FREELAND, PA., NOVEMBER 1, 1897.

The "Advanced" Woman.

Most women, and I am afraid a good many men, too, imagine that book learning is synonymous with education, says the countess of Desart in the National Review. It never strikes them that if it were so our bookworms would be the great leaders of humanity. They see games playing a great part in boys' schools, and they immediately wish these games introduced into girls' schools. They fancy that if only the girl could be taught as the boy is taught she would become, in spite of her dress, a man. This sounds a reductio ad absurdum, but it is not, in plain language, to be understood of the people, the meaning of the clamor for girls' cricket and football, for a university education for girls, for the opening of all careers and all professions to girls? Because boys come and go alone, and it is good for them to learn to fend for themselves, therefore chaperons for girls should be abolished. Because men in knickerbockers can travel ever so much faster without fatigue on their bicycles than women, therefore women should be made to wear divided skirts, and they will be able to go as far and as fast as men. Could anything be more unconnected, more illogical than this set of propositions? Yet they are warmly and strenuously advocated by women who take themselves most seriously. If you wish to realize fully the maze in which the "advanced" woman has lost herself, take her views about marriage. Listen to her argument that because, according to her ideas, it has been too much in favor of the bridegroom; therefore in future it should be a great deal too much in favor of the bride. The contract on which the sanctity of the family and the welfare of the rising generation mainly depends, she thinks, should be one to be repudiated at will, for any caprice, any whim. Above all, her old sphere, the home, is far too lowly, too humble, for anyone with the slightest talent to be wasted on it. It should be looked upon as the last resource, the final refuge of the poor-spirited, the mentally destitute.

A recent letter from Dawson in the Alaska Miner says: "A funny thing occurred the other night. A fellow fell out with his girl, and they were eating at different tables in the restaurant. She told the waiter she wanted two eggs for her breakfast. He overheard it and brought all the eggs in town, four cases, at one dollar an egg." If that girl should make up with that mean fellow she would in all probability have to go short on eggs the balance of her days.

Judge Giles, of Crawfordville, Fla., vouches for the story that a 32-pound cantaloupe was cut at George W. Smith's farm, and that eight people, eating their fill, could not make way with half of it.

A Pawnee Indian squaw, named Annie Whitefing, is suing for a divorce and asking that her maiden name, Annie Conrinning, be restored. She thinks it is better to come running than to go flying.

The real name of Klondike, Mr. Hestwood states, is Throundick, and the Indians say means "plenty of fish," while the miners transpire it to gold-fish and say it means "plenty of gold."

Once in awhile you meet a queer, old-fashioned sort of a man who has hopes of getting wealth before he dies by working for it.

THE KING OF CYCLISTS.

Wonderful Record Established by Little Jimmy Michael.

His Mile Made in 1:36 Really Eccentric Stocks' 1:35 2-5 Performance in England—Will Make Chicago His Home.

King of cyclists is little Jimmy Michael. Most marvelous is his record. Time itself was outstripped by the miniature Welsh boy at Willow Grove track, Philadelphia. Paced by a sextet and a quad, the youngster reeled off a mile in 1:36 and thereby reduced all former world's records for the distance.

It is true that a Londoner, I. W. Stocks, negotiated a mile at the Crystal Palace in 1:35 2-5, but he was guided over the route by an electric motor and, of course, his feat cannot properly be reckoned among genuine cycling performances. Should it be, Michael's deed stands alone in America at any rate.

Cyclists have been expecting another notch to be clipped off the mile record and the majority of them looked to Michael to do it. Steadily the tiny foreigner has been improving since he first sprang into fame in Europe early last year.

Now the question is, will Michael prove himself a greater racer than he is now? Is he good, rash through the speculation may be, for 1:30? Can he do that on a circular track, and if he can, how fast can he travel on a straightaway?

Chicago wheelmen have been talking of little else than the Welshman's brilliant performances. Many of them are bold enough to predict that he will reduce still more the record and approximate, if not reach, the 1:30 mark. Charlie Root, Fred Gerlach and Jim Levey are leaders in eycledom and their opinions favored the idea that Michael had by no means reached his limit.

For years it has been the chief aim of racing cyclists to attack the mile record. There have been all sorts of their records for flying and standing starts, paced and unpaced, forward and backward, professional and amateur. Those of the old class A and class B men, and so on. Now, the standard mile has generally come to be looked upon as one made under the same conditions as that of Michael—flying start, paced by cycling machines without other aid.

Seven years ago records began to be thought of importance. This is how they have gradually been lowered since then:

W. C. Jones, standing start.....	2:20 2-5
J. Omond, standing start.....	2:15
W. W. Windle, standing start.....	2:10
G. F. Taylor, standing start.....	2:11
H. C. Tyler, standing start.....	2:08 4-5
W. W. Windle, flying start.....	2:02 3-5
W. W. Windle, flying start.....	1:58 1-5
W. W. Windle, flying start.....	1:52 4-5
J. S. Johnson, flying start.....	1:55 2-5
W. W. Windle, flying start.....	1:52 3-5
E. A. Muffler, flying start.....	1:50 1-5
O. Ziegler, flying start.....	1:50 2-5
H. C. Tyler, flying start.....	1:48 3-5
J. S. Johnson, flying start.....	1:47 3-5
M. F. Demberger, flying start.....	1:46
J. S. Johnson, flying start.....	1:44 1-5
A. Gardner, flying start.....	1:42 2-5
P. J. Beris, flying start.....	1:40 2-5
W. W. Hamilton, flying start.....	1:39 1-5
E. A. Muffler, flying start.....	1:38 1-5
J. Platt Betts, flying start.....	1:37 3-5
J. Michael, flying start.....	1:36

This was how Michael went the mile, by divisions:

Quarter.....	0:22 2-5
Third.....	0:31 1-5
Two-thirds.....	1:04 2-5
Three-quarters.....	1:12 1-5
Mile.....	1:36

Michael can soon be claimed by Chicago for her own. He has decided to go to that city and make it his future home. He is a wee bit of a boy—half inch more than five feet high. It is 3 1/2 inches around his chest and it can be expanded only 1 1/2 inches more. His legs are 30 1/2 inches in length, his arms 17, his forearm 8 1/2, his biceps 8 1/2. His weight is 101 pounds. He is 21 years of age.

The wonder was born in Wales. Credit for first "finding" him is given to the noted English cycle trainer, C. Warburton. Tom Eck discovered him later and induced him to come to the United States in the latter part of 1896. Before that time he won a big lot of important races, besides landing numerous records for various European countries. Among his victims on the path were Jacquelin and Riviere, Lesna, Linton, Huret, Gerger, Opel, Gougoutz and Grieny.

Michael appeared in Chicago in the early part of October, 1896. It was at the dedication of the Garfield park track, October 2. The five-mile record on that occasion fell to his lot, and for days afterward he was feted as the idol of Chicagoans.

To Save Funeral Expenses.
Verusvius in eruption a young German undertook to be cremated free by the volcano. He placed himself close to the crater, in the path of the lava, and then shot himself through the head. His body was found, however, before the lava reached it.

Polliteness of the Swedes.
In Sweden, if you address the poorest person in the street, you must lift your hat. The same courtesy is insisted upon if you pass a lady on the stairway. To enter a reading-room or a bank without one's hat on is regarded as impolite.

Provision for Both.
Smith walked up Market street the other evening with a box of candy under one arm and a big package of meat under the other.
"Hello, Smith," said Brown; "gone to housekeeping? I didn't know you were married."
"I'm not yet."
"What are you doing with that candy and meat, then?"
"Going to see my girl."
"Do you have to furnish the family with meat already?"
"Oh, no; the candy is for the girl and the meat is for the dog. I have to square myself with both."—San Francisco Post.

The One to Blame.
The hospital nurse leaned over the form of the prostrate sufferer. "Your feet are torn and bleeding," she said; "you must have had a terrible journey."
"It was my wife's fault. She insisted—a sudden look of anguish came over the face of the patient—"on darning those socks herself."—Demorest's Magazine.

A Student of Human Nature.
Blinks—By the way, I must introduce you to my friend Winks. He is one of the best fellows in the world, a noble fellow, glorious fellow. He's had a great many ups and downs, Winks has.
Jinks—Judging from your enthusiasm, he is now in one of his ups.—N. Y. Weekly.

They Would Kick.
He—I am opposed to women being allowed to vote.
She—What is your objection?
He—if they are allowed to vote they will all be practically ballot girls, and what few there are of them now make trouble enough in the world as it is.—Tammany Times.

A Secret to Be Guarded.
"After all," said Mr. Milledgeville to Mr. Mobile, "your wife is a very handsome woman."
"She is indeed," replied Mr. Mobile. "So long as she doesn't let her temper loose no one suspects that I married her for her money."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Well Balanced.
"Yes, Miss Howjames is a wonderfully intellectual young woman, but she has developed her brain at the expense of her poor little body. To me she seems top-heavy."
"Top-heavy? Then you have never seen her feet?"—Chicago Tribune.

Another Keen Thrust.
"Why is it, Miss Giggams, that no woman has ever written a grand epic poem?"
"Principally, I think, because she has always had to put in her time trotting round waiting on some man."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

In Revenge Sweet
Jones-Brown—So after your divorce you got even with your mother-in-law that was?
Brown-Smith—Yes.
Jones-Brown—How?
Brown-Smith (grimly)—Married her.—Yellow Book.

On His Vacation.
He kicked and he swore.
He rigned and he tore.
But I did him no good, don't you see.
His brain was quite small.
Or he wouldn't at all.
Have touched the wrong end of the bee.

WHEREIN THE STRENGTH LIES.
"I have heard that cheese is a wonderful muscle-forming food."
"Perhaps that accounts for some of it being so strong."—Detroit Free Press.

A Poor Girl.
"My face is my fortune."
"Your wealth is but small."
The druggists all sell it.

—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Too Dark to See Her.
Father—I believe Charlie Huggem called to see you last night?
Daughter—Yes, papa, he did.
Father—It's strange you didn't have the lamp turned up so he could.—Ohio State Journal.

Merely an Option.
"And you want to marry my daughter, do you?" said Mr. Stockbroker.
"Well, not right away, sir," said the timid youth; "but I'd like to have an option on her."—Yonkers Statesman.

DECISIONS BY THE BENCH.

A warranty of the genuineness of the signature of a promissory note is held, in Strauss vs. Henry (D. C. App.), 36 L. R. A. to arise upon a sale and delivery of the note to a purchaser in good faith.

A complaint for the rescission of a contract on the ground of fraud is held, in Cohoon vs. Fisher (Ind.), 36 L. R. A. 193, not to constitute such a conclusive election of remedy as to preclude an amendment demanding damages for the same fraud.

The use of the words "I hereby assign the within note" is held in Markey vs. Corey (Mich.), 36 L. R. A. 117, insufficient to prevent one who signs his name to such a statement on the back of a promissory note from being held liable as an indorser.

The right of a gas company to charge meter rent to small consumers of gas in addition to the maximum charge per 1,000 feet for gas which is fixed by the charter of the company is denied, in Louisville Gas company vs. Dulaney (Ky.), 36 L. R. A. 125.

A statute making it prima-facie evidence of a banker's intent to defraud in receiving a deposit if his failure, suspension or involuntary liquidation occurs within 30 days thereafter, is held in state vs. Beach (Ind.), 36 L. R. A. 179, to be constitutional.

For the act of the president of a national bank in loaning money to a depositor apparently as an accommodation, but really for his own benefit, taking a note from the nominal borrower secured by stock in the bank which becomes worthless and the nominal borrower insolvent by the failure of the bank caused by the misconduct of the president, it is held, in Grow vs. Cockrill (Ark.), 36 L. R. A. 89, that a receiver of a bank cannot be held liable.—Chicago News.

SOME RECENT INVENTIONS.
In a recently patented automatic change maker the coin is placed in tubes of the proper size, fitted with sliding plates at the bottom which are operated by levers to push the bottom coin out when the lever is pressed.
To catch moles as they run through the underground passages they have dug—a new trap has a row of sharp incisors attached to a sliding rod to drop and pin the rodent fast as soon as the trigger entering the hole is disturbed.
Shotguns can be changed into rifles by an auxiliary which slides inside the shot barrel and is fitted with a shell ejector, the rear of the inner barrel being of the same shape as the shot cartridge and carrying a flange so it fits tightly.
In a new propelling device for bicycles two cylinder air pumps are attached to the head of the machine to be operated by raising and lowering the handle bars. A compressed-air motor is geared to the driving sprocket wheel to run the machine.
A safety pocket, which can be used in any garment, is provided on one side of its mouth with a flat spring and on the other side with a spiral spring, which rests on an elastic strip and presses tightly against the flat spring to keep the pocket closed.

ENTERTAINING BREVITIES.
There are 22 allusions in the Bible to the east wind, 19 of them being of a disparaging character.
The remarkable echo at Eagle's Nest, on the banks of the Killarney, Ireland, repeats a bugle call 109 times, each clear and distinct.
The island of Malta has a language of its own, derived from the Carthaginian and Arabian tongues. The nobility of the island speak Italian.
The number of sheep in the world is estimated to amount to 550,000,000. Of this number between one-third and one-half are believed to be merinos.
A member of the British parliament cannot resign. When he wishes to retire he accepts the stewardship of the Chiltern hundreds, a nominal office in the gift of the crown and paying a salary of 20 shillings a year. No member of parliament can remain in his seat after accepting a government appointment other than a cabinet position, and this fiction of the stewardship has thus been perpetuated for at least 600 years.

ABOUT THE FARM AND HOME.
When cream is extremely rich it can be whipped more easily if a little milk is added to it. It will also whip more easily if it is well chilled.
When ink is spilled upon linen try dipping the damaged material in pure melted tallow. The hot tallow seems to absorb the ink, and, after washing, the stain will be found to have disappeared.
When the fingers are stained in peeling fruits, preparing green walnuts or in similar ways, dip them in a strong tea, rubbing them well with a nail brush and afterward wash them with warm water and the stains will disappear.
Grasses are always useful for table decoration. In order to have them "in stock," as it were, the heads should be picked just before they are ripe and dried in the shade. They will then keep well without dropping the seeds.

ABOUT WOMEN AND MUSIC.
Bach was very happy with his first wife, and her influence in his music is marked. Beethoven's music was in many cases directly inspired by women.
Mozart, Spohr and Weber were strongly influenced in their compositions by their wives. Mendelssohn received his strongest influence from his sister Fanny, whose compositions reflect the creative mind of her brother. Wagner's second wife exerted a marked influence on his writings.

An Atmospheric Paradox.
On the island of Sakhalin, off the east coast of Siberia, the cold winds and sea currents which circulate around it seem to have reversed the ordinary course of nature respecting the arrangement of temperature. The air on high land and near the sea level is warmest, while the coldest air is found near the sea, and there the plants are of an arctic character, while in the lofty interior subtropical plants flourish on the heights in the mild climate.

MONUMENT TO CRISP.
Simple Shaft Dedicated to the Memory of the Ex-Speaker.
The first monument to the memory of the late Charles Frederick Crisp, ex-speaker of the house of representatives and United States senator-elect, was erected recently in the center of the beautiful family plot in Oak Grove cemetery, Americus, Ga. It is one of the simplest shafts that mark the resting places of the nation's greatest men, but it is in thorough keeping with the life of him whose memory it commemorates. It is not elaborate or highly costly, but simply a memorial of a wife's devotion and children's love. The monument is 17 feet high and is made of Italian marble. The east side bears the inscription: "Husband and Father." On the west side are the words: "Charles Frederick Crisp, born in Sheffield, England, January 29, 1845, died in Atlanta, Ga., October 23, 1896." The north side bears the inscription: "Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congress." Cut in large letters on the base of the stone is the one word, "Crisp."

This monument was erected by the immediate family of the dead statesman. It is handsomely designed and beautiful in its modesty and simplicity. The life of Charles Frederick Crisp was simple to the degree that it was free from formalities and conventionalities, and the monument that stands at the head of his grave is intended to impress that fact upon the stranger who may be led by its ever-reminding presence to recall the life and works of the distinguished dead. The stone was placed in position without any formal exercises on the part of the people, though hundreds flocked to the grave and watched the unveiling with uncovered heads.

TRAVELING NURSERY.
A Railroad Invention of Particular Interest to Mothers.
Prize the railroad man who has invented the traveling nursery, all ye who have had journeys made hideous by wailing babies and fretful children. Through trains have added to their bathrooms, libraries, smoking rooms and the like one more convenience—a room for the babies.
The traveling nursery takes up about as much room as a private state room. The walls are heavily padded and the floor thickly carpeted, so that the juvenile head need not indicate the miles passed by the bumps gained. Over the floor are fastened little stools and rocking chairs. At each end of the compartment, and firmly secured, are two cozy cots, on which the smaller children lie and watch the games of the older ones. Each car containing the nursery attachment will carry a matron or nurse, who will be selected with a special reference to her ability to amuse and care for her little charges, and she will have at her command supplies of milk, cookies and other edibles and drinkables dear to the infantile heart. She will also have charge of a medicine chest containing a full assortment of the simpler remedies for childish ailments. A miniature toy shop is another adjunct of the traveling nursery and it will contain everything, from baby rattles to picture books and fairy tales.

THE CRISP MONUMENT.
(Recently Erected in Oak Grove Cemetery, Americus, Ga.)

but simply a memorial of a wife's devotion and children's love. The monument is 17 feet high and is made of Italian marble. The east side bears the inscription: "Husband and Father." On the west side are the words: "Charles Frederick Crisp, born in Sheffield, England, January 29, 1845, died in Atlanta, Ga., October 23, 1896." The north side bears the inscription: "Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, Fifty-second and Fifty-third Congress." Cut in large letters on the base of the stone is the one word, "Crisp."

This monument was erected by the immediate family of the dead statesman. It is handsomely designed and beautiful in its modesty and simplicity. The life of Charles Frederick Crisp was simple to the degree that it was free from formalities and conventionalities, and the monument that stands at the head of his grave is intended to impress that fact upon the stranger who may be led by its ever-reminding presence to recall the life and works of the distinguished dead. The stone was placed in position without any formal exercises on the part of the people, though hundreds flocked to the grave and watched the unveiling with uncovered heads.

TRAVELING NURSERY.
A Railroad Invention of Particular Interest to Mothers.
Prize the railroad man who has invented the traveling nursery, all ye who have had journeys made hideous by wailing babies and fretful children. Through trains have added to their bathrooms, libraries, smoking rooms and the like one more convenience—a room for the babies.
The traveling nursery takes up about as much room as a private state room. The walls are heavily padded and the floor thickly carpeted, so that the juvenile head need not indicate the miles passed by the bumps gained. Over the floor are fastened little stools and rocking chairs. At each end of the compartment, and firmly secured, are two cozy cots, on which the smaller children lie and watch the games of the
