

How Jefferson Made His Bible.
There was one book in this collection of the papers of Jefferson which impressed me particularly. Jefferson had always been described as a free thinker, or infidel, and yet here was a great, big, red morocco book, which he had made himself, and which had stamped upon it in gilt letters "The Life of Jesus of Nazareth." The reading matter, all that wasn't in Jefferson's handwriting, was made up of excerpts clipped from all sorts of publications, including the Bible, of everything which bore on the history of the Savior and his work. Jefferson had gone laboriously over the Bible, clipped out everything which bore the remotest reference to the Savior, and then arranged it in something like sequence and pasted it in his book. There were also clippings in Latin, Greek, French, German and Italian. Everything which carried the story of the Savior, and especially anything of ancient date, no matter what language it appeared in, he had pasted in this book.—Dan Quinn, in Kansas City Star.

Rattled.
To make a mad dog to order, the tin pan to his tail. A man made mad one who, after suffering 10, 15, 20 years with rheumatism, finds that by the use of a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil he is cured. He feels the waste of his life in pain, with the loss of time, place and money, and then reflects that for the expense of 50c, he could have saved all his time and lived free of pain; it is enough to make him mad. Most of our sufferings are intensified by delay in seeking relief, and the more we know as regards the cure of pain that we find out at last only by the use of the best cure. It is worth knowing that for the cure of rheumatism there is special virtue in The Great Remedy for Pain, St. Jacobs Oil, and as so much can be saved by its use, the cost is really nothing.

There are 38 telegraph offices on the line, of which 24 are reporting offices, and the balance are exclusive of linemen. The service of the Company's plant is considered by the use of several multiplex systems.

The The The Best. Rest. Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.

A VETERAN'S WIFE.
Affected With Heart Disease and Given Up to Die. Saved in a Wonderful Way.
From the Press, Utica, N. Y.
There is no one better known or respected in the village of Brookfield, Madison Co., New York, than Mrs. John Fisk, the wife of an old resident and veteran of the war of the Rebellion. In April of this year, Mrs. Fisk lay at death's door from neuralgia and heart disease, the family physician having recommended her to settle all her worldly affairs, as she was liable to be taken at any minute, and inquiring friends expected at each visit to hear that she had passed away.

But Mrs. Fisk, to the surprise of her neighbors and physicians, suddenly began to mend, and now she is as strong and healthy a woman of her advanced age (76 years) as can be found, and really does not appear nearly as old as she is. The following is her own story of how she was cured:
"I consider it a duty to myself and the world to tell of my extraordinary recovery from what was thought by my physicians, my husband and friends to be a fatal illness. I had long been suffering from neuralgia in its worst form, and my agonies that only those who have undergone such torments know, until my heart became so affected functionally and organically, that the doctor said I was liable at any time to cease to live. He had done all in his power for me, and I thank him much for his kindness and attention, and believe him to be a good, faithful physician. I was not disposed to die, however, if I could only have my having done all he could, I felt at liberty to use any other means that held out a chance of life, and determined to try a remedy that had been recommended by a friend who had been at death's door from rheumatism and heart disease, but who now is in good health.

"Whenever doubt I may have had as to the remedy's efficacy in a dissimilar disease, to that from which he had suffered, was dispelled on reading in the Press of a case identical with my own being cured, with the same and as good a result, as I had been so benefited. So my husband who now was anxious that I should at once take the treatment, purchased for me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I took them according to directions, and within a very short time the pains began to disappear, my heart's actions became normal, and four weeks ago I was able to do my household work as well as when I was a young woman.

"I had always, until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, looked with suspicion on all advertised proprietary medicines, but now my ideas have undergone a wondrous change in that direction, for under God's all-wise Providence, Pink Pills have renovated me, and apparently given me a new lease of life. "This is no secret in this locality, and I hope this certificate may be the means of other sufferers in distant places securing the same benefits that I have received."
"CLARENCE FISK."

Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose form) by the dozen or hundred, and the public are cautioned against numerous imitations sold in this shape at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company.

When bilious or constive, eat a Cascaret, candy cathartic, cure guaranteed, 10c., 25c.

REMAIN UNCHANGED.

Goldbeaters' Tools and Cooks' Caps as They Were in Ancient Times.

In almost every kind of trade known to man the years have brought manifold changes in the way of tools, improved machinery, advanced ideas as to the manipulation of material and numberless aids from the fields of science, the workshop of the chemist, the inventor and the artist. But there is one trade in which no advance has been made and that is in the goldbeaters' trade. The same tools and the same appliances are used now as in the days when Solomon built his temple and the art flourished in ancient times. When Tyre and Sidon ruled the seas, when Carthage disputed with Rome the supremacy of the world, the goldbeaters of those days worked with the same implements as those used nowadays. It is a very singular thing that in all this endless change, this rearranging and shifting, the goldbeaters' trade should still be conducted on its ancient basis and stand primitive in relations to the other trades and arts that have progressed so steadily and importantly. Another curious feature of the trades is the badge of the cook's cap. It is the same cap nowadays as the cap worn by the cooks who served up nightingales' brains for Lucullus, Vitellius and the Roman emperors. The cooks of the days of Shakespeare, of Charlemagne, of ancient time, wore the same shaped headgear—the inevitable cook's cap that the chef of a fashionable hotel wears. The times change and people change with them, but in this labyrinthine moving and changing it must be remembered that there still exist two symbols sent down through the ages as they were in the beginning.

There are now $8,000,000 worth of one-cent pieces in circulation, and the call upon the mint is still for more. Not all these cents are wanted for the plate collection. It is one-cent journalism more than anything else which keeps the wheels turning in the mint, as in the marts of trade.—Philadelphia Record.

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN.

THE CUBAN WOMEN PATRIOTS.

The women of the better class in Cuba are much more ardent in their sympathy with the revolution than the men, and a gentleman who has recently spent several weeks in Havana says there is scarcely a Cuban woman who is not seriously contributing to the success of the cause, although her husband may be indifferently supporting the Spanish authorities. Many young men have been driven into the insurgent ranks by their sisters and sweethearts. It is a common thing for an able-bodied young man to receive a woman's chemise with a sarcastic note saying, "You should wear this as long as you remain at home and refuse to fight for Cuba libre."

AS EASILY DRESSED AS A MAN.

We are constantly hearing women express the belief that they would be quite free from strain in the matter of dress if they could always be as sure of the proper thing to wear as a man. With a man, six o'clock means a dress suit or a Tuxedo. As a matter of fact, a woman may be equally free from doubt upon the subject. If she chooses, she can lay down a safe law unto herself. Six o'clock may always mean evening dress to her, when she is certain that she is not going to touch shoulders with the public. She discriminates between a high and a low necked gown as a man between his full dress suit and his Tuxedo. No well dressed woman appears at the theatre with her shoulders uncovered, but she may put on a low necked gown for the most informal dinner at a private house, provided the gown is not too elaborate.

The fashion magazines have done much to give erroneous ideas of the manner in which New York women dress upon certain occasions. The well dressed woman in the city usually confines herself to three well defined lines of dress. These are the strictly simple tailor made dress for morning and street wear, the more extensively trimmed gown for the theatre and informal dinners, and the regulation evening apparel. With four gowns each winter, a woman may go anywhere, and yet be sure that she is always appropriately and becomingly attired. She is the wise woman who, putting all of her outfit upon three, four dresses, has them well and rightly made, for she need give herself as little concern about her clothes as a man.—The Puritan.

SHIRT WAIST'S RETURN.

The shirt waist is back again. That means happiness to every woman that draws the breath of life. There is nothing in the world that a woman dotes on more than the inevitable shirt waist. Ask any one of these variable she will answer, "Shirt waists? Why, I live in them when the season permits."
The new shirt waist for the approaching season has now reached the height of perfection. It has taken several seasons, however, of experimentation to come to this crisis. The new models are beautiful.
The sleeve and the collar! They are the most important details of the shirt waist, and this season they are going to be subjected to a new treatment. In the first place, that ugly, loose bishop sleeve that drooped so forlornly all last summer is absolutely dead and gone. In its place there will be a much more graceful and stylish substitute. The new sleeve looks like an old abbreviated leg of mutton. It has a modest amount of fullness at the shoulder, and when starched stands out about ten inches from the arm.

Now for the cuff itself. The most fashionable cut will be the square one, made quite large and wide, and of the same material as the shirt body. In the golf waists, which are only slightly modified designs of the tailored waist, the cuff is built smaller and closes on itself, fastening with a button and button hole. The link cuffs, however, seem more chic and are far more convenient to adjust on account of the extreme stiffness.
The new collar is not detachable as it was last season. It is constructed of the same material as the goods, and is the regular upright "chocker." The turn-down collar is quite passé. But that does not constitute the whole of the new collar. It is built with an extension so to speak. A white linen "tip" comes with it that folds over the upper edge and is a kind of flap that adds a pretty finish to the whole. These "tips" are made for the cuffs as well, and are adjustable in both cases. They are kept in place by tape loops which are put permanently on the inner side of both collar and cuffs.

The body of the waist differs but slightly from last season's design. The shoulder yoke is still correct. The backs, however, in many of them are out bias, as well as the front. Some are out cross-wise, but it is only the slender woman who can afford to juggle with stripes and plaids.—Chicago Times-Herald.

FASHION NOTES.

The softest shades of tan are correct for gloves now that we have so much color in our gowns.

The surplice effect, or any other crossed-over model, is rather leading the persistent little boiler, and in some instances the surplice bodice has long scarf ends of lace, falling from the belt at the point where the waist fastens.

Great favor is shown the double warp cashmeres that so closely resemble broken checks with several dyes hand-somely blended seem to predominate, and these prove more serviceable than plain colors for general wear on any fabric but serge, which has proved itself to be the peer of any utility material known.

A skirt litter which is bound to work, and is quite equal to the disposition of the numerous godets in our full skirts, is a practical novelty which is sure to appeal to every woman. It is a simple arrangement of black ribbon, silk braid, and tiny rings, which are sewn on in eight places on the inside of the skirt at the back, more than half way down. By hooking the end of the ribbon to the waist band the skirt is caught up evenly and gracefully all around.

Veiling with large dots is decidedly passé, and all the latest novelties have very fine dots, many of them none at all, and are very thin, fine, and fancy as to mesh, which is in all sorts of plaids, checks and waved lines. One style of veiling is a combination of fine white maline net under a black open meshed net with tiny black or white dots fastening the nets together. And then there are veilings of black with white dots, and a colored mesh with fine white dots which costs $4 a yard.

WISE WORDS.

Behavior is a mirror in which every one displays his own image.
To rob it of love is the greatest wrong that can be done a child.
Every beginning is pleasant. The threshold is the place of expectation.
The safest mode of acting is to employ ourselves with our nearest duty.
If the crow has a creed, it is that all birds are heretics that do not wear black.

The greatest obligation of the parent to the child is to give it a safe example.
No poetry would be written if birds had to keep still and let frogs do all the singing.

If you would be strong when adversity comes, be sure to pray while prosperous.
What important it is to have a soul which loves truth and receives it wherever it finds it.

Misunderstandings and neglect cause more mischief in this world than even malice and wickedness.
If you are only a picket, try to be as faithful to your trust as if you were the commander of an army.

There is a vast difference between being able to say prayers that sound fine and having a broken and contrite heart.
From near at hand one must not hope, but from afar. Let us trust in God; each one in himself and in the other, and so they will be well.

The worst penalty of evil-doing is to grow into likeness with the bad; for each man's soul changes, according to the nature of his deeds, for better or for worse.
If you hear a bad story, make a short stop of yourself. Don't let it pass you. The one who tells it will no doubt tell it to others, and pass it on, but don't let it pass you.

Never ask to be intrusted with your friend's secret, for, no matter how faithfully you may keep it, you will be liable in a thousand contingencies to the suspicion of having betrayed it.
Meekness is not a weakness; it is strength. Kindness, gentleness, meekness, give a man power in this very self-possession. He is calm and quiet in the midst of threatened disaster.

The Wolf in Europe.

One of the greatest terrors of Europe is the wolf. In Russia during the last two years, according to official sources, the wolves have devoured 11,000 horses, 10,000 horned cattle, 32,000 sheep, 5000 swine, 1000 dogs and 18,000 fowl. They have also during the same period attacked sixty-eight persons, devouring two on the spot and inflicting fatal wounds on twelve others. In France it is estimated that 500,000 of these animals exist and the damage inflicted by them is set down at about 50,000,000 francs annually. A regular body of men, numbering over 1000, called the Louveterie, is maintained to keep down wild beasts, and the force has a certain efficiency, but it is unequalled to keeping the country clear of them. From time to time high bounties for wolf scalps have been paid, as much as 200 francs in the case of a known man eater, dreading there as the man eating tiger is in the Hindoo villages; but the animal is never exterminated. In some years his ravage is greater and in others less, but he is always in evidence. In this country he has been pretty well put down in the inhabited parts. A few days ago a prodigious wolf drive was set on foot in Aitchison County, Kansas, five square miles being covered and 700 persons participating. They rounded up 200 jack rabbits, but not a single wolf. Considering his fierce and predatory character abroad and his resistance to all efforts to destroy him, the American animal must be set down as rather a meretricious creature, easily amenable to extinction and not so desperately destructive, even where it continues to maintain a foothold.

A Historic Drawing Board.

An engineer in the department of docks, New York City, thinks that he has discovered the old drawing-board on which Ericsson drew the plans for his famous monitor. The wood is stained by age, and it is filled with holes from the thumb tacks that have been driven into it. Ericsson was employed by the Delamater Iron Works when he designed the monitor. The company built a derrick for the city a few years later, and at that time the old drawing-board was taken from their office and placed in the derrick. It was kicked around carelessly for several years, and finally landed in the office of the dock department, where it has seen much service.

Horse Meat Test.

Some people are fearful that the horse meat so generously provided nowadays will be foisted upon them by their butchers. The Paris correspondent of the Medical Record says that if a bouillon is made of the meat it will color violet a reaction paper that has been made a red brown by dipping in iodine, while beef and mutton bouillon make a different shade.

A Penny-a-Liner's Fortune.

At least one of the "penny-a-liners" had success in this world. It is stated that Emile Richebourg, the French novelist, has amassed a fortune of $400,000 in twenty years by writing sensational stories for the Petit Journal.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for children teething, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, allays pain, cures whooping cough, croup, and colic.

Motherhood.

A mother who is in good physical condition transmits to her children the blessings of a good constitution. The child fairly drinks in health from its mother's robust constitution before birth, and from a healthy mother's milk after.

Is not that an incentive to prepare for a healthy maternity?
Do you know the meaning of what is popularly called those "longings," or cravings, which beset so many women during pregnancy?
There is something lacking in the mother's blood. Nature cries out and will be satisfied at all hazards.

One woman wants sour things, another wants sweets, another wants salt things, and so on.
The real need all the time is to enrich the blood so as to supply nourishment for another life, and to build up the entire generative system, so that the birth may be possible and successful.

If expectant mothers would fortify themselves with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for twenty years has sustained thousands of women in this condition, there would be fewer disappointments at birth, and they would not experience those annoying "longings."

In the following letter to Mrs. Pinkham, Mrs. Whitney demonstrates the power of the Compound in such cases. She says:
"From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three, I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and was soon relieved. After I was married, the doctor said I would never be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and a half. The next time I commenced at once and continued to take your Compound through the period of pregnancy, and I said then, if I went my full time and the baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old and is as healthy and hearty as one could wish.

"I am so thankful that I used your medicine, for it gave me the robust health to transmit to my child. I cannot express my gratitude to you; I never expected such a blessing. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 5 George St., E. Somerville, Mass.
