The machines were all marvels of the most recent ideas of mechanical construction, and were brought together without the slightest intimation or knowledge to the manufacturers that such a test was to take place. The practical experts composing the investigating board gradually weeded the machines down to a small numbing of the relative morits of the machines, they were unanimous in their verdict that the Lovell Diamond was undubtedly the best wheel made and so reported to the paper, the president of which immediately wrote the J. P. Lovell Arms company informing the latter of the investigation of the paper, the president of which immediately wrote the J. P. Lovell Arms company had of the matter. Previous to and including 1936 the machine bearing the name in the lovell of the machine bearing the name place has been constructed at the factory of the John P. They Remarry Every Year.

Just before Probate Judge Berr closed his office one night recently he was paid a visit by a very strange couple. The visitors were a middle-aged man and woman, fairly well dressed and very good looking.

The man asked the Judge if he would issue them a marriage license and perform the ceremony. It is needless to say that the Judge answered in the affirmative, for this is his business. The man gave his name as G. C. Hopkins and his companion answeged to the name of Lillian Hopkins.

man gave his name as G. C. Hopkins and his companion answeiged to the name of Lillian Hopkins.

"Are you related to each other?" inquired the Judge.

"Slightly," responded the visitor.

"We are man and wife."

Judge Herr naturally asked him his reasons for being married again, and the stranger related a very remarkable story. He stated that they were married five years ago in the city of Chicago and have celebrated their wedding anniversary each year by getting remarried.

"My wife and I entered into an agreement," said he, "when we were trest united in the holy bonds of wedlock, to the effect that at the expiration of the first year our marriage should become void, and if we wanted to live together longer we should get married again. "Prepare For the Worst, Sir."

"Almost every big surgeon has his wan pet method of preparing a patient for the news that he will have to undergo an operation," said a London specialist. "One great man I know always begins by a wholesale exaggeration of the case. If you were about to lose one of your fingers he would probably start by telling you that the safety of your life demanded on amputation of the whole arm. Gradually be would get this down to the forearm, then the hand; and by the time you knew it was only a finger you would be too much relieved to care a very great deal. 'Ah, we will soon set that right; and we'll give you a whif of the chloroform, just to insure you against feeling the least pain,' is a very favorite insimation of an operation. An Irish surgeon lately prepared a very nervous day patient of his by assuring her that he could not treat her case until she had got rid of a tooth which was causing her pain. He gave her chloroform, under the pretext of extracting the tooth, and while she was under its influence he performed an operation which saved her life."—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

The Ring Was in the Glove.

About a month ago Mrs. Willis Folks, of Wellington, lost the gold ring which had been given to her by Mr. Folks at the time they became engaged. She advertised for the trinket, and offered rewards greatly in excess of its value, but with no result. On Wednesday another lady of Wellington went into a store and commenced to try on kid gloves. Her surprise may be imagined when, in removing a glove from her hand, she found a strange gold ring upon one of her fingers. The ring was engraved "From Willis to Emma," and was at once recognized as the one lost by Mrs. Folks. She had been trying on gloves in the same store, and left the ring in the glove when withdrawing her hand.—Kansas City Journal.
