Decided by Jury. 'Decided by Jury. It is not uncommon for an English judge to try to raise a laugh-and strange to say, he usually succeeds-by affecting an infantile ignorance of all things but purely judicial matters. Sir Henry Hawkins not long ago asked in court, "What is hay?" A correspondent of the Philadelphia tedger says that in a recent libel suit a strange affectation of judicial ignor-ance was evinced by Lord Russell. Sir Edward Clarke read, from a book of the plaintiff's, a description of Chopin's "umber-shaded head." "What shade?" asked Lord Russell "Umber," replied Sir Edward. "Tes, but what is that?" persisted the chief justice. At this pols. the feelings of the fury chief justice. At this poit, the feelings of the jury were too much for them. With a unan-imity reminiscent of the "Pirates of Penzance," they chanted in expostula-tory chorus: "Brown, mi lord, brown," and the trial went on.

in if, although it goes without saying that in addition a woman must have other qualities to bring about this re-sult. She must have good taste, percep-tion and the great knack of putting ion her clothes well, which, by the way, is an art that is not understood by nine women out of ten, even the famous Worth acknowledging that to ishow really to advantage his gowns must be well worn. "That is what tries me more than anything else," he said one day to a favorite enstomer, "to know that my most artistic conceptions are depend-ent upoff others, and may be com-pletely spoiled by the way in which they are worn." A plain woman, therefore, need never feel discouraged if she is clover. By studying herself and her possibili-ties she can produce a result which will almost, if not quite, equal beanty, and she has this great advantage that her attractions nover fade, and are even apt to increase, rather than lessen, as she grows older. "A pretty woman is loved for a while, but an ugly woman forever," is a French saying, which must be true, as it has passed into a proverb, and which is conforting to those who have not the "fatal gift of beauty." —New York Tribune.

Chine silk enters into the construc-tion of fancy capes quite a little, and one novelty in dark shades of purple and pink has a deep frill of black glace below the little cape of flowered silk, and a ruche of silk edged chiffon finishes both edges. Black satin asah ribbons arranged down the back and fastened with fance buttons outline the figure very prettily. Even in silk gowns the inekets are worn, but they are longer really than jackets—are, in truth, coats. The sleeves ure one of two extremes, either the elbow sleeve being made very long so as to come far down over the hand or else where it is finished in a point, and has full ruffles of lace insude.
