Styles in Sashes.
Sashes of all kinds and conditions are well to the front in fashion, and the new ribbons are more beautiful than ever. There are Roman stripes, checks and plaids, with satin bordered edges, and flowered, corded, and watered ribbons of all kinds. Net, chiffon, and lace sashes will continue in favor; but it is not alone sashes for the waist that swell the list. The sashes for the neck are quite as conspicuous and more generally worn, for all women seem to like the long silken cravats around their throats. They are made of liberty gauze, chiffon, and thin silk, or of Swiss, with hemstitched and lace-trimmed ends. The newest of these neck sashes is a scarf of net with an elaborate lace pattern at the ends and an edge all around. They range in price from $4 to $15, and are really very elegant. In smaller things for the neck there is an unlimited variety. Short bows and knotted cravats of pure white lawn, with knifed frills on the ends, are added to an array of lace knots and neck frills which are beyond description.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. It offers one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. STORIES OF RELIEF.
Two Letters to Mrs. Pinkham.

Mrs. JOHN WILLIAMS, Englishtown, N. J., writes:
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I cannot begin to tell you how I suffered before taking your remedies. I was so weak that I could hardly walk across the floor without falling. I had womb trouble and such a bearing-down feeling; also suffered with my back and limbs, pain in womb, inflammation of the bladder, piles and indigestion. Before I had taken one bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt a great deal better, and after taking two and one-half bottles and half a box of your Liver Pills I was cured. If more would take your medicine they would not have to suffer so much."

Mrs. JOSEPH PETERSON, 513 East St., Warren, Pa., writes:
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have suffered with womb trouble over fifteen years. I had inflammation, enlargement and displacement of the womb. I had the backache constantly, also headache, and was so dizzy. I had heart trouble, it seemed as though my heart was in my throat at times choking me. I could not walk around and I could not lie down, for then my heart would beat so fast I would feel as though I was smothering. I had to sit up in bed nights in order to breathe. I was so weak I could not do anything."

"I have now taken several bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and used three packages of Sanative Wash, and can say I am perfectly cured. I do not think I could have lived long if Mrs. Pinkham's medicine had not helped me."

Hats For Spring and Summer.

CREATION OF VELVET AND TULLE.

The effect is charming. A novel manner of using tulle is to arrange it in layers, one over the other, until it is quite opaque, and then either stretch it smoothly over a firm shape or arrange it in the form of a beret, with the loose edges of the tulle separate, like the leaves of a book, and each edged with very narrow satin ribbon or a row of spangles or jet nail-heads. In Paris flower-trimmed hats and bonnets are already the vogue, and

They are always of a deep black, not a blue black, and wear well, but are among the expensive materials. However, as they do not require much trimming, they are not so expensive as might be thought.

In fine buttons for bodices and jackets some handsome novelties are shown in celluloid, jet, steel and porcelain. The latter are especially lovely, and often look like miniatures, so exquisitely are ideal heads painted upon them.

Girls' Costume in Light Weight Serge.
Whatever number of more elaborate and delicate gowns the growing girl's wardrobe may include, one of sturdy stuff, simply made, is essential to her comfort and well-being. The model shown in the double-column illustration, says May Manton, is of light-weight serge in royal blue and is trimmed with fancy black braid. But cheviot, covert cloth and all the new spring suitings, as well as cashmere, are equally suitable.

The foundation for the waist is a fitted lining that closes at the center-back. On it are arranged the full body portions and the yoke, which is extended and divided to form slashed epaulettes. The straight strip shown at the front is lined with crinoline, then applied to the waist proper, covering the edges of full fronts. The sleeves are two-seamed and fit snugly, except for the slight puffs at the shoulders, which are universally worn by children and young girls. The pointed wrists are finished with frills of lace, and at the throat is a high standing collar.

The skirt is four-gored and fits smoothly across the front and over the hips, the fulness at the back being laid in backward-turning plaits. It is lined throughout, but unstiffened, and is trimmed with two rows of fancy braid.

To make this costume for a girl of eight years will require two and one-half yards of forty-four-inch material.

An Extraordinary Similarity.
An ambitious young lawyer paid his first visit to a country court, not far from New Orleans, not long since. He went to represent a big railroad in a suit brought by a countryman to recover the value of an ox which he had lost in a vain attempt to hold up the limited mail. The question before the court was one of identification, and the countryman had testified that he knew the ox by his color and the flesh-marks. The young lawyer rose and with dignity said: "If your Honor please, there can be no question that this witness has sworn falsely when he testified that an ox can be recognized by its color. I was a stenographer before I became a lawyer, and for two days, your Honor" (drawing out his note-book), "I have taken a detailed description of every ox that passed the hotel, and I am prepared to swear as an expert that all oxen look alike to me." "You are talking with the dignity of the court, sir!" sternly said the Judge, "I will fine."

"Hold on, Judge," said the clerk, "there hasn't been but one yoke of oxen in this town in a week. Old Man Henley's been a haulin' wood, and the lawyer's been countin' the same oxen over and over." "Judgment for the plaintiff," said the Judge, and the lawyer took his departure, a sadder but wiser man.—Argonaut.

Thrifty Firemen.
The fire engine house, No. 15, at Sixteenth and Bell streets has in addition to two hose reels and trucks and prancing horses the essentials of a dairy and a chicken farm. At No. 15 there are always milk cows in plenty and chickens in profusion. This engine house is on the north side of the stock yards and abuts on the shed where speculators at the yards house their cows that are in milk. This explains the dairy end of the story. The firemen have only to step from their backdoor into the cow shed to obtain all the fresh milk that they and their families need and in the summer time they indulge in great quantities of ice cream.

On the south side of the engine house is a chicken coop and last summer the firemen raised 800 chickens by the aid of two incubators. Now they have hens enough in their primitive coop to furnish two dozen eggs a day. At night as the firemen sit about the glowing stove drying their clothes after a "run" they prepare a chicken stew of fowls from their own coop with milk from the placid bovines of the speculators' sheds.—Kansas City Star.

How She Described It.
Dear Hubby:
I write this in a great hurry, so that you may get it in time to start for home on the first train. Isn't it dreadful! The nasty fire company just ruined all my newest gowns, what were not burned, and to make matters worse I am living with the Rushtons, who, as you know, have the worst children on earth. They just worry the life out of me—as if it were not enough to suffer the loss of my lovely gowns. Isn't it dreadful! I suppose we'll have to live in a hotel for a while, but do come at once. Your distracted wife,

Mrs. Watt has no fewer than 269 descendants—12 children (6 sons and 6 daughters), 80 grandchildren, 175 great-grandchildren, and 2 great-great-grandchildren.—Pall Mall Gazette.

CANADA'S FAMOUS ENGINEER.
William Ogilvie Knows All About Klondike and Its Gold Fields.
William Ogilvie, the great geodetic coast survey engineer of Canada, knows more about the Klondike and a gold fields than most of the men who have already made fortunes out of the Yukon discoveries. As a matter of fact, it was Mr. Ogilvie who told many a poor man just where to go and what to do to make himself rich. He not only knows the ins and outs of the Klondike country, but he is familiar with all the country over an immense tract lying between the Yukon and the Arctic Ocean. He made several surveys of the boundary and he has always been clever enough to get the disputed land on the British side of the imaginary line that separates Alaska from the British possessions.
Mr. Ogilvie is 52 years of age. He was born on April 7, 1846, in the County of Russell, province of Ontario, not many miles below Ottawa. He received an appointment under the government of Canada as a surveyor in 1875, and in October, 1896, was appointed by the present government chief clerk and astronomer in the survey branch of the department of the Interior, which position he still holds.

When the news of the rich deposits of gold in the Yukon began to spread in 1895 Inspector Constantine was sent there with a detachment of mounted police. The greater part of the mining was then being done on the tributaries of Forty Mile and Sixty Mile creeks, close to the one hundred and forty-first meridian, and it became necessary that a definition of the line in this neighborhood should be had, and this work has been entrusted to Mr. Ogilvie, who had been commissioned in 1887 to produce the line of the one hundred and forty-first meridian, which, according to treaty, constitutes the boundary line between Alaska and the British possessions. In 1887 he went in over the Chilkoot Pass, making a micrometer survey from the coast to the one hundred and forty-first meridian, and then by a series of lunar culminations determined the position of the meridian, finding that Cudahy and Forty Mile were both in Canadian territory. He left Ottawa again for the Yukon on June 10, 1895, and did not see home again until December, 1897, although he came out from Dawson City on July 15 last. While in the Klondike he made a survey of Dawson City in order that it should be properly laid out, and acted as arbitrator in settling several of the mining disputes in cases where the disputants voluntarily agreed to refer the matter to him and able by his decision.
