SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT

GIVEN BY PAROCHIAL PUPILS WAS LARGELY ATTENDED.

The Grand Opera House on Monday evening was crowded to the doors by those who came to witness the annual closing exercises of the Sisters' School.

One of the largest audiences that has yet been present at the Grand opera house assembled there on Monday evening, the occasion being the sixth annual entertainment of the pupils of St. Ann's parochial school. Before the doors opened every seat was sold, and in a short while even standing room was at a premium. The decision arrived at on Monday, to give but one performance, had the effect of bringing many there who had been waiting to attend the expected reproduction, and in consequence the large building was uncomfortably filled, as people insisted on getting in after all available space was occupied.

The interior of the house and the stage were prettily decorated with the national and Cuban colors and potted plants, and the program was completed without a hitch or interruption of any kind. The work of this large number of scholars, from both the musical and general departments, gave evidence of the same careful training by the Sisters of Mercy that has been so noticeable in previous entertainments.

Each number on the lengthy program had something pleasing about it. Among those which the audience appeared to particularly enjoy were the dancing girls and the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by forty little ones, accompanying it with delicate movements. "The Grand Baby Show" also came in for much favorable comment.

"The Story of Cuba," as told in allegory in three acts, was followed intently by the audience, and the victory of that oppressed land, gained through the intercession of humanity's powerful friend, "America," was welcomed with such plaudits as to leave no room to doubt the patriotism of that audience. The drill of the Keystone Cadets, representing the boys in blue, was a creditable exhibition of military movements and roused the spirit of the spectators to the highest possible pitch.

Brewers Raise the Price of Beer.

Local beer agents have notified the saloon men that the war tax of $2 will be charged upon each barrel of beer delivered hereafter. This is an advance of $1 over the previous rate, and the retailers do not take kindly to the increase. They claim the breweries should stand at least half of the war tax, which would leave the price per barrel the same as at present. Instead, the brewers are saddling the whole tax on the saloonists. The latter cannot well raise the price of a glass to 6 or 7 cents, and unless a compromise is effected with the brewers a reduction in the size of glasses may be looked for at any time.

There is some talk of the retailers organizing to resist the advance in beer. The small amount of trade being done in their line, with no lessening in the expense of conducting a saloon, has made the business unprofitable to many, and the action of the brewers has aroused them more than anything else which has occurred in a long while.

LOCAL WAR NOTES.

Michael Leonard, a native of Ireland, was rushed through the naturalization court at Wilkesbarre on Monday. He had passed the examination for enlistment in the Ninth and lacked nothing but citizens' papers to accompany the sixty recruits who left for Chickamauga that afternoon.
