A queer House.
A queer house, built of iron and thick glass, has been erected on the general hospital grounds in Yokohama by Dr. Van ner Heyden, a bacteriologist. The purpose in its building was to exclude, as far as possible, the germs of disease. To that end it is built dust-tight and with insect-proof joints. It has no window-sashes. Provision is made in the second story to allow the escape of air from within; it enters only by means of a pipe, is carefully filtered through cotton-wool, and to make sterilization more complete the air is driven against a glycerin-coated plate which captures such microbes as pass through cotton. Strong sunlight also helps to destroy possible survivors. The impurities due to breathing and other causes are carefully absorbed by chemicals. It has been found that milk and unsalted butter remain sweet much longer in this dwelling than elsewhere.—Boston Globe.

Fishes in Line.

It is not unusual at the Aquarium to see in a tauk the fishes all together side by side and heads in a line, like a platoon or section of men. They remain thus for a considerable time. Most fishes are gregarious, they keep together in schools in the water, and here they seem to keep together for company's sake. Sometimes all the fishes in a tauk but one will be lined up in this way sidely side and headed in one direction, while the single fish will be back of the others, and beaded the other way. Then the suggestion of soldiers conveyed to the mind by the fishes in line is strengthened. For the single fish seems to be a rear guard, looking out for the enemy in that direction.—New York Sun.

Great Rat Catchers.

Great Rat Catchers.

According to an account in the "Journal d'Hygiene," rats have become so abundant in Brazil that a domestic snake, the giboya, which has about the circumference of the arm, is sold in the marketplace in Rio Janeiro, to be kept in the house as a protection againt rodents. It would seem that the serpent pursues its prey more for the pleasure that there is in it than from a sense of hunger, since it is said it rarely eats the rats caught. Similar in its habits and attachments to the domestic cat of our more northern latitudes, the giboya will, it is said, find its way back to the house of its master even if transported to a considerable distance. Bird Which Speaks Five Languages.

Miss Emma Thursby's myna has almost as much reputation as Miss Thursby herself. The bird speaks in five languages, sings Chinese songa, imitates a banjo and laughs at jokes. Since Miss Thursby has lived in her present apartments the myna has been caged in. The other day it began to beg pitifully, "Blease let me go out. I'll come right back." Its intelligence is almost uncapay.—New York World.

A South American Snake Story.

There is more than one way of fighting a snake. In Natal, South Africa, where lives the deadly mamba serpent, a party of fifty or sixty Kaffirs were building a road. In the course of their work they came to a huge stone, under which dwelt a large black mamba, well-known to the nelghboring inhabitants as being very fierce and venomous. The superintendent anticipated trouble with the rock and so he offered a reward to the Kaffir that would bring him the snake's skin. For a time none of them dared make the attrack, but a slim youth finally sauntered forward, and amid the jeers and protestations of the rest declared himself equal to the task. He took from his neck what looked like a bit of shriveled stick, chewed it, swallowed some of it, spat out the rest on his hands, and proceeded to rub his glistening brown body and limbs all over. Then, taking up his stick, and chanting a song of defiance, he advanced with great confidence and swagger to the boulder. There he roused up the mamba, who in great fury at being disturbed bit him in the lip with great venome, The boy took no notice of the bit, but broke the snake's back with his stick and bringing him to his master esked for the reward, obtaining which, he went back to his work, and the lite of the reptile had no effect on him whatever.

No tribe, not even that of a cow (better than any gold in the eyes of a Kaffir), would induce this native to disclose the secret of his antidote, which, he said, had been handed down in his family for generations. The snake was a very long one, and so old that it had a mane. It is a well-known fact that certain of the Zulus have antidotes for the more deadly snake poisons, which they preserve as a secret within their own familles.

Gentlemen:

Your esteemed favor of the 11th inst. to hand and contents noted. We thank you for your kind words of appreciation. We mean just what we say, that for careful and scientific construction and real practical value the Lovell Diamond is undoubtedly the best wheel made. In our investigation we examined 37 leading makes, and we were satisfied after most thorough tests that we were justified in giving the Palm to the "Diamond." were justified in giving the Palm to the ''Plamond."
