SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

EDITOR TRIBUNE.—The picture I am painting of the correspondents is so strikingly true that at least one of the men on the canvas is getting uneasy and may not sit quiet throughout the ordeal. The poor fellow thinks it might be ease to his mind and possibly relieve his embarra-sment if I would call myself by some other name. My dear sir, it is only imagination, only imagination, sir. There is nothing, in a name, nothing in a name, sir. It is the truth of the portrait I am painting that people would rather the correspondents to notice. Let me go on with the work while the canvas is spread before me:

As pedesquian travelers, the Hazleton correspondents have no equals in the town. Learned to a small degree, these men are the spoiled children of cheap applause, and on that account consider themselves the privileged jesters of the town. Urged on by the few who patronize their writings, the correspondents have grown senseless to the high principles that govern the profession—and the epidemic malady of the mind seems to be passing from one sentimental humbug to another.

The lash is often laid on with the utmost severity, and is rarely, if ever, justified. But the circle that appliads and encourages the nipping of the correspondents is narrowing. The people are pondents is narrowing. The people are growing to hate and despise the wonderful mock respect which we find danging at the end of every criticism in the Hazleton papers. These writings are nothing like the remarks you would hear in sensible conversation. They are more on the order of a "Mrs. Caudle."

nating like the remarks you would hear in sensible conversation. They are more on the order of a "Mrs. Caudle." They are to the taste of the town very much like that kind of fruit which drops into the mouth before it is ripe.

It is common opinion that these gentlemen have mounted above their quarry. The keen edge of satire is worn off their ridicule before the shafts sink into their victims. The correspondents have many powerful chances to do good and merit approval. Unless they wish to be looked upon with utmost contempt by the town, their policy must undergo a radical change. The arrows of malice and ridicule must be silenced and a better spirit displayed by these men. We are Another chapter has been added to the five-cent-horse deal which was reported in Thursday's Trinduke. The Hobrew peddler on Friday had Brusack, the Hungarian who bought the horse, arrested on a charge of assault and battery, and Alderman Gorman, of Hazleton, placed him under $300 bail, which was furnished by Superintendent Wagner. This was followed by the issuing of a search warrant for the horse, and the animal was taken from Brusack and turned over to the peddler. From present indications the end is not yet.
