Nissley. Harrisburg, Pa., May 1, 1807. Senator Quay has again been called upon to straighten out this legislature. Those reform bills adopted by the Re-publican state convention in 1805 are not meeting with a very hearty recep-tion in the house. There is no double in my mind that the measure model Firemen of the State It will be remembered that at John-town in 1896 it was decided by the State Firemen's Association to hold the next convention at Wilkesbarre. publican state convention in 1805 are not meeting with a very hearty recep-tion in the house. There is no doubt in my mind that these measures would have been killed this long time had not Senator Quay expressly desired their passage. Four of these bills passed the senate and came, before the house com-mittees last week. The feeling here is very much against their passage. See-ing this the friends of Quay got together and communicated with the senior sena-tor. His reply was to pass the bills. It is now given that the bills will pass, al-though they will have to be considerably modified before this can be done. The four bills which Quay is especially anxions to have passed are the Gobin civil service measure; the act prohibit-ing political assessments; prohibiting city and corporation employes from in-terfering in politics, and the bill to pre-vent the payment of taxes in bulk. The Stewart bill providing for the payment of 2 per cent interest on state deposits passed the house finally with not a single negative vote.
