Truth crushed to earth shall rise again.
The eternal years of God are hers.

THE NEW YEAR.
By Howard M. Saffin.

HE comes in robes of billows rise and crowd across the foamy bars. Through skies of gray that stretch away, Her white hair floating free, She comes to where her kingdom lies By either land or sea.

For her the dawn's pale buds of light Are round her pathway thrown, As like a banner in the light The night is backward blown, And dim afar the last lone star As on her chariot goes, While in the east the later streaks Grow ruddy as a rose.

And fades the old year's worn-out scythe As some half-moon's faint line, And January's heralds blithe In icy armor shine, While round her train the frozen rain, That some misname the snow, Has caught a million sun-glims bright From out the sunrise glow.

And glad her face as on she speeds Toward the rising sun, The light of hope and noble deeds Of faith and duty done, And in her eyes the swift surprise Of all that round her waits, Where morning, as she passes by, Has opened wide the gates.

was a rambling old building in the real English style. There were 14 rooms and they kept 13 stoves in continual action. The room without a stove was an extra room in the attic and was used for a store room. Gregory said that all the men turned out in the fall and hauled wood, and then when snow fell all began chopping, and chopped until time to plant in the spring.

It kept Gregory busy feeding the stoves. He would fill up number one, and then fill number two, and so on, and by the time he had number 13 stoked he would be ready to load number one again, and sometimes he would not be able to get around in time and the fire in number one would be out before he had number 13 full of wood.

The front door was completely snowed up, buried behind a 20-foot drift, and Gregory told me it was a lucky thing, for if it had not been and anyone should have opened the front and rear doors at the same time the lake breeze would have blown the whole unclerk 13 stoves out of the house and clear it down to Toronto. That lake breeze was what they called "bracing weather" up there. Down in Iowa we would have looked ourselves indoors and said: "What a fearful blizzard!"

And they seemed to enjoy it. The girl cousin, Maud Gregory, did not mind it in the least, and would take her skates and sail out for a little spin on the ice on days when I was wondering whether we had not better tie the house to the pine trees to keep it from blowing away.

But then she was accustomed to it. She had never been farther south than Toronto, and frequently spent her winters there on Lake Simcoe.

She was a beautiful girl, too. I saw that the first time I met her, and I saw it more plainly every day.

By the time I had grown a little accustomed to the beautiful climate we were quite good friends, and as Gregory's carbuncle practically confined him to the smoking-room, the pleasure of escorting her on her numerous skating trips naturally fell to me. And I did not shirk my duty.

She was an only child, and her father was a clerk in one of the Toronto banks, the Commerce, and Maud was very de-

ONE THAT WAS BROKEN.
Story of a New Year's Resolution.

I had known Gregory in the states. He was an A. No. 1 young fellow and we had worked side by side for three years at the same desk in a little wholesale house in Iowa. How Gregory ever happened to leave Canada and find his way to Iowa is too long and too dull a story to tell, but he did find his way there, and soon after he arrived we became great chums.

He sang in the choir, made out the bills of the concern for which we worked, rode horseback, and had boils. Of the four occupations, the boils seemed to interest him most, and no wonder, for they were with him night and day.

He used to back up to me and say: "Look at my neck, will you, old fellow, and see if that spot looks like a boil?" Usually it did.

We all used to advise him what to do for them, and he did it. Our desk drawers were always full of his tonics and lotions and salves; and when anyone pulled one of his special drawers open an odor like an apothecary shop seeped.

But all this has nothing to do with my story.

When Gregory was called back to Canada he made me promise to visit him at Sutton-West some time. He said it was the most beautiful spot in the world, and that it had a climate as much superior to ours here in Iowa as gold to lead.

So when I found I was to have two weeks' vacation during the Christmas holidays in '93, I wrote him that I was coming. His reply to my letter was enthusiastic. The weather was superb, the sleighing excellent, a pretty cousin was visiting them. Come right along, and he had a big carbuncle on his arm.

So I went.

To get to Sutton you go through Toronto and up a little branch railway, and from Sutton you drive several miles to Sutton-West along the shore of Lake Simcoe.

When I met me at the station and wrapped me well in robes, a servant drove. Gregory explained that he would have handled the ribbons himself had he been able, but owing to his carbuncle he was obliged to carry his arm in a sling. He was downright glad to see me, and asked questions all the way to Sutton-West, about the old friends in Iowa.

I'm entering the first half of the ride, but the last half was decidedly cold. It seemed that they had had a change of weather and were now having a genuine Canadian winter.

The place, which they called Old Sotherwood, fronted on the lake, and was a rambling old building in the real English style. There were 14 rooms and they kept 13 stoves in continual action. The room without a stove was an extra room in the attic and was used for a store room. That lake breeze was what they called "bracing weather" up there. Down in Iowa we would have looked ourselves indoors and said: "What a fearful blizzard!"
