

Blood is Life Pure Blood is Health

Without blood circulating through your veins you could not live. Without pure blood you cannot be well. The healthy action of every organ depends upon the purity and richness of the blood by which it is nourished and sustained. If you have salt rheum, scrofula sores, pimples, boils or any kind of humor, your blood is not pure. If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla it will make your blood pure and promptly relieve all these troubles. In the spring the blood is loaded with impurities. Hence, all those unsightly eruptions, that languor and depression, and the danger of serious illness. Hood's Sarsaparilla is needed to purify, enrich and vitalize the blood and protect and fortify the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Two Acres Enough in Belgium.

What many an American farmer fails to do on 100 acres, the thrifty Hollander in Belgium easily does on two acres, namely, support a large family and lay by something for a rainy day. He does it by making the most of every inch, by heavy manuring, allowing no waste places. His two acres are surrounded by a ditch of running water. The typical two-acre Belgium farm contains a patch of wheat or rye and another of barley; another fair portion grows potatoes. A row of cabbage grows all around on the sloping sides of the ditches with a row of onions just inside, leaving bare walking room between them and the grain. The shade trees round the house are pear trees. Every foot of land is made to produce. He keeps pigs and chickens. We refer to this as illustrating the possibilities of land production. In Belgium 6,000,000 people, chiefly farmers, live on a piece of land the size of the State of Maryland. They furnish an object lesson on successful farming.—Colman's Rural World.

The Proofreader's Nemesis.

"What's the matter?" inquired the foreman, as he entered the sanctum for copy and noted the editor's bleeding nose, swollen forehead, puffed, red eye and tattered, dusty coat. "Fall down stairs?"

"No—only that," replied the editor, pointing with his finger to a paragraph in the paper before him. "It's in our account of the Crapley-Smith wedding. It ought to read: 'Miss Smith's dimpled, shining face formed a pleasing contrast with Mr. Crapley's strong, bold physiognomy.' But see how it was printed."

And the foreman read, "Miss Smith's pimpled, skinny face formed a pleasing contrast with Mr. Crapley's stony, bald physiognomy."

"Crapley was just in here," continued the editor, throwing one blood-streaked handkerchief into the waste-basket and feeling in his pockets for a clean one, "and he—but just send that fool of a proofreader in here! There's light in me yet."—Typographical Journal.

AIDED BY MRS. PINKHAM.

Mrs. W. E. Paxton, Youngtown, North Dakota, writes about her struggle to regain health after the birth of her little girl:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It is with pleasure that I add my testimony to your list, hoping that it may induce others to avail themselves of your valuable medicine.

"After the birth of my little girl, three years ago, my health was very poor. I had leucorrhoea badly, and a terrible bearing-down pain which gradually grew worse, until I could do no work. Also had headache nearly all the time, and dizzy feelings. Menstruations were very profuse, appearing every two weeks.

"I took medicine from a good doctor, but it seemed to do no good. I was becoming alarmed over my condition, when I read your advertisement in a paper. I sent at once for a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking two-thirds of the bottle I felt so much better that I sent for two more. After using three bottles I felt as strong and well as any one.

"I think it is the best medicine for female weakness ever advertised, and recommend it to every lady I meet suffering from this trouble."

Maternity is a wonderful experience and many women approach it wholly unprepared. Childbirth under right conditions need not terrify women.

The advice of Mrs. Pinkham is freely offered to all expectant mothers, and her advice is beyond question the most valuable to be obtained. If Mrs. Paxton had written to Mrs. Pinkham before confinement she would have been saved much suffering. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

FIELDS OF ADVENTURE.

THRILLING INCIDENTS AND DARING DEEDS ON LAND AND SEA.

A Treasure Coach That Ran a Gauntlet of Bandits—James Stephenson's Encounter With Three-Fingered Jack's Band—A Man Kills a Bear With a Stone

Probably one of the most remarkable affairs in the adventurous career of Colonel James Stephenson, of Omaha, a pony express rider in pioneer days, was the ambushing of one coach by the bandit gang of Three-Fingered Jack. This road agent, says the New York Sun, was assisted at that time by a band of fifty Sioux Indians under the leadership of Roman Nose. The story is well known in Nebraska, though Colonel Stephenson does not fancy relating it. In fact, he admits that this is one of the few skirmishes in which he had been engaged that reminds him of brimstone, even after a lapse of thirty years.

"You see," says Colonel Stephenson, "our company had to send at least one treasure coach over the Denver line. This was made necessary by commercial intercourse. Sometimes this coach carried $100,000 in gold, and then again it carried double that sum. We would leave Omaha on Monday morning and get into Denver on Saturday afternoon, making 600 miles in the trip. All our big Concord had six horses in those days, and you bet a man had to pay attention to business when he got his vehicle started.

"Well, on this particular trip we did have rather a warm time. You see, we carried $200,000 in gold for the company at Denver, and the plains were alive with Indians and outlaws. The Sioux were in force everywhere and express riders and stage drivers were being killed every day on the lines in Nebraska. For that reason I took personal charge of the treasure coach as far as Kearney, Neb. After that we considered ourselves safe. We carried, in addition to the money, five passengers on this trip and one guard, Ben Adams.

"We were making good time out on the trail 200 miles from Omaha before we saw signs of trouble. Then we noticed Indian videttes, who were evidently keeping us located. It was the middle of the afternoon, and a slight rain was falling, when we were attacked. It was where Lexington, Neb., now stands, at the top of the high hill overlooking the Platte. It was the plan to make the attack in those days as the coach was going up the hill, where it was ordinarily impossible to run. The band of the notorious outlaw, Three-Fingered Jack, blocked the road dead ahead, while his Indian allies were not in sight. There was a station six miles away, and instantly I determined to make an effort to drive through the line of road agents. My six tough horses were quite fresh, as I had not pushed them very hard since noon. The outlaws were scarcely prepared for my actions. They stood with drawn rifles as we approached. When the leader yelled out for me to pull up, I reached forward to obey and at the same time threw my big whip with a crack over the shoulders of the lead horses. Say, that was the greatest surprise those fellows were ever treated to. Two of their number were knocked down and run over before they could spring aside. At the same time Ben Adams fired both barrels of a heavily loaded shotgun into the outlaw band as they were huddled together at one side. Three of their number were killed by those two shots. The passengers had been warned of what was about to happen, and one commercial man—I think his name was George Golden—took charge of things inside. The guard was on the seat with me. From both sides of our treasure coach the passengers fired their pistols at the outlaws. They did little execution, but the bandits evidently thought they had surprised an army from the way they scattered. This gave me an opportunity to reach the brow of the hill before the road agents were scarcely ready to act with concert.

"Then they made up for lost time. They poured a volley into the rear of our coach, which killed two passengers outright and wounded Golden. In spite of his wounds the brave fellow climbed up to the rear window of the coach, and as the great vehicle swayed and rolled as we dashed wildly down the hill poured shot after shot from his pistols into the outlaw cavalry as they dashed after us. This probably saved the treasure and our lives, as it kept the bandits at a distance and they were afraid to approach until their Indian allies came up. But they kept up a rapid fire. The great hill is two miles long. I think we consumed about three minutes in making that distance. It was the wildest ride I ever had. The horses had to run to keep from being dragged along by the heavy coach. The wise horses were in imminent danger every minute of being caught by the lumbering stage and killed, but it was death sure if we slowed up, so I kept my hand off the brake and let the wheels turn as fast as they could. Several times it looked as if we must go into the gulch to the left, but we didn't.

"As we reached the foot of the hill the Indian horsemen, with their naked bodies well shielded behind their horses' necks, hove in sight. Then the whole party dashed forward with renewed speed. I did not slacken the coach, but instead began to ply my whip on the leaders. The Indians were not so well mounted as the bandits, and to this we probably owed our escape. The Indians could not get up close to us, and the road agents were afraid. They were frightened by the execution done by Guard Adams's shotgun at the opening of the fight. Still, the whole miserable crew kept close enough to us to send a cloud of missiles through the coach, over our ## head, and into the horses pulling the coach. One arrow pierced the face of Golden as he defended our rear. Another feathered shaft stuck into Adams's back. We did not notice it until the race was over, and the united strength of two men was necessary to extract it. In addition Adams received no fewer than ten other wounds as he sat in his seat. In spite of the jolting of the coach he managed to knock several of the prussers from their horses with his rifle. In the storm of bullets and arrows I was not hurt. One bullet passed through the cap I wore and struck the whip I was handling, cutting it short off. At the time I regarded this almost as much of a disaster as if the bullet had pierced my brain, for I did not think the horses would keep up the mad flight unless urged. But the several arrows sticking into the backs of some of the animals kept them on in their mad flight, the uninjured horses being forced to keep up by the pitching and jumping of the wounded brutes. "The gang followed us until the post was almost in sight and then drew off. Of the five passengers four were dead and Golden was desperately wounded, but recovered. Still, we were fortunate, considering the circumstances. Several of the arrows were quivering in the bodies of the men when the post was reached."

Killed a Bear With a Stone.

Charles Leidig, the mail carrier between Jersey Dale and Yosemite Valley, in California, had an unusual encounter with a half-grown cinnamon bear.

The carrier was riding slowly on the trail where it winds along the Merced river, on one side the precipitous bank of the river reaching hundreds of feet down, on the other the vertical wall of the mountain, when suddenly his horse gave a terrific snort and attempted to wheel and turn back. He realized his dangerous predicament and jumped from the horse in time to prevent the animal from turning in so narrow a space and probably falling into the rocky abyss below.

As soon as he had backed the animal to a place where he could be tied, the rider started up the trail afoot to ascertain what had frightened the horse. He had not traveled far when he was met by a bear. To run or not to run was the question. The bear was only distant about twenty feet. He reasoned that if he turned to run the brute would certainly give chase, and as there was nothing to climb, it was a certainty that he would be overtaken.

Having heard of hunters in like predicament cowering savage beasts by standing with a bold front and eyeing them, he resolved that in the present case it was the only recourse, as he was wholly unarmed. The mesmeric attempt proved a failure. Brain set upon his launches a moment and returned the stare, then gave a growl and made toward the carrier, who in this extremity reached for a stone weighing four or five pounds, and as the bear, at a distance of a few feet, was again coming to a sitting position, he hurled the stone, striking the animal fair on the upper part of the head. To the terrified mail carrier's surprise and joy the bear dropped to the ground stunned. Without losing any time he picked up the stone and repeated the blow again and again.

After satisfying himself that the bear was dead, he used his pocket knife to skin him.

Battle With a Buck.

A. G. Barker, who lives in the Alleghany Mountains, several miles north of Cato, Penn., has had an experience in the shape of a thrilling hand-to-hand encounter with a buck. Mr. Barker was traveling on an old road through the forest of the Spruce Run Game Preserve, when he was startled by a huge bellowing and cries of help. Hastening in the direction from which the cries proceeded, he was startled to see a monster buck pawing and prodding with its wide-spread antlers at a man lying prone on the ground.

Quickly securing a club, Barker rushed to the rescue, striking the animal a terrific blow in the hope of driving it away. The buck lunged sideways, and the man who was down, and who proved to be one of the wardens on the preserve, sprang to his feet, and though his clothing was torn to shreds, he seemed but little injured, and at once ran for dear life, leaving Barker to fight it out alone with the enraged buck.

With a snort of rage, the buck sprang at Barker, and the latter succeeded in grabbing hold of the deer's antlers. Barker was swung up and down and around in a circle as if only a feather-weight, and finally thrown fully twenty feet, lodging against a wall of rocks. Again the deer made for the man, pawing and trying to prod him with his horns. By keeping close to the rock Barker evaded the horn prods as much as possible, and, securing his pocket knife, began jabbing the buck in the nose. In five minutes the deer gave up the struggle, and, bleeding and bellowing with rage, ran away. Barker's clothes were torn to shreds and his body badly lacerated, but with no bones broken he was able to make his way home.

Burned Twelve Centuries.

The sacred fires of India have not all been extinguished. The most ancient which still exists was consecrated twelve centuries ago in commemoration of the voyage made by the Parsees when they emigrated from Persia to India. The fire is fed five times every twenty-four hours with sandalwood and other fragrant materials, combined with very dry fuel. This fire, in the village of Oodwars, near Bulsar, is visited by Parsees in large numbers during the months allotted to the presiding genius of fire,

Inflammatory Rheumatism.

From St. Lawrence Plaindealer, Canton, N. Y.

To suffer for years with a prevailing painful ailment, which baffled skillful medical treatment, yet which was cured by a simple household remedy, is the lot which befell Mrs. George L. Rogers, of West Main Street, Canton, N. Y.

"Thirteen years ago," said Mrs. Rogers to a reporter, "I was attacked with inflammatory rheumatism and a complication of diseases. You can judge somewhat of what I endured, when you look at these hands. They were distorted, twisted and swollen. My foot, too, is so much out of shape that the big toe lays across the others, the end touching the little toe.

"Notwithstanding I am sixty-five years old, have a pleasant home and a comfortable life to me, I was far from enjoying life for a long time. I tried different doctors and many proprietary remedies, but was not benefited.

"Last March I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and before I had finished the first box I began to feel that they were doing me good. I continued using them and steadily grew better. I have used thirteen boxes of the pills and to-day feel better than for the past fifteen years. My appetite is good, I feel bright, cheerful and have a desire to live and enjoy society.

"I have been a member of the Methodist church for many years, but for six years was unable to attend. I am able now to attend the church services regularly and certainly appreciate that privilege. I consider Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People a wonderful medicine and an antidote to other medicine could have effected the wonderful cure they have in my case." Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are composed of vegetable remedies that exert a powerful influence in purifying and enriching the blood thus curing many diseases.

In the Year 1900.

A pale form lay upon it in the hospital. Friends and relatives were gathered at the bedside; all were gazing anxiously upon the wan face of the prostrate man. Grief was written upon their faces, and tears, unconsciously and unheeded, trickled down their cheeks. Oh, would he not awaken to speak one last word before he crossed over the dark river of death! Ah—look! His lips move, his eyelids slowly open, he struggles to speak! Finally the words came. In faint, quivering tones he asked:

"Tell me, tell me, what make of air ship was it that collided with mine?"

"Have peace, my dearest," pitifully sobbed the stricken wife. "It was an improved, ball-bearing, chainless 'Aerial' of the latest model."

"Thank heaven! Now I can die happily. It is the same make as mine."—New York Evening World.
