MOST VENGEFUL OF BEASTS.

MOST VENGEFUL OF BEASTS,

More Hunters Slain by the African Buffalo Than Any Other Animal.

How He Rushes from Ambush—Betaras on His Spoor to Lie in Wait for His Foes—Perlious Experience of a Boer.

(FORTHGIER, 1886.)

It is agreed upon all hands by experienced hunters in Africa that the buffalo (Bubalus Caffer) is one of the three most dangerous four-footed foes that man can attack. Most men class this animal with elephants and lions, as game that requires the highest attributes of skill, courage and caution obring to bag; and, as a matter of fact, it may be laid down that more deaths and dangerous accidents happen annually in Africa in hunting the buffalo than in the chase of any other species of heavy game. In regions where large numbers of these splendid beasts still wander in troops of 306, 400 and even more, and where they have been little disturbed, the hunter has no great difficulty in shooting as many as he requires. In fairly open country, where senttered covert exists, and where they can be readily approached—for they are be no means keen-sighted creatures a man may shoot buffaloes as easily, he begins to think, as he can oxen. Du when a buffalo is wounded and his blood spoor has to be taken up, and the hunter has to follow him in the dense coverts to which he near teretas, the business is entirely changed. Then your game with every sense alert, and your rifle handy for an Instant and most deadly charge.

You will find, too, that the native spoorer, who trotted in front of your region of the proper of the first and most dangerous risk in the dark and shadowy theletes into which you are a dark with the point of the shoulder and brought an angle of the reed beds, and greatly prefer to follow in your rearl, and leave you to take upon your own person the first and most dangerous risk in the dark and shadowy have a some of the wile and brought and any of the mention of the wile and brought and the little further and soon lay dead. themselves in flight as far from the pursuer as possible, he usually retreats some distance into the densest bush, and then either hides up in some dark corner, where the shadows are deep and dense, or, turning upon his line, takes a parallel path back, and so waits for his foe; or he will even follow back upon his own spoor and coneeal himself. Sometimes he will stand, lurking amid the dark thickets; at another time, if badly wounded, he will lie down; in either case prepared and determined to inflict a bloody revenge for the hurt under which he is smarting.

I cannot better illustrate the character of these plucky animals than by an adventure narrhed to me not long since in the hunting veldt by a Boer hunter from the Transvaal. He had been tregging with some other comparitors far to the northwest of Lake Ngami. Flesh was badly wanted in camp, and as Tsetsefly was prevalent in the marshy country, north of the Okanango river on which they were outspanned, and the natives reported large herds of buffaloes, he left his horses behind him, ferried across the river, and spent the next two days in hunting. He had with him his own littentot servant, a good and reliable hunter and a fair shot, and he had as well several of the natives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and the continuing its career, the buffalo went straight for the Hottentot a few little with the matives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and the spoor means and the same well several of the natives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and the spoor means and the spoor and a struck his his norm and to seed the receiver and the purchase of the sound, and hunting. He had with him his own lottentot servant, a good and reliable hunter and a fair shot, and he had as well several of the natives of the district, who were anxious for meat, and the proper service of the sound. The horizont is careful to the treatment of the means and the spoor and artical the distance in the means and the spoor and artical the distance in the fact of th hunter and a fair shot, and he had as well several of the natives of the district, who were auxious for meat, and ready to show him the game.

On the first day the Dutchman came across some 50 buffaloes grazing in fairly open veldt. Getting behind some convenient covert, and with the wind in the right direction, he had little difficulty in shooting two fat cows and ayoung bull. The cows were quite easily secured, but the bull, although shot through the lungs, jumped on his legs from some long grass and bush when approached, charged fiercely at the sporting party, and was only killed within a few feet of the hunter.

Large numbers of buffaloes were still covert.

inquiring whether she will receive a medal struck off by order of congress in honor of her husband's bravery in firing the under-ground mino before Petersburg during the rebellion, and she has signified her pleasure at this recognition of one of the heroes of the great struggle. Lieutenant Harry Reese was chief burgess of Shamokin for several years and was a stranger to fear. He died about three years ago. His action at Petersburg received honored mention in the records of the war department.

When the Federal army, while lying before Petersburg, had undermined one of the Confederate forts and arranged a powder mine to blow up the outposts the powder failed to explode and a volunteer was called for to enter the opening and ascertain the cause. Lieutennant Reese, a young and fearless miner, responded promptly and after finding where the fuse had burnt out, he relit it and crawld out of the narrow opening just as the mine exploded, and the fort and many of its defenders were blown to atoms. and many of its defenders were blown
