

United States Legation in Berlin.
The United States government has been inquiring through the proper channel as to the cost of purchasing or erecting its own buildings for the embassies and legations and several of the large consulates-general in Europe. It may astonish many to learn that Berlin was found the most expensive capital in the world, so far as the cost of real estate and of buildings was concerned. The only really suitable building found there for the purpose would cost $500,000. The Russian embassy building in Berlin, which is located Unter den Linden, and which is, indeed, a veritable palace, so spacious and stately is it, would cost about $4,000,000 to build to-day, ground and all. But it is, too, roomy and elegant enough to have served repeatedly for traveling quarters for Russian Czars passing through Berlin. What a miserable contrast forms the excuse for an office which the United States embassy occupies in Berlin, in Kronenstrasse, a street of small shops. In the basement of the building is a barber shop, on the ground floor a wine and schnapps shop, and above the embassy offices reside a score of private persons.

Possibly no man is as anxious to go to war as he pretends to the reporters.

Vacant Land in the United States.

The report of the Secretary of the Interior shows that only a little more than one-half of the public domain of the United States is either reserved or appropriated. The area still remaining vacant amounts to 501,943,953 acres, without including Alaska, which is supposed to embrace nearly 400,000,000 acres more. The entire area of the United States is placed at 1,835,017,692 acres. Of this, 741,702,305 acres is now owned by individuals or by corporations or by states, or has passed out of the control of the general government. The amount reserved for schools, Indians, military and naval purposes, railroad grants, parks, forest reservations, etc., including all territory reserved from sale for any purpose whatsoever, amounts to 132,441,744 acres, so that, taking the reserve land and the vacant land together, only about one-half of the area of the United States has actually passed out of control of the government, and if Alaska is included, the unoccupied area is larger by 300,000,000 acres than that which is occupied.—San Francisco Argonaut.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

Daughters Should be Carefully Guided in Early Womanhood.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more properly from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

The following letter from Miss MARIE F. JONSON, Centralia, Pa., shows what neglect will do, and tells how Mrs. Pinkham helped her:

"My health became so poor that I had to leave school. I was tired all the time, and had dreadful pains in my side and back. I was also troubled with irregularity of menses. I was very weak, and lost so much flesh that my friends became alarmed. My mother, who is a firm believer in your remedies from experience, thought perhaps they might benefit me, and wrote you for advice. I followed the advice you gave, and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills as you directed, and am now as well as I ever was. I have gained flesh and have a good color. I am completely cured of irregularity."

LIVING RENT FREE.

Philadelphia Man Who Went Broke Because He Did Not Pay.

A Philadelphia man has lived ten years in a house for which he paid no rent and no taxes. It belonged to the gas company, and he had paid rent regularly until the property of the company was transferred to the city. He says himself: "I don't remember how long it is since I stopped paying rent. It was when the gas office was on 7th street. I went there one day with my rent and offered it to Mr. White, who had charge of the gas company's real estate, but he refused to take it, and told me that it was to be paid at the city treasurer's office in the future. I took it up there and a young man there said he could not take it, as he couldn't find record of any such a house. He told me that they would notify me when they were ready to take my money. I went back to Mr. White and he advised me to go home and wait until I heard from them. Well, I waited. Nobody came to collect money until recently, when the city discovered its title and sent a man to collect. The tenant got a day to consider and promptly skipped. But his experience with a tree rent does not seem to be satisfactory if we may trust to his wife. "Yes," says she, resentfully, "he thought it was a snap, and look where he is now—no money, no business, looking for a job, and a family to support. He wouldn't take my advice and move to where business was good, but he hugged his snip and stuck here in that stagnant neighborhood and spent money on repairs for the house and didn't make any money."—Philadelphia Record.

Cure For White Grubs.

There has been much discussion in the papers devoted to farming and gardening, about the white grubs so often seen in the soil.

It was at first supposed that all these grubs were harmful to vegetation, but it has been demonstrated that one variety is absolutely harmless, while the other one does enough damage for both. It is not hard to distinguish the two kinds if one examines them closely. The harmless one is round, plump and of a pearly white color, has very short legs, and is slow moving.

The other is more active, with longer legs, less transparent body and is usually a little larger in size. The latter is the great pest of the strawberry grower. It eats the roots from the plants, and then, when the leaves curl, the grower takes hold of them to see what the trouble is, and the plants come up entirely rootless, and too much weakened to be able to put out new ones.

The following account of the proper way of reaching the Klondike is taken from an Australian newspaper: "The real starting point for the Klondike is Spokane. There the traveler takes a canoe, by which he voyages to Vancouver, B. C. At the latter port he takes a sailing vessel direct to Dawson City."

FARM AND GARDENS.

Don't let Peach Culture.

Don't let peach trees on heavy moist soil. High dry, sandy or sandy loam soil is necessary for success with this fruit. Don't select varieties because they are said to bear large specimens of fruit, but rather look out for a vigorous healthy stock budded from bearing trees, true to name and in good health. Don't try to grow anything in the peach orchard; give the trees undisturbed possession of the land from the beginning. Don't cultivate occasionally, but let the cultivation be frequent and thorough.

Don't fertilize peach orchards with any fertilizer you may happen to have in hand. Manure liberally each year and use annually commercial fertilizers that are rich in potash and phosphoric acid, but weak in nitrogen; apply broadcast. Don't let the trees grow as they will, but head them low and prune close for the first four or five years. Don't let the yellow get the start of you. Make it a business to look for the disease each week, and if discovered pull up and burn each infected tree. Don't expect a big crop of big peaches. There is more money in a three-quarters crop of first class fruit, therefore thin accordingly.

Cure For White Grubs.

There has been much discussion in the papers devoted to farming and gardening, about the white grubs so often seen in the soil.

It was at first supposed that all these grubs were harmful to vegetation, but it has been demonstrated that one variety is absolutely harmless, while the other one does enough damage for both. It is not hard to distinguish the two kinds if one examines them closely. The harmless one is round, plump and of a pearly white color, has very short legs, and is slow moving.

The other is more active, with longer legs, less transparent body and is usually a little larger in size. The latter is the great pest of the strawberry grower. It eats the roots from the plants, and then, when the leaves curl, the grower takes hold of them to see what the trouble is, and the plants come up entirely rootless, and too much weakened to be able to put out new ones.

The harmless type, sometimes called muck worms, are often found in great numbers in rotten manure, and also among plants that have been enriched with that kind of fertilizer. So far as is known they have never injured plant life, only feeding on decayed vegetable matter.

All sorts of remedies have been suggested and tried for ridding the soil of these root-eating pests, but I know of but one that has proved a perfect success, and it is this: Take a sufficient quantity of bran and spread it in a thin layer on a shed floor or in a large box. Then sprinkle it with a solution of molasses and water, enough molasses being used to color the water and make it smell quite sweet; the bran should be simply moistened, not wet. Sprinkle dry Paris green over it, mixing thoroughly, using enough to color the mixture slightly. Let it stand for a few hours, and just before evening sprinkle the mixture broadcast over the place where the grubs seem most plenty.

They feed during the night, and in the morning dead ones will be found on the surface, and, by digging a little, one can see many dead ones in the soil. It is well to repeat the operation in a week, and the two applications will usually suffice for a season. It means a great saving to all who grow strawberries, as well as to those who raise garden truck of any kind. The grubs are the larvae of the true May bug or May beetle, such large numbers of which are seen in early summer.—Vick's Monthly.

The Use of Corn Pith.

To-day no American fighting craft is deemed complete without its belt or cofferdam of corn-pith cellulose. The pith of the stock is cut out and ground into a coarse, nearly mass, and then under pressure molded into blocks or briquettes. In this form it is packed into the cells made for it against the sides of the ship and about the region of the water line. The stuff weighs only a fractional part of a similar bulk of water. Now when an enemy's shot goes tearing through the outside plating and pierces the cellulose, if water be admitted by the rolling of the vessel the cellulose at once swells automatically and plugs the hole in itself as well as in the plating, thus preventing a dangerous admission of water in the ticklish region of the water line. A curious virtue of this stuff is that it does not exert a damaging pressure as corn would do under like circumstances, but rests content simply with plugging the hole. Of course, this material would be scattered by explosive shell fire, but even then, being fire-proofed, it will not burn.—Chicago Chronicle.

Troublesome Cuban Insects.

There are two insects in Cuba which are unknown around New York. One is the tick, and the other is the chigo. The former simply bites and irritates the skin, while the latter burrows under it or else digs little holes in it in which it lays its eggs. Both are extremely unpleasant, often very painful and sometimes dangerous. Any strong disinfectant will kill them, and if sprinkled upon the clothing will prevent their attacking the wearer.—New York Mail and Express.

HOUSEHOLD AFFAIRS.

A Pretty Pen Wiper.

A pretty little pen wiper is made of old blue kid or fine leather, seven and a half inches long by three and one-half inches wide, pinked out all around the edge. Underneath this should be placed two pieces of chamois, seven by three inches; these should be pinked out about the edges. These should all be fastened together by means of a pretty bit of Dresden ribbon half an inch wide, by tying across the center so that it looks like a butterfly.

Meat of Nuts in Cooking.

The use of the meat of nuts in cooking is not altogether new in this country. In some respects it is a revival of customs created through necessity in the early days of New England, New Amsterdam and the Carolinas. In the seventeenth century the housewives were able to make various dishes from chestnuts, acorns, hickory nuts, walnuts, butternuts, and even the humble peanut. Instead of using a mill for comminuting the meat they employed a mortar and pestle and where these were not convenient, they resorted to the rolling pin and given to two boards and a mallet. As there seems to have been no comment upon the dish prepared from any of these substances, it is fair to assume that they were not bad and possibly that they were as good as the average bread at that time.—New York Mail and Express.

Dining-Room Soda-Fountain.

The dining-room soda-fountain has seen more or less often last summer. It is again put forward with the spring housefurnishings. It is a plain oak box that might be anything until it is opened and its interior displayed. Within an ice-chest the supply of soda water is held, and small bottles of various fruit syrups are also a part of the outfit. A more simple arrangement, where soda water is wanted at the country house which is not only miles from the traditional lemon, but equally removed from the esteemed effervescence dispenser, is the use of the home-made syrups with a siphon of plain soda. The fruit syrups—strawberry, pineapple, orange, raspberry, currant and lemon—are easily made. The wish of a small boy for a soda fountain right in the wall of his room is practically, if not to the letter, accomplished.—New York Post.

Matting Instead of Wall Paper.

Wall paper is probably no doomed—it would take something of a revolution in house decoration ideas to bring that about—but it has a rival in the affections of people who want something unique in the rooms of their new houses. This rival is matting, especially Chinese matting, and the idea is to cover a wall from floor to ceiling with them. Nothing of this sort has ever been suggested by the decorators before, though strips of matting have often been used as friezes and even as dados. To cover every inch of the four walls of a room with matting is a distinct novelty in the beautifying of rooms, however, and where it has been tried it has been hailed as a great success.

A special grade and special designs of matting are, of course, used, as the ordinary variety would present no attractiveness on a wall. In every case patterns that show extremely large figures are the thing. Diamonds and stars are high in favor, and squares and blocks made to imitate carpet designs have hardly less popularity.

In all there are a dozen or more new and fresh patterns peculiarly adapted to nailing up on walls. Red and white and green and white are the colors that are used. The blue and white matting has not come into vogue yet for wall decoration, though it may appear at any time.

These matting are laid on in strips across the walls, not up and down. It should be remembered that the ordinary floor matting would not be at all the thing on walls, and that only the special varieties mentioned above should ever be used. With the proper matting laid on skillfully there is an admirable background for any sort of pictures, and a room is made that will seem delightfully cool in the hottest sort of weather.

For a matting-walled room window shades of matting of the same kind, or at least of an harmonious pattern, should be used.—New York Herald.

Receipts.

Fried Apple—Pare and quarter tart apples. Place in a frying pan, pour over them one cup sugar, three tablespoonfuls of water, three pieces of butter the size of a walnut, cover closely allowing them to steam brown. Excellent.

Toast—Warm cold "flaked" white fish or canned salmon in a little hot butter. Brown the toast neatly, dip quickly in "very hot" salted water, and rapidly and lavishly butter. Then place two or three spoons of the fish in the centre of each slice.

Baked Indian Pudding—Two quarts of milk, fourteen tablespoonfuls of suet, two coffee cups of molasses, one coffee cup of raisins, two sliced sweet apples. Have the milk scalding hot when the meal is put in. Bake four or five hours.

Peach Custard Pie—Use one crust; peel and split peaches and lay them in the crust, the hollow side upward, and sweeten. Beat one egg, one tablespoonful of sugar and a little salt; add milk enough to cover the peaches. Pour over the peaches and bake. Canned peaches may be used.

Jellied Peaches—Soak one-half a box of gelatine in one-half cup of cold water, until soft. Dissolve with one cup of boiling water. Strain, add one pint of peach syrup, the juice of one lemon and one cup of sugar. Stir until it begins to thicken, then put in the peaches. Pour into a mould. Serve with whipped cream or soft custard.

A Fatality Avoided.

From the Democrat, Goshen, Ind.

When neuralgia is accompanied by a dull, heavy pain near the heart, frequently becoming intense, it generally terminates fatally. Mrs. Nancy Flynn, who lives near Goshen, Indiana, survived such an attack and her advice is worth heeding.

"In the fall of '92," she said, "I began to have trouble with my heart. There was a sharp pain in my breast which became rapidly worse. The doctor was puzzled and put me under the influence of opiates. These sharp attacks followed one another at intervals and I became weak and had a haggard look. I was constantly in pain, seldom slept and had no appetite.

"At the end of two years I was confined to my couch most of the time and the doctors agreed that my death was only a matter of a short time.

"One day I noticed in a newspaper an item about a woman having been cured of neuralgia of the heart by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I concluded to try them.

"When I had finished one box I noticed an improvement in my condition, and when I had taken twelve boxes I was completely cured. 'Those pills have done for you what we could not do,' said one of my physicians, 'they have saved your life!'

"That was two years ago and my heart has not troubled me since. I believe I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People and I take pleasure in telling others about them.

Among the many forms of neuralgia are headache, nervousness, paralysis, apoplexy and locomotor ataxia. Some of these were considered incurable until Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People were formulated. To-day thousands testify to having been cured of such diseases by these pills. Doctors frequently prescribe them and all druggists sell them.

TELEPHONING AT SEA.

How Commanders Communicate by Wire from Ship to Ship.

Telephones may supersede the old system of flag signals as a means of communication between ships at sea. Successful experiments have been made by Commander R. G. O. Tupper of the British navy which seem to prove that the system is adapted for the purpose. Commander Tupper used a kite in his experiments, and this seems to be the only feasible means. The kite used was an ordinary one that differed but slightly from those used by American boys in the spring and fall, except that it had no tail. The kite was six feet long and three wide at its broadest part. Two lines were attached to the kite where the tail would ordinarily have been. One of these lines was retained on board of the Daring, the torpedo boat destroyer under Commander Tupper's command, from which the experiments were conducted. It was found that with the wind between the two lines it was easy to drop letters or even a hawser on another ship, and in this way to establish communication. When this experiment had proved successful Commander Tupper made use of a wire. The end of the wire which the kite bore away from the ship was dropped upon the deck of H. M. S. Dauntless, where it was secured by the electrician of the ship and attached to a telephone apparatus in waiting. The other end, which had remained aboard the Daring, was also attached to a telephone, and as soon as the task had been completed the communication between the two ships was perfect. Secured by the two lines, the kite remained suspended for four hours, during which time communication between the two ships was uninterrupted. Commander Tupper has made a report of his experiments with the kite telephone and declares that it means that the present method of signaling with flags will become obsolete. If telephone wires can be employed, he sees no reason why telegraphic communication should not be made in a similar manner, and the ships of a fleet be placed in communication with each other.

TELEPHONING FROM SHIP TO SHIP.
