FREELAND, PA., NOVEMBER 29, 1897.

Traded Wives.

A sensational case with a funny side is reported from El Reno, Kan. A couple arrived at the principal hotel and registered themselves as man and wife. In fact, they were elopers, one having run away from a wife and the other a husband. In the course of a week the injured husband and the injured wife arrived from Kentucky and caused the arrest of the pair. The deserted man and woman had never seen each other before, but while waiting for requisition papers from Kentucky they stopped at the same hotel, and formed an acquaintance. Having a common grief, they became interested in each other, and, on the day the requisition papers were to arrive, they astonished the officers by eloping on their own account, going to Texas, where they are now supposed to be. The first pair of elopers were released from jail, and the Kentucky officer returned home, after informing the local paper that he "hoped a rattlesnake would bite him if he ever traveled a thousand miles again to help a couple of men trade wives."

Says a Philadelphia marriage license clerk: "Probably 50 per cent. of those who come to us for licenses to marry imagine that before they can get the necessary permit they will be compelled to tell all their family secrets. One man who came in one day last spring was actually prepared to undergo a physical examination to prove that his heart and lungs were all right. We made out a license last week for a young fellow who had prepared with some pains evidently the following history of his bride, which he left with us: 'Miss —, aged 28, in Phil. eight years, father and mother both living Both Willing grandfather and mother Both dead. Mother 55 year old father 65 yrs old grandfather 76 when he died grandmother died when father was 18 yrs old all from Delaware Sussex Co.'"

Down in a West Virginia county is a grand jury which has made a record in the matter of liquor law violation indictments. It is not the number of the indictments, although they reached the generous total of 300, that constitutes the peculiarity of the case, but the fact that the whole 300 were issued against one man and on the testimony of one man. Michael Callahan is the man who is staggering under this load of indictments for selling liquor without a license, and the man who testified against him said he had bought a drink of Callahan every day, except Sundays, for nearly a year. On this testimony the grand jury issued the 300 indictments, one for each offense.

The experiment of putting a woman in charge of a part of the street-cleaning work in Chicago pleases the sweepers. One of them said, through an interpreter: "We like the woman. She doesn't curse and swear at us. Man foreman drive us around like slaves and call us bad names. . . . She says: 'How do?' and other nice things, and then we do good work. She see it and say so. That make us feel good and we work more." You can get better work even out of a dumb beast by being kind to him; much more out of a man, as this woman's dealings with unpromising material abundantly show.

To those who are fond of fruit, but have been scared by stories about the causation of appendicitis, the following from Dr. Seaver, of Philadelphia, may be offered as words of comfort: "The idea that a foreign body must necessarily be present has given way before our more complete knowledge of the disease." And again: "In a vastly greater number of cases, however, it occurs through an eroded mucous membrane. The erosion is caused by masses of fecal matter, rarely by a foreign body."

Upon the Kauffman farm, in Springfield township, Bucks county, Pa., is a rose tree of the crimson Rambler variety which is noted for its remarkable growth and abundance of flowers. It bears a beautiful crimson flower, and last year had 5,000 blossoms and buds.

SHE MET THE GOVERNOR

And Found Him to Be a Real Nice Gentleman, Too.

A Maiden from Washington Tells How She Made the Acquaintance of Tennessee's Chivalrous Chief Executive.

"I have learned that parrots and girls sometimes talk too much and too carelessly," remarked a pretty girl not long back from the recent Nashville exposition to a Washington Star reporter. "You see, I was doing the exposition, under the most delightful auspices, and meeting all sorts of people constantly. I was also collecting souvenirs, everything from badges to food specimens. One day some special ceremonies were going on, and the Washington delegation had its headquarters at the leading hotel. I was on hand, making my everlasting collection of souvenirs. Papa had introduced me to a lot of bearded, bagged and ribboned men, and I was chatting away regardless of names and titles. It was safe to call everybody colonel. Pretty soon I found myself talking to an exceedingly good-looking gentleman with a pair of merry eyes and an expansive forehead. I didn't notice much else, because I was so taken up with the magnificence of his decorations. He had a dream of a gold-fringed sash crossed about his breast, more masonic, military and society badges than I could count, and a shining pair of epaulettes, not to mention a plumed helmet. Visions rose before me of possessing one of these epaulettes or at least one of his many decorations. The man fairly scintillated gold, red and blue, and as he appeared to be very deferential, with a wealth of southern chivalry in his manner, I had no hesitancy in making a bid for an addition to my collection of souvenirs. Summoning my most fetching smile, I asked for an epaulet.

"My 'colonel' looked rather surprised, and expressed regret that he was not

DIDN'T KNOW HIM.

"(Can't I Have a Single Ribbon, Colonel?)" at liberty to comply with my request, adding that he was booked for a conspicuous position in the parade to take place later on.

"At least let me have one of those stunning badges. You have no idea what a cherished addition it would be to my collection of Nashville mementoes." The colonel, looking further amused, replied that it grieved him beyond expression to refuse me.

"Now, colonel," said I, growing bold, "don't say no to everything. Can't I have a single ribbon of all your gorgeousness?"

"So sorry," murmured the polite colonel, "but I'll tell you what I will do. I'll get you some pieces of ribbon corresponding in color to my badges. It's the nearest I can come to giving the badges themselves."

"All right," I assented. "But don't be long, colonel, for I may have to go any minute."

"With a profound bow the colonel withdrew, and just at that moment papa came up with a smiling remark about my 'catching very big fish in my conversational net,' after the manner of teasing fathers."

"Oh, he was rather nice," I retorted, in an offhand manner. "I have just sent him to get me some ribbons. He refused utterly to part with any of his own decorations."

"Sent him to get you some ribbons?" gasped my astonished father. "Sent the governor of Tennessee for ribbons?"

"Who? I almost shrieked.

"Why, the governor; the governor of this state. Child, that was Gov. Bob Taylor you were talking to. He's regarded as the most popular man in the state, and he is famous for having won his election by playing the fiddle on the stump instead of making long-winded campaign speeches. How dare you transform the governor into a messenger boy, to do your shopping?"

"Papa and I groaned out a miserere duet, and I simply flew from that hotel. You don't suppose I waited to get the ribbons? Not I. Another sight of that man would have made me feel about the size of a fly. Only think of it, a girl ordering about a governor of a great state with as little concern as she would have commanded a college freshman. I heard that the governor returned shortly afterward with the ribbons and a box of bonbons, and he was greatly disappointed because I was not present to receive them. During the remainder of my stay in Nashville I devoted myself to keeping out of the way of Gov. Taylor. Papa says when I learn to keep my ears wider open and my mouth closer shut I will be more of a credit to the family name."

Railway Up Mount Sinai.

Efforts are being made to construct a railway from El-Tor to the summit of Mount Sinai. A depot will be erected near the spot where, according to tradition, Moses stood when receiving the commandments. The line will also pass the cave in which the prophet Elijah remained in hiding while fleeing from the priests of Baal.

India is the only country that makes death by the attack of serpents and wild beasts a feature of its annual statistics. That it has good cause for doing so is shown in the impressive figures of last year's mortality—1,133 deaths from snake bites and 291 people killed by tigers and other wild animals.

REPORTED FROM COURT.

Voluntary intoxication is held, in Harris vs. United States (D. C. App.), 36 L. R. A. 465, to be neither an excuse nor a palliation for the crime of murder. In a note on this case a great number of authorities are compiled on the question; "What intoxication will excuse crime?"

An ordinance renewing the restrictions on the location and width of an elevated railroad, which had been made by a former ordinance, is held, in Tudor vs. Chicago & South Side Rapid Transit Railroad company (Ill.), 36 L. R. A. 379, to be applicable to pending proceedings for condemnation of the right of way.

A suit to cancel invalid county warrants was unsuccessful, in Ada county vs. Dullen Bridge company (Idaho), 36 L. R. A. 367, on the ground that a remedy provided by statute to compel the holders of the warrants to waive their claims on them or else abandon them was an adequate remedy at law, which rendered the suit in equity for cancellation unnecessary.

Power to exercise the right of eminent domain for the relocation of a railroad is held, in Busby vs. Kansas City M. & B. R. company (Miss.), 36 L. R. A. 501, to be not implied merely because the relocation would avoid payment of damages for injuries to lands and crops by flood water caused by a prior improper location. A note to this case reviews the authorities on the right to relocate a railroad. The case itself overrules a decision in 42 Miss. 555, and says: "The opinions found in that volume are the utterances of a tribunal appointed by the military satrap who had ruled in a prostrate commonwealth, and have no other binding authority upon us than that each case therein must be regarded as res judicata."

IRONICAL IS.

If a girl uses enough paint she may resemble the picture of health.

If genius is a disease but few people in the world have any cause for alarm.

If it wasn't for the weather there are lots of men who would never look toward heaven.

If the domestic troubles of a married couple are only little ones they ought to be happy.

If an up-to-date girl is pressed to tell a man she loves him she lets him keep right on pressing.

If you want to attract a woman's attention to any particular thing, just place it in front of a mirror.—Chicago News.

SILENT SISTERHOOD.

Women Who Enter It Are Condemned to Eternal Silence.

There is a refutation of all the slanders in regard to woman's ever-busy tongue in a sisterhood which exists in France and which resembles the famous Trappist monks, who never speak.

These women when they voluntarily enter the convent are condemned to eternal silence. It is the only sisterhood of its kind in the world and was founded in the beginning of the nineteenth century. The 50 women within the walls never leave their chosen home, never speak to one another, never lift their eyes except in prayer or work and walk with their black cowls drawn over their faces so that they can neither see nor be seen. They are living yet dead—year in and year out they exist, never raising their eyes to the sky in their wish to be delivered of the world and its temptations. Strangers are shown about the convent by nuns from an adjacent convent, which does not observe the rule of silence.

THE SILENT SISTERS.

(Showing a Typical Group at Prayer.)

The silent sisters rise at four a. m. and till 7:30 tell their beads in the chapel. The refectory is dark, gloomy and unheated. Instead of a floor the feet sink into sand. Each sister has a little drawer where her tableware is kept. Sometimes while at meals the superior rings a bell and each sister is supposed to pause instantly, with hands upraised to the mouth perhaps, and cannot move till the bell rings again. This is to inculcate submission and patience. These women, unlike other sisterhoods, do no charity, never attending the sick or suffering, teaching children or rescuing wayfarers. They are engaged in mortifying the flesh to purify their souls.

TROLLEY CAR FENDER.

In This Instance It Performed Its Mission Wondrously Well.

This brief story is intended to show that, while many good judges differ upon the question of the efficiency of the trolley car fender, it does in some instances fill the bill. A few days ago a bicyclist was threading his way among the wagons and pedestrians passing hither and thither at a crowded corner in Philadelphia. A trolley car had stopped at the south side of the intersecting street. The wheelman had just succeeded in extricating himself from a rather dangerous tangle of wagons and put on speed in the endeavor to cross the tracks ahead of the car. The motorman of the trolley car, however, determined to take the right of way and motioned to the cyclist to slow up. The fellow on the wheel was stubborn and kept on his way. The next moment the bike and the car came together. Then the motorman's nerve forsook him and he threw all his strength into the brake. The wheel

A Word With You...

It is worth your while to give attention to some reasons why you should be a reader of "The Philadelphia Press."

"The Press" is the greatest home newspaper of the United States. Its record of each day's events, in all parts of the world, is more complete than that of any other paper. It has no space for sensationalism or anything tending to lower the moral tone.

No other Philadelphia paper has equal facilities for obtaining prompt and accurate reports of news events, wherever they may occur. Reporters for "The Press" are in every section of Philadelphia every day; special correspondents of "The Press
