date and hour were arranged for the following Sunday night at eight, and they drank to it with gall in the cup. "When the evening came the clock had already struck eight when Stokes reached the Blanchard house.

"The lights from the room fell over the porch, and from the shadow of the steps he saw the something that in all the world he couldn't bear to see—Emory crossing the room to take Grace Blanchard in his arms; Emory with passion paling his face and Grace Blanchard in the beauty of a disturbing humility. "He cursed as he watched them cling to each other, and he cursed his way back to the saloons and his Mariposa mining. "The next day he turned up again in the settlement, with liquor enough aboard to put a wheel in his head, and, after a losing fling at the tables, he started to find Emory. "After a little ineffectual riding, he leaped from the back of his vicious-eyed piebald at the corner that bulged thick with saloons, and stood close to the stirrup with his hand on his hip. Some one who noticed him said his face had the steely intensity of a razor edge. "Then out of the crowd, unconscious, with the music of love in his heart, swung Ned Emory. His hat was pushed back on his fair hair, and he was whistling the overflow out of his veins. "In one instant a bullet rang through the air, followed by another. Emory fell in his own blood, and a horseman was riding off wildly and safe through the shower of bullets that rained around him. Every man with a cyare tube in pursuit, but they only brought back eight half-dead horses. Stokes had staked relay boasts at different points along the road, and was then safe in the chaparral canyons toward the north. "The gambling dens choked up with the crowds; gold dust was heaped on gold dust for the reward of the cowardly hound's capture. Murders weren't rare then, but there was only one Ned Emory, remember. "Four of us wouldn't drop the search. We let the blood-money men get out of the way, and then we worked as we'd toil for only our own. "There was scarcely no scent to follow, for Stokes had bribed the greasers who furnished his horses; but we forced our way along on nothing. Day and night we rode with our eyes open, sometimes bullying and sometimes begging. It began to seem hopeless. The days were running into summer again. "One afternoon, toward twilight, we rested on the crest of a mountain where the path took a sudden turn away from a two-hundred-foot precipice. "We were torn with the snapping branches of the greasewood, and full of extreme dirt and disgust. Suddenly we heard the rustle of a step on the fallen leaves. Under a live oak, not thirty yards away, on the very edge of the cliff, stood Shorty Stokes. He had not heard us, and he stood looking at the moon which hung a sickle in the hot sky. The evening star was showing. "The four of us were like stones. He could have got to Guinea before motion'd have come to us. Then, simultaneously with our steps forward, he turned and looked into our faces. "It was a moment to test the nerve of any man. He stood it as we were used to seeing him face all things. "I suppose I'm the man you're after," he said. "He said it with the dignity of a parson. "In a second he had thrown down his pistols. He unsheathed his knives and dropped them to the ground. "Take 'em," he said. "Four of us looked into the unflinching clearness of his eyes. As we hesitated, he spoke again. "Listen. It is not in excuse that I speak, nor in weakening. It is to tell you that those among you who are men will follow my steps under like circumstances. "Emory gave me his hand and his oath, in the manner of his frankness, to stand by an arranged agreement. "We were to meet at eight o'clock on that Sunday night, A—a beautifully good woman was to decide on our argument which man she would marry. In riding to meet my engagement I happened on an accident. Within half a mile of the settlement, close onto time, my piebald went back on his haunches and the groan of a man came up from the roadside. I found an overloaded miter, hurt in the leg, and the hope in my own heart aroused my sympathy. I mounted the man on my beast and headed him back toward camp. "Walk as I never walk, I reached the meeting place three minutes late. Ah—God—out in the darkness I saw Emory taking advantage of the delay. "None of you is so much a cur as to let the life run in a man who, under his honor, couldn't yield a rival three minutes' grace. "But, with the camp against me and Emory the friend of the sorriest, I couldn't face the music when the justice was done. "It is not mercy I ask. It is life hereafter. Come!" "With a common impulse we started forward, only to halt in a frozen horror as Stokes' broncho threw up his head in alarm to watch with us the backward somersaulting of his master's body over the precipice. "Though there was but one verdict, even Chase said as we rode down over the mountain that night: 'Emory might have given Shorty a few minutes' grace.'"—The Black Cat.

A Talking Machine.
The gramophone, a talking machine, much simpler and cheaper than the phonograph, invented by Dr. Berliner, the famous electrician, will soon be put upon the market. Its records of human speech and of music, it is said, are indelible, and can be cheaply multiplied to an indefinite extent by simple mechanical means. What it has to say or sing can be heard all over an ordinary sized house. So devoid of complexity is its construction that the complete apparatus will cost only eighteen dollars, and a smaller edition, intended for the use of children, will be sold for five dollars.—Chicago Chronicle.

Considerable feeling has been aroused on the question in Mississippi and Tennessee, many laymen taking issue with the bishops.

NO NEW TRIAL FOR DURRANT.

The Condemned Murderer Smiles at the Judge's Remarks.
San Francisco, Dec. 7.—Judge Murphy, in denying the motion yesterday for a new trial for Durrant, said: "No fair, conscientious and honest jury could have arrived at a different result. In the justice of your conviction the court expresses its full and entire concurrence. There are no circumstances to mitigate the atrocity of your crime; it stands almost without parallel and without the semblance of palliation." Judge Murphy then ordered that Durrant be turned over to the warden of San Quentin penitentiary within ten days and to be kept in close confinement until the day of his execution, for which, however, no time was fixed. Durrant heard his fate without the twitch of a muscle. He stared at the judge as defiantly as though he was being arraigned on some trivial charge of contempt of court. When it was all over, he sat down, leaned over to his father and smiled.
A SHAME TO THE NATION.
Matthews' Report Regarding Annapolis Naval Academy.
Annapolis, Md., Dec. 7.—Commodore Matthews has made a report to Secretary of the Navy Herbert upon his recent investigations of the condition of the naval academy. The report states that the academy is a shame to the nation and a disgrace to the navy. The educational departments are all right, but the accommodations are most miserable. It is recommended that every building now used by the cadets be razed to the ground. Several of the structures have been condemned as unsafe, unhealthy and ill-adapted for their purposes. On the whole, the report sums up the academy as in a bad plight and demands the prompt attention of congress. The plan proposed for improvements contemplates the expenditure of about $6,000,000, but only comparatively small amounts would be required for each year.

LANGERMAN RELEASED.
New York's Recorder Probably Anticipated Action of Supreme Court.
New York, Dec. 7.—Recorder Goff, before whom W. L. S. Langerman was convicted by a jury of criminal assault upon Barbara Aub, and afterwards acquitted by the recorder on the confession of Miss Aub that she had committed perjury, and who after a scathing arraignment of Langerman's past record committed him to the house of detention under heavy bail to serve as a witness against Miss Aub, late yesterday afternoon released Langerman. Langerman was before the supreme court on habeas corpus proceedings at the time and would probably have been released by that tribunal had Goff not anticipated such action.

DECORATED BY SPAIN.
Two British Lieutenants Honored for Gallantry in Cuba.
Madrid, Dec. 9.—A dispatch to the Imperial from Havana says that the military decoration of the Red Cross has been accorded to Lieuts. Churchill and Barnes of the British army for gallantry displayed by them during the recent engagement between the government forces and the rebels commanded by Gomez and Maceo. Lieut. Churchill is a son of the late Lord Randolph Churchill. Both he and Lieut. Barnes were with the Spanish forces under Gen. Suarez Valdez in the battle on December 2 at La Reforma and were complimented in the official reports.

HE AIDED DR. MOORE.
A Manchester, N. H., Bank Cashier Short in His Accounts.
Concord, N. H., Dec. 9.—Another sensation remains to be added to those connected with the career of Dr. J. C. Moore of Manchester. After laying quiet for a month the secret has leaked out that D. Warren Lane, cashier of the Merchants' National Bank of Manchester has been found to have a shortage of $14,000 in his accounts. He has resigned and turned all his property over to the bank, being left penniless. Cashier Lane's shortage was incurred by holding and carrying drafts of Dr. Moore unknown to the bank officials.

AMERICAN ARMOR THE BEST.
Big Order Just Awarded by the Russian Government.
Bethlehem, Pa., Dec. 7.—President Linderman of the Bethlehem Iron company has received a cablegram from Lieut. Meigs at St. Petersburg, Russia, giving particulars of a test of side armor plate for the czar's new battleship Sevastopol. The plate was subjected to severe ballistic tests. The projectile penetrations were very slight and there were no cracks at all. The test resulted in the Russian government accepting 550 tons of Harveized side armor, and proved that American armor is the best made in the world.

CHRISTIAN PASTORS KILLED.
Four Persons butchered for Refusing to Become Moslems.
Constantinople, Dec. 7.—Advices have been received from Harpoot by the representative of the United Press showing that three Protestant pastors, Rev. Mr. Tazarian at Itehtah, Rev. Mr. Kriker at Kos and Rev. Mr. Atlassian and wife at Hesehik, have been murdered for refusing to abjure their faith and embrace Islamism. At Gemenek, near Kaisarea, the Turks and Christians united and barricaded the streets and repulsed four attacks that were made upon them by Circassians.

Increased Reward for Purvis.
Jackson, Miss., Dec. 7.—Gov. Stone has increased the reward for Will Purvis from $250 to $750. Purvis, who was under sentence to hang December 12, was released from jail by a mob some weeks ago. He is the same one who was hanged a year ago, but who escaped death through the bungling or connivance of the sheriff.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Dr. H. W. Allen is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Danger Signals

More than half the victims of consumption do not know they have it. Here is a list of symptoms by which consumption can certainly be detected:—

- Cough, one or two slight efforts on rising, occurring during the day and frequently during the night.
- Short breathing after exertion.
- Tightness of the chest.
- Quick pulse, especially noticeable in the evening and after a full meal.
- Chilliness in the evening, followed by slight fever.
- Perspiration toward morning and "Tale face and languid in the morning.
- Loss of vitality.

If you have these symptoms, or any of them, do not delay. There are many preparations which claim to be cures, but Dr. Weger's English Remedy for Consumption has the highest endorsements, and has stood the test of years. It will arrest consumption in its earlier stages, and drive away the symptoms named. It is manufactured by the Acker Medicine Co., 16 and 18 Chambers St., New York, and sold by all reputable druggists.
