STILL AT LOGGERHEADS.

GOVERNOR AND LEGISLATURE ARE EXCHANGING COMPLIMENTS.

Inquiries About the Reported Defect Brings Forth a Snarl from the Executive—Condemning the Extravagance for Which He Is Responsible.

Harrisburg, Pa., June 12, 1897.

It has become very apparent that Governor Hastings and the legislature are at loggerheads and the breach is widening every day. The trouble started when the governor began vetoing too many bills. This caused resentment to crop out on the part of the leaders in both branches. The governor must be brought to time and the result is that from now on the chief executive will have all the trouble he wants. During the early part of last week a resolution passed the senate calling upon the governor to inform that body whether there is a deficit in the state treasury, how much and also suggest some means of raising revenue necessary to meet this deficiency. The governor has furnished the amount of deficit, but refuses to name the subjects of taxation. The governor considers the resolution an impertinence and reads the members a severe lecture upon their duties. He contends that the purpose of the legislature is to provide for just such emergencies and not the governor. The members on the other hand claim that there are several revenue bills now in the house, but that they have confronted with the statement that the governor would not sign them.

The $50,000 bill for fitting up Grace church will be allowed to slumber in committee for a while. The senate committee and the house committee on grounds and buildings seem to think that the burden of proving and pushing the bill rests upon the governor, the state treasurer and the auditor general, who comprise the board that had charge of fitting up the church. One member said: "If this bill is not pushed it means that it will not become a law, and that would be a distinct benefit to the state. If it is pushed then every item in it will have to be explained to the joint committee of the legislature."

Those reform measures that were whipped through the house two weeks ago were sent to the senate last week where they got another juggling. The senate refused to concur in the house amendments, and thus the bills start on the toboggan. The Hamilton road bill has passed the senate on third reading, but the appropriation of $1,000,000 was cut down to $500,000. The new libel bill was slightly amended on third reading in the senate.

Governor Hastings has signed the Weiler labor bill. It prohibits corporations from discharging their men because of belonging to labor organizations. The penalty is $1,000 to $2,000 fine or one year in jail or both. The governor also signed the bill providing for assessing and collecting the costs, damages and expenses of municipal improvements, including the grading, paving and macadamizing of streets completed or now in the process of completion.

The governor notified the senate last week that he had vetoed the bill increasing the salaries of the deputy sheriffs, save the real estate deputy in the sheriff's office, Philadelphia, from $1,000 to $2,500. He also sent to the house a veto of the bill to allow common school houses to be used for Sabbath school and religious purposes. The governor also vetoed the bill supplementary to the act of May 23, 1889, providing for the assessment and collection of special taxes upon abutting properties for street sprinkling and street cleaning.

The bill fixing the uniform passenger fares on steam railroads at two cents a mile is dead. This measure has been before the legislature at every session for ten years, and has always been killed by the railroad committee.

A new bill, rather late, was presented last week. It provides for the return of paupers and indigent insane persons not having a legal settlement within this commonwealth to any other state or country to which they may belong. It is supported by patriotic orders, and will have a strong following. It is intended for the mining portion of state, in which a majority of such inmates are foreigners.

The people of the state, by this time, know that there is going to be a deficit in the state treasury before long if this legislature don't provide some source of new revenue. They perhaps don't know what caused this deficit. It is due wholly and solely to the reckless squandering of the state's funds by boss-ridden and machine-made legislatures; aided, two years ago, by the most subservient executive ever installed in public office, who, at his master's bidding, signed acts creating innumerable and unnecessary offices, sacrificing the public good to the state's money and what reputation he himself had, and for what? To please his boss, the man who made him what he is, in the fond hope that his subservience would win him a seat in the national senate. The disappointed man is now fuming and fussing and writing stirring letters on the deficit which he has done more, by his signature, to create than any man in the state. When the governor ran with the machine he was the biggest "high roller" of them all, but since he got his "trun down" by Quay he is snapping and snarling at everything, and posing as a "reformer." Let him snarl. He is giving away some sweet secrets which will be useful in the next campaign.

The direct inheritance tax had hardly become a law before Judge Hanna, a Philadelphia judge, declared the act unconstitutional. This opinion has created a great furor among the legislators. The case, of course, will be taken to the supreme court for a final decision, but in the meantime something certain must be done to raise revenue. Should this bill be declared unconstitutional by the higher court, it is not unlikely that an extra session of the legislature will be called to provide a bill to take its place. Affairs are becoming more complicated every day and the end is apparently not yet in sight. Nissley.

Death in a River Dredge.

By the burning of a dredge on the Susquehanna river a short distance above Pittston, at 10 o'clock Friday night, two men were burned to death and one fatally burned. The dead are Captain J. W. Reynolds, of Espy, aged 55 years, leaves a wife and two children; John Kyler, of Espy, aged 39 years, leaves a wife and three children. The injured man is Maurice Reynolds, of Ashley, the captain's son; badly burned on back, abdomen, face and hands. It is thought he cannot recover. The dredge was anchored in about the middle of the river. The men retired about half-past 9 and went to sleep in the little cabin aft of the boiler room.

About 10 o'clock they were awakened by fire and set up to see the boiler-room in flames and the cabin full of smoke. Realizing their danger, they tried to get out the way they entered, but were driven back by the flames. They attacked the blocked doorway, but could not budge it. They were like rats caught in a trap. There was but one chance of escaping a horrible death, a dash through the flames that seethed in a livid mass in the boiler-room.

Covering their heads with their coats they made the attempt, but from that fiery furnace only one man staggered upon the open deck. He was Maurice Reynolds. His father and Kyler had been overcome and fallen.

Reynolds' clothes were on fire and his progress to the stern, where one boat was tied, was blocked by the flames. He felt too weak to swim, but hung over the side of the dredge and dashed water over himself to quench the biting flames. Then, as loud as he could, he shouted for help. People on the shore had already been attracted by the flames, and as quickly as they could, upon hearing Reynolds' shouts, they pushed off for the burning barge and rescued him.

One or two even made an attempt to get into the boiler room, but by this time the flames were spreading over the entire boat, and they were driven back. Young Reynolds was hurried away down the river to Pittston and taken to the hospital while the people, flocking to the dredge in boats, watched it burn to the water's edge and sink.

Moderate Demand for Coal.

The anthracite coal trade is unmistakably dull. Dealers have laid in fair stocks and put in orders for future delivery that will not all be filled before August, and are waiting for the retail trade to move the coal that has been delivered. The retail trade is backward, and until it shows more life dealers are not disposed to place additional orders. It is everywhere recognized that the producing companies have the trade in admirable shape, that the rigid restriction so far insures an active demand in the fall, and that prices will probably be advanced on July 1, but these facts do not avail to redeem the stocks already laid in, and hence dealers are not prepared to buy more at present. The local trade is quiet, and the New York city trade is dull, and in the West some of the companies have in stock already nearly as much coal as they will need for their winter requirements.

The situation cannot continue long, and before the end of the month there will probably be more liberal buying all along the line. Meanwhile the output is being limited strictly to the trade requirements, or rather to less, as the tidewater stocks are decreasing. Prices are fairly maintained.

Forty bonds were then given out as follows: John Melly, 15; Mrs. Sarah F. Lawlor, 10; Tribune Printing Company, Limited, 3; Mrs. P. Timony, 12. The secretary stated the others would be ready for delivery by the next meeting. It was decided to have the treasurer's bond recorded. A bill of $8.75 for printing bonds from the Progress, and one of $3 for a seal purchased from J. A. Christy, were ordered paid.

The board decided to levy the school tax as follows: Thirteen mills for building purposes and thirteen for teaching, with $1 as the minimum. The secretary was empowered to draw an order for the first payment, $2,000, upon receipt of notice from the architect that the work on the new building is satisfactory.

Death of James McClellan.

At the family residence on Adams street, at 3.35 o'clock on Saturday morning, James McClellan, a respected resident of town, quietly passed away. Death was due to paralysis, with which he was stricken a week ago. The deceased was born in County Derry, Ireland, on February 20, 1822. He came to this country at the age of 22, settling at Mauch Chunk, where he resided eight years, then removed to old Buck Mountain, where he lived thirty-one years. In 1883 he took up his residence in Freeland, where he has since resided. He leaves a wife, seven sons, three daughters and three sisters to mourn his loss. Mr. McClellan was aged 75 years, 3 months and 22 days.

O'Donnell, in St. Ann's cemetery, and Daniel Cox, in St. James' churchyard, were decorated with flowers by D. S. & S. employes. A beautiful wreath was presented to Mrs. John Chambers for her husband's grave at Catawissa. The men returned home late last night after having a memorable day in Mauch Chunk.

Justice's Commission Held Back.

In September, 1896, Justice P. F. De Vane, of Blythe township, Schuylkill county, was tried and convicted of conspiracy to defraud the school district and sent to prison. In February, 1897, Charles McDonald was elected a justice to fill the supposed vacancy. The latter applied for a commission, but Secretary Reeder decided to wait until he could get an opinion from the attorney general. As Devine was convicted of conspiracy "to cheat and defraud the school district," the meaning of the constitution, Attorney General McCormick says, is a proper question for the courts. He advises that the commission be withheld until it is settled.

Foster Directors' Meeting.

Foster school directors met Saturday evening and accepted the bond of Treasurer Brior for $30,000, with the following persons as sureties: A. Oswald, Peter Magagna, Joseph H. Jones, Adam Brior, George Korn and William Williamson. The supplies in South Heberton building were ordered removed to Woodslee school. The tax rate was fixed the same as before—thirteen mills for building and the same for school purposes. The report of the township auditors was presented and found correct. It was ordered published in the TRIBUNE and Hazleton Plain Speaker.

Widow Gets $5,000 Damages.

The jury in the case of Mrs. John Schappert, of Nanticoke, against the Wilkesbarre Traction Company, returned on Friday after being out half an hour with a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $5,000. Mrs. Schappert's husband was killed in a collision on the Nanticoke branch of the electric road. He was a passenger and was standing on the front vestibule of the car. She asked for $50,000, and owing to the small verdict will appeal to the supreme court.
