Disinherited by Her Father.

A big sensation was created in the social circles of Pottsville over the wedding on Thursday of Edward A. Ratiagan and Miss Mary E. Drumheller.

The latter is an heiress and the only daughter of Jesse Drumheller, who is worth over a quarter of a million, a borough councilman and a director of the Pennsylvania bank. The groom is a laborer employed at the Pottsville shops, but of very prepossessing appearance.

Miss Drumheller saw him for the first time several months ago while playing with the Third Brigade band, of Pottsville, of which he is a member, and became infatuated with him. The lovers met and decided to wed despite the bitter opposition of the bride's father, who threatened to disinherit her if she did not break off her engagement with Ratiagan.

After the wedding Mr. Drumheller tore up his will which read in her favor, and says he will cut off his daughter without a cent. Miss Drumheller is much attached to her new husband, whom she prefers to the fortune. Her father has sold his $50,000 hotel, which he was holding solely for his daughter's benefit. He has also prohibited her from visiting his house.

Election Muddle at Beaver Meadow.

Beaver Meadow was incorporated a borough last June. A decree of court set a time for holding the first borough election. The election was held and the Republicans were victorious. There was a full complement of officers elected.

Now an "independent" ticket has been named, its backers claiming that all the officers elected at the special election in February. Thus there would be no "hold-overs." The Republicans have nominated men to succeed those elected for one year, only. The independents have named a complete ticket just as though no election had been held last summer. Both sides are acting under legal advice.

When the vote is counted there will be contests for the different "hold-over" offices, between the men elected on the Republican ticket in June, and by those on the present independent ticket, now unopposed. The matter will then be dragged into court and an expensive contest may result.

Gathering Evidence Against Deputies.

John M. Garman and John McGahegan, of Wilkesbarre; James Scharf, of Danville, and P. F. Laughran, of Hazleton, attorneys to prosecute the case against Sheriff Martin and his deputies for the Lattimer shooting, were in this region for the past week collecting evidence to be used in the trial.

Assisting the attorneys in the collection of evidence were Father Aust, Mathew Long and John Neimith, who are known as the "Prosecuting Committee."

The committee is of the opinion that sufficient evidence will be produced to convict many of the deputies of wilful manslaughter.

One of the committee stated that a proposal of settlement had been made by an offer to pay indemnity to the widows of those killed in the riot.

Building Cars for Africa.

The Bloomsburg Car Manufacturing Company has been awarded the contract to build one hundred gondola cars for the Orange Free State Railway Company, of South Africa. The cars will be of 70,000 pounds capacity and will be equipped with entire steel frames and steel tired wheels. They will also build for the same company fifteen passenger cars to be fitted with forty-inch steel tired wheels and will be similar to an American passenger coach excepting a little smaller.

These will be the first cars of this description built in America for use in Africa and their construction will give employment to one hundred men.
