An Experiment with the Memory. Starting with the word Washington, write down one hundred words just as they occur to you. Let your second word be the one which Washington naturally suggests to you. Possibly it will be capitol. It may be President. Take the word which first comes into your mind. In the same manner let the third word be suggested by the second, the fourth by the third, and so on. Be careful that the third word is not suggested by both the first and second. Drop the first entirely, and let your mind go from the second alone to the third. Having written this list of words, you will have furnished yourself with a cheap but very useful mirror of your mind. If you are able to use this mirror, you may discover some very serious defects in your mental processes. You may discover that you think along certain lines too frequently. You may discover that you think along certain lines too frequently with a cheap but well be detected to more important laws of mind. You will be led to avoid certain linkings and to encourage others of a more philosophical nature.—Saturday Evening Post.

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Con "Can Do My Own Work."

West Winsted, Conn., writes:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—It is with pleasure that I write to you of the benefit I have derived from using your wonderful Vegetable Compound. I was very ill, suffered with female weakness and displacement of the womb.

"Icould not sleep at night, had to walk the floor, I suffered so with pain in my side and small of my back. Was troubled with bloating, and at times would faint away; had a terrible pain in my heart, a bad taste in my mouth all the time and would vomit; but now, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound, I feel well-and sleep well, can do my work without feeling tired; do not bloat or have any trouble whatever.

Dainty Petticoats.

Petticoats for wear under thin silk or lawn gowns are of all sorts and descriptions, and quite as varied in style and adornment as the dress skirts which will hide them. Dimity petticoats are a novelty; they are made of the same striped and flowered stuff as the dainty little morning frocks that so many women are having made upjust now. Three frills at the bottom or a deep flounce, headed with lace insertion or comet ribbon beading, is the usual way these pretty skirts are trimmed. Petticoats or colored linen—buff color is the most popular—are very serviceable for country wear, the colored linen keeping presentable longer than white—and is there anything so awful as a soiled white skirt?—and washing beautifully.

Khakt is the Thing.

—and washing beautifully.

Khaki is the Thing.

Khaki is about the sturdiest, most wear-resisting fabric among the season's novelties. As khaki plain and simple or as khaki serge it is utilized both for boys and girls. Though it is far enough from having nautical associations, it is handy stuff for the making of sailor dresses. These have bluelinen, hemstitched collars or plain ones of white pique. More elaborate samples are of white serge with collars and sashes of Roman striped silk. Khaki is almost the best material for bicycle dresses during the warm season. Coat and skirt suits for girls of ten andover are made of it. The reefer coats are trimmed with red braid. Bicycle skirts for girls are usually plain, but rows of braid may be used for ornament.

The Sunshiny Woman.

When the sunshiny woman becomes a wife she brings into her husband's life an element of joy that no future calamity can entirely eliminate. She is a helpmate in very truth, though she may not be able to make a loaf of bread and has the most extraordinary ideas on the subject of domestic economy. She is a sort of mental bracer, the effervescence of the sunbeams brightening all within a radius of their influence. Life to her is never so gloomy but that it could be gloomier. She revels in the very joy of living, and even when physical misfortune pursues her the beautiful soul smiles forth from the patient eyes until we inwardly remark, "God bless her," and know that the vorld would be better if there were more like her.

A Talented Daughter of Austria.

Mme. Jindriska Peskova, of Prague, is the most distinguished woman in the Austrian empire, and was recently decorated by the Emperor in acknowledgment of her great work among women, being the second Austrian woman to be so honored. Her chief work has been the building in Prague of a magnifecent woman's building, which cost $200,000, and which is the centre of woman's activities in that empire. Every year 2000 Bohemian young women are here prepared for the University of Prague, the doors of which institution were opened to women through the untiring efforts of Mme. Peskova. She is also the foremost woman peet of her country, editor of a woman's journal, translator of many languages, and a writer on educational matters.

A style of hat that is popular has a low crown and a medium broad brim. It is trimmed with long ostrich feathers laid flat on the brim on each side. The plumes start from the front under a buckle or short bow, and, being carried to the back, fall over the edge and curve down upon the hair. The plumes this year have little curl in them, so that damp weather will not affect them to any extent. Black hats never looked so attractive as in these days of brilliant effects. They also present a kaleidoscope effect, not only of colors, but of materials and shapes. Hats of every known color are seen by the thousands of startling green, searlet, orange, yellow, purple, pink and blue. Garnitures of flowers compose the trimming of many of the hats, and where the brims turn up are placed choux of velvet or ribbon.

Sandals Worn Again.

The sandal is the very latest in footwear. It is intended to be worn in the privacy of your own boundoir, either with or without stockings, as fancy and immunity from colds may dictate. If worn constantly in the house it improves the circulation immensely and banishes the vexations of corns and cold feet.

The sandals were resurrected from the shades of antiquity by some women artists in England, who spent long hours in their studios and did not like the idea of having their pretty little feet imprisoned in stiff boots all day long.

long.

They accordingly made some drawings from old prints and designs found in obscure places while engaged in their researches. They had the vilage shoemaker carry out their favorite designs and all that summer those yoard in them to the cottage where they boarded.

Of course, their feet grew as pretty and soft and flexible as their hands, and the style was adopted by their friends. An American girl brought it over to this country and it is gradually making headway among the women who desire comfort and good feet.

They are much in favor with trained nurses, who find the absolute freedom of the foot tremendously restful during the long hours. Mothers who realize the value of a pretty foot put them on their children, without stockings, during the warmer months. They are becoming, if the foot has not been distorted by shoes.

When a Malden Marries.

She must not expect to find the married state an enchanted garden of happiness, where never a weed nor a thorn grow. She will certainly have many times of trouble and weariness; but she must, with brave heart and indonitable courage, face the new, unbroken life which, along with fuller joy than she has hitherto known, lies before us. She should never allow even her mother to criticise and find fault with the behavior of the man she has taken for better, for worse. She should do all in her power to make the home the daintiest, cosiest little nest imaginable, so that the husband shall be only too glad to spend his evenings there, instead of going off to 'his club.' She must bear in mind that no man, even the 'dearest fellow in the world,' can bear with good temper being kept waiting twenty minutes for his dinner, or finding his shirts minus their complement of buttons, and his socks full of holes. They should not forget that well-cooked, daintily served meals go far to ensure household peace. No time is wasted that is spent as a means to this desirable end. Everything put on the table should look as nice as it tastes. She should strive to be always as fresh and suitably adorned as a newly-opened daisy sparkling with the morning dew; and as sweet-tempered and loving a little wife as ever gladdened the heart of a husband. She must not place implicit trust in the arithmetic of her tradesmen. She should add up the books herself, and pay bills weekly. She must persevere in taking the liveliest interest in domestic duties, and not be disheartened and downcast at the mistakes she will inevitably make during the first year or so of her marriage. She should never think herself too tired or disinclined to make a minute daily inspection of the contents of the larder, etc., writing down the orders directly after breakfast; or, better still, when possible, doing the marketing herself. She should take for the motto, "Nil Desperandum," and remember that though many a dark day will come, the

Squirrel Hunters in War.

One captious critic who comments upon the fact that the volunteer troops at Chickamauga are unprepared for war sneeringly remarks: "Many of these raw soldiers knownothing about thandling a gun, except such experience as they have had in shooting squirrels."

That criticism may be deserved, but the squirrel-hunting point is not well taken. Anyone who knows aught of sport or woodcraft knows that he who can shoot squirrels can shoot anything else, To be a squirrel hunter one must have a quick eye, an unerring aim and good judgment. Spaniard shooting is an infinitely easier task.

The squirrel hunteralready has won an enviable position in the military history of this country. The "squirrel hunters" of New England were the first to try their marksmanship on British red-coats in 1776. Companies of "squirrel hunters," organized throughout the Eastern States, also rendered highly efficient service during the war of 1812; Jackson's "squirrel hunters at New Orleans won the greatest victory of the entire war, and taught the British General Pakenham to respect American marksmanship. In the great Civil Warmany, companies of expert riflemen, detailed for service as sharpshooters, were known as "squirrel hunters," and if the boys at Chickamauga equal their record on the battlefield, the Nation will have good cause to remember them gratefully. The boys who can shoot squirrels are all right.—Chicago Times-Herald.

"All Hands Abandon Ship."

A naval officer thus describes the realistic "All hands abandon ship!" drill: "Two minutes after the word has been passed every ship's boat has swung from its davits into the water, and a minute later every boat is thoroughly provisioned and watered. Within four minutes, and often in much quicker time, every man of the ship's company, from the commanding officer down, is occupying the station in the boat called for by his ship's number, and then the command "Sheer off!" is given. The boats are hauled away a couple of hundred feet from the deserted vessel, and she rides without a human soul aboard her, often when the drill is gone through in midocean, in a sea that the landsman would account terrific. Then the word 'Board!' is passed, and within eight minutes at the most all hands are not only on board again, but every boat has been relashed to the davits, all of the provisions, water instruments and other gear have been removed and the ship's company is in a fair way to get to sleep again."

"Stargerweed," a Perennial Plant.
Sneezeweed, or sneezewort, otherwise known as "stargerweed," is a smooth, branching perennial plant, one to three feet high, with thick, lance-shaped leaves and showy yellow flowers. It grows commonly in moist ground. The whole plant, especially the flower, is acrid and pungent. When powdered, it causes violent sneezing, and is used in medicine to produce that effect. Sheep, cattle and horses are often poisoned by it. One instance is recorded where several persons were poisoned by eating One instance is recorded where several persons were poisoned by eating bread contaminated with the seeds of sneezeweed. The nature of the poison is not known, but it exists principally in the flowers. Symptoms are difficult breathing, staggering, extreme sensitiveness to the touch, and convulsions.—New York Suu.

A Fortune From a Scare.

An inventive genius who suffered from attacks by stray dogs when riding his wheel, set his wits to work to devise something which would be an efficacious, and yet comparatively harmless, means of defense. As a result he has brought out and patented a pocket pistol which will shoct ammonia, water or other liquid. The most victous dog cannot withstand a few drops of ammonia in his mouth or eyes, and yet there is no danger of actually injuring a valuable animal which might playfully annoy a rider. The weapon has proved so much of a success as a means of defense as well as fun-making, that the lucky inventor is realizing much money from his device.

It is a weapon which protects bicyclists against vicious dogs and foot-pads; travelers against robbers and toughs; homes against thieves and tramps, and is adapted to many other situations.

It does not kill or injure; it is perfectly safe to handle; makes no noise or smoke; breaks no law and creates no lasting regrets, as does the bullet pistol. It simply and amply protects, by compelling the foe to give undivided attention to himself for awhile instead of to the intended victim.

It is the only real weapon which protects and also makes fun, laughter and lots of it; it shoots, not once, but many times without reloading; and will protect by its appearance in time of danger, although loaded only with liquid. It does not get out of order; is durable, handsome, and nickel plated.
