When he returned home he had the wound attended to, and it appeared to give him no great trouble until yester-day, when it became very painful. The man suffered intensely for a few hours, then died. The case attracted quite a lot of attention, as the wound was not considered fatal at any time. The deceased is a young German, and was in the country less than a year.

and careful management she not only looked after their wants, but saved a little money, about $200. Hearing that her aged mother in Wilkesbarre was destitute and being cared for by the poor board, she resolved upon coming to her assistance, and with her little earn-ings started to look up her mother and take her back to Chicago, that she might not end her days in a poor house. Arriving three weeks ago, she found that her mother was dead, that her step-brether and step-siter wore in destinate that her mother was dead, that her step brother and step-sister were in destitute circumstances, and that her brother had on the day preceding started out with 32 cents in his pocket to look for work. The day after her arrival the mangled body of her brother was shipped home from Easton, where he had been run over by cars. She buried her brother and with only 800 of her savings were to Scratter

She buried her brother and with only 800 of her savings went to Scranton to look up a married sister. This sister had moved away and none of the neigh-bors knew of her whereabouts. Dis-heartened and sick she determined to bid farewell to her relatives in Wilkes-barre and return to Chicago. While waiting for a train in the Delaware and Hudson station her pocket book, con-taining the 890 left out of her savinos Hudson station her pocket book, con taining the $90 left out of her savings was stolen. DESERTED, THEN KILLED. Sad Fate of a West Hazleion Man Whose Wife Eloped Last Week. An unknown man was killed on the Lehigh Valley Rallroad, near Allentown, on Monday afternoon. He was stealing a ride on a coal train when he feli between the bumpers of the car. The train passed over his body. His head was found fity feet from where the acci-dent happened. Both legs and the right arm were severed from his body. In his coat pocket was found a pass-book with the name James Gillen, Tren-ton, N. J., on the outside cover. A sum of money amounting to $21.85 was also found on his person. The crew of the train say the man was intoxicated. One of the crew tried to put the man off at Mahoning, but he succeeded in again boarding the train. Coroner Yost held an inquest and the jury rendered a verdict of accidental death and esonerated the company from blame.

death and exonerated the company from blame. Later developments go to prove that the man was Frank Gillen, who until recently was a resident of West Hazle-ton. In last Thursday's Tuntux men-tion was made of the fact that his wife had eloped a few days previous with a married neighbor, John Haines. On Saturday last he disposed of his household furniture and sent his three children to his sister in Trenton. He was following them to that city when he met his death. No tidings of the faithless wife and her paramour have been received by either of their relatives. Hypotism at the Opera House.
