Skin of the Ordinary House Cat is Known as "Roof Sable."

Fur garments in this country are lower in price and better in quality than abroad, and their finish, as well as style, is faultless.

Fine furs, such as foxes, chinchillas, sables, ermine and sea otter, are brought to this country free of duty, so that even if those furs are purchased abroad no duty is saved. These furs are dressed and prepared by American workmen in so superior a manner that European furriers intrust their curing to American firms.

Saal garments are cheaper to-day than for a long time, notwithstanding the scarcity of seals.

Sables of all descriptions and from all countries will form an important part of the fur business during the present season, and a little common sense, practical information on this, the noblest of furs, will not come amiss.

present season, and a little common sense, practical information on this, the noblest of furs, will not come amiss.

Sables lead for fashionable fur trade. All is not sable that is so called. Sables from $2 to $250 spiece are entitled to that name.

Japanese sable is of greenish gray color and has a bright yellow throat. It is worth about $2.50. The next in price, Hudson Bay sables, are light brown in color and have a pinkish brown throat. According to color and lustre they range in price from $2.50 \tau $30, and more for silvery specimens.

The skin of the Persian lamb is dyed in this country as lustrously and well as abroad, and garments of it are purchased cheaper in this country than anywhere else in the world. Persian lamb for garment purposes began to find popularity with the appearance of electric seal, or brown dyed rabbit fur, from which the hair had been climinated by machinery. It takes a good furrier to tell at a glance the difference between the real Persian lamb garment is easily recognized by even inexperienced eyes.

The American skunk, one of the most reliable furs, is sold under the name of Alaska sable.

The skin of the ordinary black house cat, figuring under the cognomen of genet, is humorously termed "roof sable" by the trade.—Cloaks and Furs.

Hot Water Slots.

Boiling water from street lamps is the latest scheme to which the slot system has been applied. The machine takes the form of a handsome street lamp, with a large base, which contains a cistern holding forty gallons of water. Cold water is fed into a spiral coil and pre-heating chamber above the that, and is there converted into steam by the heat. The steam is then expelled by its own expansive force down the base, where it heats the water in the cistern by circulation through an iron coil, so that the steam does not actually come into contact with the water to be supplied to the public. The directors of the company claim that not only could they utilize the waste heat of the lamp in London, but that at 1 cent a gallon they could pay for the gas and for the water used, and then leave a large margin for profit.
