PASSENGER TRAIN WRECKED NEAR POND CREEK JUNCTION.

Going Over a Steep Embankment.

The Lehigh Valley passenger train which arrives here at 2.33 p. m. was wrecked on Monday near Pond Creek. Engineer William Doud was killed and about twenty passengers were more or less injured. The accident occurred on a heavy curve on the mountain side a few hundred yards above Pond Creek Junction, on the Jersey Central tracks, which are used by the Valley trains from Pond Creek to White Haven. A cow was struck by the engine and derailed the train, causing the disaster.

The train left White Haven shortly after 2 o'clock, in charge of the following crew: Engineer, William Doud; fireman, Bernard Mooney,—conductor, Joseph Holler; baggage master, Daniel Sager; brakeman, Andrew Haggerty; all of Hazleton. The train consisted of engine No. 471, two passenger coaches and a baggage car.

The road along there contains many and the engine all the assistance possible, and abaggage train which are without when all had been attended to a relief train arrived and trought the injured here. Engineer boud expired after being placed on this train.

Immediately after the wreck the track was repaired and trains passed and the engine will be lifted up on Sunday.

There were forty-two people on the tender was one killed, Engineer Doud, aged 35 years, who leaves a wife and five whildren. The injured numbered twenty as follows:

Mrs. John Brodhun, Wilkesbarre, sustained severe bedily injuries.

engine No. 471, two passenger coaches and a baggage car.

The road along there contains many abrupt curves. On the left side, coming from White Haven, the mountain rises to a great height; while on the right there is a steep incline to the valley below, rauging from 100 to 200 feet, which in some parts is almost perpendicular. Engineer Doud was looking ahead while coming around the last of the large curves before the junction is reached. He saw a cow on the track, and immediately reversed the engine and applied the brakes. Standing on the narrow course, with the high mountain on one side and the valley below, the animal had no opportunity to escape.

Before the train, which was making Before the train, which was making thirty miles an hour, could stop, the cow was struck and tossed in the air. It fell in a heap between the rails. The engine passed over, but the bulk raised the trucks sufficiently to derail the locomotive, and it went bounding over the ties towards the right, followed by the three cars.

The shock broke the coupling between the engine and first car, and the former went over the bank less than 200 feet from where it left the track. It landed on its right side thirty feet below the rails, smashing the cab and wrecking the big machine completely. The water the big machine completely. The water and coal tank was twisted in such shape that its rear end faced the track, a position which afterwards saved the first car from rolling down the hill.

In the meantime the cars were following the course taken by the locomotive. The three kept together tolerably well while skipping over the ties and soft earth. The passengers had felt the emergency brake go on and knew by the jolting that the train was derailed. Slowly they found the cars tipping over. Those on the right side could see themselves going closer to the ground beneath their windows, while their fellow passengers on the left were being raised higher and higher.

The speed of the train then was not very great, but the position of the cars prevented any one from jumping off. Everybody grasped hold of something to steady themselves for the inevitable crash. When the middle of the first car reached the point where the engine went down the three cars rose together and toppled over on their right sides, landing twenty feet down the bank.

The rear car's weight was thrown against a stout telegraph pole, which bent downward but held its burden of bent downward but held its burden of human lives most wonderfully. The second car buried its right side in the mountain earth and was prevented from rolling by the strong coupling between it and the last car. The first car's side and roof crashed against the engines tank, which held it up. All three laid together in a straight line.

A few lengths of rails were torn up, some ties were overturned and the car-and dispatches from Pond Creek Junction for medical aid were sent to Freeland and Hazleton. When the news reached here the residents became excited, as it is a train upon which many Freeland people travel. Freeland doctors responded prouptly, and a special conveyed them to the wreck. They gave the injured people all the assistance possible, bandaging their wounds and applying restoratives. When all had been attended to a relief train arrived and brought the injured here. The Social Side of Bieyeling.

Everybody knows in a general way that thousands of persons, young and ald, are riding bieyeles this year, but few realize what an important factor the social side of eyeling has become. To bring out all the facts, the issue of the Philadelphia Sunday Press of next Sunday, the 19th inst., will be a bieyele number. There will be page after page of gossip, profusely illustrated, about all the bleyele clubs and bieyele riders everywhere, and in Ponnsylvania, New Jorsey Delaware and Maryland particularly. If you are the owner of a bleyele your portrait is likely to be in next Sunday's Press and there will certainly be a chapter of gossip about the eyelers of this section. The project is unique, and the demand for the Sunday Press bleyele number is certain to be immense.
