Herrick's Love of Music.

Herrick's Love of Music. It has been remarked by Mr. Gosse that Herrick "is alive as no poet be-fore or since to the picturesquesness of dress," and the statement, though sweeping, is correct. He takes note of each fold in Julia's gown, he writes lines upon the ribbor round her walk, he describes the rustiling of her walk, and is in fine as quick to perceive the beauty that lies in dress as to compre-hend the splendor of a full-blown rose. Music, too, did not go without apprepany, printed near the bottom of the package. For sale by all responsible druggists, hend the spleador of a full-blown rose. Music, too, did not go without appre-clation from him. It would have been difficult to imagine Herrick dull to the influence of music, although some of our poets have been credited with In-sbility to distinguish one tune from an-other. But on the other hand, there are many musical poets-Milton, Gray, Browning, and a host of others. Speak-ing of Milton, reminds us that Herrick addresses one of his poems to Infary Lawes, who was the subject of one of Milton's sonnets. Lawes wrote the music to "Comus," and received from the poet the praise that he "First taught our English music how to span span Words with just note and accent, not so scan With Midas' ears, committing short and long." Both Herrick and Milton seem to have been on familiar terms with the musician, as both address him in their verse as Harry. Some of Herricit's songs were set to music by him, and songs were set to music by on his death Herrick wrote: 'Some have thee called Amphion, so of us Named thee Terpander, or sweet Or-phous; Some this, some that; but all in this agree. Music had both her birth and death in thee." The difference between Milton's praise and Herrick's is very marked. The greater poet's more considered eulogy was well deserved and dis-criminately bestowed; Herrick's is soolled by its extravagance.—Gentle-man's Magazine.

Pistols and Pestles. The duolling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have besido it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, It the pestic that turned out pins fits obtained, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy.
