An Offer to Christian Endeavorers.

Thousands of Christian Endeavor workers who would like to attend the convention which will be held in San Francisco in July of this year are deterred from thinking seriously of going on account of the expenses of the long journey. This has been called to the attention of the Philadelphia Press, and the publishers of that journal have decided to furnish free any number of railroad tickets from Philadelphia to San Francisco and return to representatives of Christian Endeavor Societies who will render a trifling service to the Press. The offer involves the possible expenditure of thousands of dollars and opens the way for all Christian Endeavorers to enjoy the experience of a lifetime—a journey across the continent under the most favorable auspices. Write to the Press for details of the offer.

FITZ IS THE CHAMPION.

CORBETT KNOCKED OUT IN THE BIG FIGHT AT CARSON CITY.

In the Fourteenth Round the Contest Was Settled by a Left-Hand Blow Over Corbett's Heart—Full Description of the Battle.

CARSON CITY, March 17.—The center of activity this morning was the Arlington hotel, where the sporting men have been in the habit of congregating ever since the fight has been under way in the vicinity of Carson City.

It was a wise man who rose from his bed early and did a little leg work in the direction of the dining room for the sake of getting a breakfast. The hotel dining room is not large, and it will not accommodate many at one time. The first ones to arrive were sure of their meals, but along toward the far end of the morning the hungry follower of the noble art of pugilism who showed up clamoring for his breakfast came out of the argument with an empty stomach and was forced to rush for the nearest restaurant and the restaurants of Carson City are not many, nor are they on a par with those of larger cities. The late arrivals were not many in number, however, for the large majority of the men who have come here to witness the fight were up early and after their breakfast in short order when they appeared in the office of the hotel. Most of them realized that a fight at 11 a. m., with two other fights to follow, meant no lunch at noon, and they took no chance at getting a good meal at the outset of the day.

By 9 o'clock the hotel office was crowded to suffocation, and for several blocks down the street groups of men stood, all in earnest conversation, and the topic with nearly all of them was the comparative merits of the two men. Around the hotel office of Stuart the scene was one of lively bustle. The big line chart of the ring was lying on the counter, and two men were constantly engaged in selling seats and making the final arrangements for caring for the crowd which saw the fight. In front of the office stood Dan Stuart, as cool in the climax of his work as he has been in perfecting the preliminaries.

"This is my one chance to get even," said he, "after the three years of hard work I have been through with all these fighters. It marks the beginning of the end of it with me, and I rather think that when this thing is over I will be out of the fighting business for good. I am not making any predictions regarding what I may do hereafter, but I do not think I will undertake any more fights."

Stuart expressed himself as being somewhat disappointed at the attendance, which was smaller than he had been expecting, but he viewed the matter in the stoical manner in which he takes all of his troubles.

The poolroom of Corbett & Coleman, across the street from the Arlington hotel, was filled with men who were anxious to put their money on the fight. Outside of the poolroom many small bets were made, with Corbett the favorite at odds of nearly 2 to 1. The mass of the sporting men were with Corbett, many because they like him, and many because they dislike Fitzsimmons. The magnificent form shown by Corbett in his training and the somewhat erratic manner in which Fitzsimmons had gone through his work of preparation, but which, it must be confessed, left him in as good condition as Corbett, also tended to keep down the amount of money on Fitzsimmons.

Although many of the members of the camp at Shaw's Springs were up at daylight, not a stomach was allowed to disturb the silence until about 7 o'clock, when Corbett awoke. The big fighter hurried through his bath and dressed and soon entered the parlor of the hotel, where his trainers and relatives anxiously awaited him. A cheery "Good morning, everybody" showed his temper to be in satisfactory condition.

"How do you feel, Jim?" White anxiously inquired.

"Fine as silk, Charley, old boy; never better." And the champion slapped his groin on the back with a friendly energy which almost upset the stout New Yorker. White led Corbett to a window where he carefully looked him over, paying particular attention to the appearance of his eyes and questioning him as to how his lungs and throat felt.

"You couldn't be in better shape," was the answer.

Corbett and Fitzsimmons face to face. The trainer's verdict when the examination was over. "Your wind is perfect, your eyes clear, and you are fit in every way for the fight of your life."

Corbett declared he had had a splendid sleep and was greatly rested and refreshed. He took a turn or two on the hotel veranda and then had breakfast.

Before 8 o'clock Brady, White, Delaney and Corbett retired to the latter's bedroom for a final conference. White did most of the talking, prefacing his instructions with a little oration in which he pointed out that the "eyes of the world are on Jim" and "the supremacy of America in the prize ring depended on today's battle between an Englishman born and an American born."

Corbett cautioned. White's final instructions consisted almost entirely of admonitions to keep cool. He time and time again warned his man

Robbers Board an Express Train? A daring attempt to rob the Lehigh Valley Railroad express train was made on Monday, but before the would-be robbers could put the plot into execution they were foiled by the company officials. Suspicion was directed to two men who boarded the train at Wilkesbarre. After going into the smoking coach they passed into the express car and took seats on a trunk. The messenger becoming alarmed notified the company officials. They wired Detective Brown of Pittston, to be prepared to arrest them upon the arrival of the train, which is due there at 2 o'clock.

They gave their names as Peter Smith, of Englewood, N. J., and John Bellas, of Boston, Mass. Both are machinists, they allege, but their appearance belies them, as their hands are free from any trace of hard work.

The officers believe they are two noted crooks and intended to rob the express car between Pittston and Sayre.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

Appropriately Celebrated Yesterday by a Large Parade.

St. Patrick's Day was fairly well honored yesterday by the Catholic societies and Irishmen of this vicinity. The day overhead was beautiful, but the walking through the muddy streets was quite unpleasant and deterred many from taking a place in the ranks. The day's celebration began with mass at St. Ann's church, after which an eloquent sermon on the patron saint of Ireland was preached by Rev. Mack. Immediately afterwards the societies formed and paraded over the route published in our last issue. The number on parade was quite large, each society having its ranks well filled, but owing to some misunderstanding the foreign societies did not come out, with the exception of St. John's Society of Eckley. The floats were tastefully decorated and filled with a number of little girls, representing the states of the union and the counties of Ireland. The Goddess of Liberty was represented by Miss Sarah McCarthy and the Maid of Erin by Miss Kate Mulhearn.

The societies were in charge of the aides to Chief Marshal Fallihee, as follows: Frank McLaughlin, Frank Ward, Edward Murphy and James Timony. H. M. Breslin captained the Green Men. During the afternoon the town was devoid of excitement of any kind, but the fine weather kept the streets filled with people until dark. About 4 o'clock High Constable Mollick became involved in a row with some of his countrymen, and two arrests were made as a result. This was the only disturbance reported all day, and it is said that a little less usurpation of police duties by Mollick would have avoided the trouble.

The greatest hit, however, was made by St. Patrick's cornet band in the production of "The Rag-Pickers' Child" at the Grand in the evening. A packed house greeted the amateurs, but they were well prepared for the occasion and went through the piece like veterans. The songs and specialties rendered were also good. The play contains a number of stirring and exciting scenes and calls for strong acting in several parts. The company went through the five acts without a single break and the appreciation of the audience was frequently shown by the unstinted applause given. The young ladies of the company, Misses Maria Timney, Mary Dougherty and Fanny Gallagher, surpassed the expectations of their friends, and the work of their companions, Silas Woodring, Martin Brodick, Thomas Quigley, John J. Johnson and F. H. McGroarty, was also of a high order. The special scenery and appropriate costumes appeared to advantage and gave the play a fine appearance.

The ball given under the auspices of DePierro's orchestra was enjoyed by a large number of people, and dancing was kept up until an early hour this morning.

"Rip Van Winkle" in Town. From the Wilkesbarre Record.

It was many years ago when Robert McWade made his first appearance as Rip Van Winkle in a version of the popular legend written by himself. His only rival then was Jefferson, who presented Boucault's version. Attempts were made to stop McWade, on the ground that he infringed upon the rights of Jefferson to produce the play "Rip Van Winkle," it being alleged that the former has stolen his version from the latter. The New York courts were employed in settling the claims of the actors, and in the end Jefferson lost his suit against McWade, on the ground that no case has been made out.

Critics of the early day differed in their opinions of the two versions, many of the most prominent agreeing that McWade's was fairly entitled to the preference. As to the presentation of the character, here again was opinion divided, McWade coming in for as much praise as Jefferson.

ROBBERS HELD FOR TRIAL.

Scott McNeil and Ralph and William Barber, recently arrested in Hazleton on the charge of robbery, upon the alleged confession of William Schaffer, were given a hearing on Tuesday. To the surprise of the commonwealth, Schaffer refused to testify and would neither deny or affirm the alleged confession, District Attorney Fell, to whom the confession is said to have been made, was not present and his assistant, Attorney Jones, was unable to get Schaffer to say anything. In default of $1,000 bail the prisoners were committed to jail.

CHURCH CHIMES.

The holy communion will be celebrated in St. James' P. E. chapel on Sunday morning at 8.30 o'clock, instead of 10.30, as announced on Sunday evening last. Evening prayer and sermon at 7 o'clock. Subject of sermon, "A Season for Everything." Strangers are cordially invited.

The bible classes of the English Baptist church will hold a fagot social in the basement of the church on Saturday evening. Admission, 25 cents. The proceeds will be donated to the payment of the new pews in the church.

Services next Sunday at the English Baptist church will be held all day in the basement, the audience room being closed to place the new pews in position. The reopening services will be held on the 25th inst.

Horrible Death from a Dog's Bite. Joseph Cramer, a twelve-year-old boy of Duryea, died on Tuesday night of hydrophobia after horrible sufferings. About four months ago a big Newfoundland dog became mad at Duryea, and running at large on the streets, bit a number of people, among whom was young Cramer. The dog was finally killed and Cramer's wounds cauterized. They healed rapidly and it seemed that all effects had worn off.

Monday night Cramer went to bed at 9 o'clock in his usual good health and slept quietly until 4 o'clock next morning, when his parents hearing strange noises in his room rushed in. The boy was tossing on his bed, frothing at the mouth and barking and snarling like a dog. Physicians were hastily summoned, but were unable to do anything to relieve the boy, who rapidly grew worse. At 6 o'clock he had a most violent attack, it taking three men to hold him, and he finally had to be tied to the bed.

At 9 o'clock in the morning the physicians gave up all hopes. He had a few more attacks before noon, but rapidly became weaker and died. Three other persons, who were bitten at the same time as Cramer, are greatly afraid they also will be attacked by the rabies.

Local Interest in the Fight. The result of the championship battle was anxiously awaited by many people here yesterday afternoon. The news of each round was received at the Western Union telegraph office a few minutes after it was fought, and lively betting was indulged in to the end. The last bet recorded in Freeland was one of $5 a side made by John W. Slattery and John J. McGill during the eleventh round. The former picked the winner. Another steadfast friend of Fitzsimmons was James Reed, who is also something ahead by backing his opinions with money. Two of Corbett's staunchest admirers were John J. McBrierty and Bernard McFadden. The result was a surprise to the majority of the sporting prophets.

FATHER PHILLIPS ON IRELAND.

A fair-sized audience greeted Rev. Father Phillips, of Plains, at the Grand opera house on Monday evening to hear his lecture upon Ireland, and its condition. Rev. M. J. Fallihee, of St. Ann's church, introduced the speaker, and the attention of the audience was held for nearly two hours. During this time Father Phillips gave a summary of the history of Erin, from before the days of Christianity to the present time, clearly enumerating the causes which led to the poverty-stricken condition which visitors to the isle see on every side. He explained in detail how and why the population is constantly decreasing, why the country has no commerce worth mention, the reason that it is without industries, notwithstanding its vast mineral resources, fertile soil, etc., and how it is impossible for its people to become prosperous, despite their work, toil and striving.

The speaker has visited Ireland within the past year and he related many incidents that came under his observation throughout the country. All went to prove that nowhere in civilization is there a land more crushed and oppressed by laws which work systematically to the people's disadvantage than in Ireland. To prove that the governing system is the cause, Father Phillips gave a description of the unparalleled prosperity which overspread the land from 1782 to 1801, when Ireland had its own parliament and the laws for the country were made by the people of the country. With the taking away of self-government the isle lapsed into a state of poverty which can never be eradicated until the freedom of the people is accomplished or at least until home rule is granted.

In concluding he called attention to a question in this country which demands immediate settlement, viz., the uniting of the two branches of the A. O. U. H., and requested the members of both sides who were present to work earnestly to bring this about.

The lecture was liberally applauded at times, and all who were present left the hall with a better and clearer idea of the so-called "Irish question." Rev. M. J. Fallihee and Rev. Francis Mack, of St. Ann's, and Rev. Thomas Brehony, of Eckley, and John J. McNeil, president of Division 6, A. O. U. H., under whose auspices the lecture was given, occupied seats on the stage.
