Those whose condition are most serious are: John Lackey, deep stab wound in side, condi-tion critical; Samuel Mayer, shot in leg, wound serious; Dayid Shade, stabbed in side and back, shot in ribs, may die: Ed-ward Miller, shot in leg and stabbed. The fracas is said to have originated in Wood's saloon, where an American became involved in a quarrel with an Italian. Hot words ensued, quickly fol-lowed by blows. Friends of both drew mear in a threatening manner, and it is said that as soon as the first blow had been struck several of the Italians pres-ent drew their revolvers and opened fire on the Americans. It then became a race fight, and all manner of weapons were brought into use. Several efforts were made to check the melee, but those who interferred were badly treated for their trouble, and the fighting continued for fully half an hour. The rioters were finally ejected from the saloon and on the struct the fight was resumed. By this time, the structs
