KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

HUCKLEBERRY PICKER MET DEATH SUDDENLY ON FRIDAY.

Stricken by a Bolt While Seeking Shelter from the Rain in Upper Lehigh Swamp. Powder Magazine Blown Up—Ravages of the Storm Elsewhere.

A terrific thunder storm passed over the region on Friday shortly after noon. It came up suddenly and many were caught in the rain. Among them were several huckleberry pickers. One, an eleven-year-old Polish boy, met death during the storm by being struck by a bolt of lightning. With his mother he was in the swamp near Upper Lehigh when the rain began falling. The nearest shelter he could find was under the branches of a tall pine tree. His mother and other pickers took refuge under another, some distance away. Flash after flash of lightning darted from the skies, and when the crashing thunder ceased and the party started homeward the body of the boy was found under the tree by James Rhoda, of Upper Lehigh, who happened to be first to reach the spot where the little lad was seen last. Life was extinct when the party reached him, and nothing could be done to aid him. The body was carried to the home of his father, George Rymsha, of Brivanton. He was buried yesterday.

The storm was severe while it lasted, and nearly every town in the region had some mishap to report after it was over. Many outbuildings and sheds in Butler valley were unroofed by the wind, large trees were blown down and growing crops were damaged somewhat.

At Audenried the Presbyterian church was struck by a bolt of lightning. The steeple was hit and several shingles were taken off the roof, but no serious damage resulted.

DEATH AND DAMAGE IN WILKESBARRE. A fatal explosion occurred in Wilkesbarre at the Empire mine of the Lehigh and Wilkesbarre Company. About seventy-five feet from the shaft is located a powder magazine and during the severe thunder storm a bolt of lightning struck the magazine. In an instant there was a terrible explosion and John Higgins, a fireman at the mine, was blown twenty feet in the air. When he was picked up life was extinct, he having been killed instantly. When the body was recovered it was discovered that the force of the explosion had stripped him of his clothes.

The explosion was most destructive in other ways. The "shifting shanty," where the workmen change their clothing, was completely demolished. Nearby it was located the boiler shop and one side of this was crushed in and the windows all blown out. A short distance from where the magazine stood on Empire street stands twenty-four houses, known as the Red Row. In the row not a pane of window glass is left.

The saloon and residence of James McGroarty were badly damaged. The force of the explosion was so great that it shook the foundation of nearly every dwelling in Wilkesbarre. The people thought a great earthquake had occurred. There was about twenty tons of powder in the magazine.

POWDER MAGAZINE DEMOLISHED. The lightning also exploded a magazine near Milnesville. About noon a bolt of lightning struck A. C. Leisenring's powder house, which was located between Milnesville and Hollywood. The lightning passed through the roof, igniting the powder. There was about a ton of black giant powder stored in the building at the time. Not a vestige of the building remained and a big hole in the earth alone marks the spot where it stood.

The villages of Hollywood and Milnesville were shaken. Houses rocked so violently that not only did window glass break, but the sashes were twisted and fell out of the casing. Not a pane of glass was left in the town of Hollywood. The shock was also plainly felt by many in Freedland.

Peter Wassil Hanged.

Peter Wassil, alias "Terrible Pete," was hanged in the county jail yard on Thursday for the murder at Georgetown, January 15 last, of Joseph Kupersavage. The drop fell at 10:24 and at 10:36 he was pronounced dead. He died from strangulation. The condemned man showed wonderful nerve until the last. He spent the greater part of the night talking to his keepers. At 2:45 Thursday morning he retired to his couch and slept soundly until 6:30, when he awoke. His spiritual adviser spent an hour with him in his cell. When the march to the gallows began Wassil said he was ready to die. On the gallows he prayed and betrayed no emotion.

Wassil, or "Terrible Pete," as he was more familiarly known, on the day of the murder had been drinking and during the evening tried to pick a quarrel with Charles Legus. Legus left the saloon where Wassil was drinking and went to the home of Kupersavage, next door. A few minutes later, while standing at the window, he saw Wassil approaching. The latter walked directly towards Legus, and, raising his revolver, pulled the trigger. As "Terrible Pete" pulled the trigger Legus jumped back. The bullet crashed through the window and struck Kupersavage in the head. The latter died two hours later.

Wassil was found guilty on April 25, the jury being out but a short time. A new trial was refused and the supreme court and governor refused to interfere.

Death of Rev. T. F. Marron.

Rev. Thomas F. Marron, pastor of St. Patrick's church, Audenried, died on Thursday morning. The priest had been suffering since Easter with heart trouble, and although confined to his room the greater part of the time, his sickness did not reach a dangerous stage until the day of his death. The end was peaceful in the extreme and the spirit of the great man left its earthly habitation without a sign of physical distress.

Rev. Marron was born in the county of Sligo, Ireland, in 1836. In 1859 he emigrated to this country. He was ordained to the priesthood on October 9, 1863, by Archbishop Wood, of Philadelphia. After the ordination he was assigned to different parishes, fulfilling a curacy at Lancaster, and St. Mary's and St. Patrick's in Philadelphia and in Towanda. Early in 1897 he was assigned to the Audenried parish.

He is survived by two brothers, Patrick Marron, of Minneapolis, and Peter Marron, of Syracuse, and a sister in Pittsburgh. Rev. Father Murphy, of Philadelphia, is a nephew of the deceased. Miss Catherine Marron, who has charge of the household, is his niece.

The funeral took place this morning.

Important License Decision. The superior court on Saturday, Judge Rice dissenting, reversed the action of the Philadelphia license court in refusing a license to Jerry Donoghue, and entered a rule ordering the court below to issue the license. The dissent of Judge Rice was of secondary quality in his hearings, as he agreed with his colleagues in their reasoning, but differently from them, he was of opinion that the lower court should not be ordered to issue the license, but that the matter should be referred back to that court for rehearing and disposition.

The opinion of the majority was written by Judge Smith. It was of a sweeping nature and indicates so great a development of law in the direction of curbing and directing the discretion of license courts that it is likely to receive a great deal of attention throughout the state.

BASE BALL DOTS.

A picked club of Freedland and Hazleton players went to Allentown on Saturday and put up a stiff article of ball against one of the teams of that city. The game was well played on both sides and lasted eleven innings. It ended 5 to 3 in favor of the Allentown club. The contest was exciting at times, and the Freedland players allege that so close were they to victory that the umpire found it necessary to resort to some questionable decisions in order to make the score what it was. The following was the score:

On account of the annexation of South Heberton two teachers more than last year were chosen. John J. McBrearty and Miss Bella McGill, who taught last term, were not applicants. The new teachers are John Houston, Jesse A. Alden, Miss Mary Herron and Miss Carrie Bilger.

Wassil's Daughter Escaped.

Elizabeth Wassil, 13 years old, daughter of Peter Wassil, who was hanged Thursday at Wilkesbarre, escaped from the girl's house of refuge, Philadelphia, early Saturday morning by scaling the large wall. The girl had been committed to the institution several weeks ago for stealing. The escape had evidently been carefully planned. She cautiously left bed and carrying her shoes in her hands crept down the hall to a side door and evading the watchful eyes of the night matron, opened a side door and once in the yard soon found means of climbing over the wall.
