The reason why ships are not struck by lightning is attributed by German authorities to the general use which is now made of wire rope for rigging purposes, as well as to the fact that the hulls of ships are usually constructed of iron or steel. Thus the whole ship forms an excellent and continuous conductor, by means of which the electricity is led away into the ocean before it has time to do any serious damage.

New Use for Peanuts.

A new use for peanut is developing as the peanut butter industry becomes better understood. The product of the peanut answers in the place of ordinary butter for the table use, and is said to be excellent for shortening purposes, and for gravies, sauces, etc. In point of purity it is well designed for the use of vegetarians who strenuously object to anything animal. There is already a considerable demand for this butter substitute, and it is very probable there will be an enlarged market for the nuts. At present the product of the United States is about 500,000 bags annually, and that of the world is 600,000,000 pounds.—West Coast Trade.

A Chinese Typewriter.

A missionary at Tung Chow has invented a Chinese typewriting machine. The characters number about four thousand, and are on the edge of wheels about a foot in diameter. Twenty or kirty wheels are required to carry all the characters, and two keys must be struck to make an impression. The first turns the wheel, and the second stops it at the required letter, which is then brought down to the paper. The machine is complicated, but the inventor (Dr. Sheffield) hopes to make it more simple. There are 18,000 characters in the Chinese language, each representing a distinct word. The 4,000 in common use have been selected for the new machine.

RELIEF FROM PAIN.

Trs. T. A. WALDEN, Gibson, Ga., writes:

"Dran Mrs. Pinkham:—Before taking your medicine, life was a burden to me. I never saw a well day. At my monthly period I suffered untold misery, and a great deal of the time I was troubled with a severe pain in my side. Before finishing the first bottle of your Vegetable Compound I could tell it was doing me good. I continued its use, also used the Liver Pills and Sanative Wash, and have been greatly helped. I would like to have you use my letter for the benefit of others."

now pefectly well."

Mrs. W. R. BATES, Nansfield, La., writes:

The Making of a Good Indian.

"You, gentlemen, who have served in southwestern Texas," related a diply West Point Captain, around a count of the carry in southwestern Texas," related a louban campfire, "have seen the Keminy point Afro-Indian scouts. In the carly pickithes, when I was a Lieutenant, and a glance over their muster roll would reveal such euphonious names as Ben July, Pompey Perriman, Jim Warrior, and Friday Bowlegs. Black as solid hunks of ebony, and as fond of whisky as a baby is of milk, they were, nevertheless, the finest traiters and scouts on earth. "Southwestern Texas at that time was a pretty wild stretch of country." Civilization stopped at San Antone, and the duty of these Afro-Indians was to keep that border free from smugglers, maranding parties, and hostile Indians. The men had had a good many sharp brushes with the redskins, and when they were warmed up with liquor they liked to tell of these affairs. Best Depth For a Sife.

Other things being equal the deeper the silo the better. From thirty to thirty-six feet seems to be the most practicable. When clover, millet or other loose material is siloed the pressure in a deep silo is sufficient to insure good keeping, white if it is shallow there is liable to be much waste because of incomplete expulsion of air.

Conveniences in Harness.

Many farmers go with heavy buckles to attach lines to the horses' bits, when a neat snap would save a half to a whole minute every time it is used. It is alway important to both harness and unharness quickly It save time for the team as well as for the man attending to it; and this time it is worth more in a week during the busy season than the slight cost of making the change.

Extra Feed For Lambs.

When young lambs are to be fattened for market, which usually demands them early in July, they may be made much heavier and fatter by feeding a ration of a gill of oats per day for two or three weeks before selling to the butcher. The larger and finer the lamb, the bigger price the butcher will gladly pay, as he has no trouble in selling the best at this season to be eaten with green peas. The lambs will soon learn to eat the oats greedily, and after a few days the amount may be increased to a gill at each feeding, giving it to them both night and morning.

light and morning.

Beneficial Insects.

It is not every insect that should be regarded as an enemy, even if it has some offensive habits or is vitalianous looking. The hornet is a pest, and its sting is tormenting. But it destroys thousands of slugs on vegetables and plants, imprisoning them for food for its unborn young. The lion beetle is so repulsive that the first impulse of nearly everybody is to crush it. But that too is predatory, and most of its victims are the enamies of the farmer and gardener. The lady bug is beautiful itself, and it also feeds on plant lice and the eggs of the potato beetle and other enemies of the orchardist and farmer.

of the potato beetle and other enemies of the orchardist and farmer.

Caltivating Peppermint.

When young the plants should be cultivated every week or ten days and this work continued until the growth becomes so large as to prevent it. Weeds should not be allowed to get a foothold. Every grower emphasizes this as an essential requisite to success. Not only are the plants stunted and the growth lessened through the competition of weeds, but the quality of the oil is much deteriorated by the diffusion of the juices of other plants in the process of distillation. The mint should receive a shallow cultivation and the surface kept level. A common two-horse corn cultivator with small teeth is a good tool for this purpose. Usually one hoeing and six cultivations will suffice. After the weeding season is over, there will still be some weeds which should be caref dor. Like mint, many weeds contain oil in their foliage and when distilled the oil mixes with mint oil, rendering the latter less valuable. Fire weed is probably the worst of all; rag weed, smart weed, honeset, golden rod are all known to contain a certain percentage of oil. Sheep sorrel is damaging cwing to its tendency to choke out the crop.—American Agriculturist.

Hardy Shrubs.

No time for flowers! Who has it? Certainly few living in the country, where soil is plentiful. True, farmers' wives are busy if any class of women are, but there are always a few spare moments which might be lost or used to less advantage. Even if a few extra steps are taken at certain seasons the pleasure when blooming time comes is so restful as to fully repay the labor.

The old-time garden, with multiplicity of work entailed by lack of improved implements, found time and space for at least the like and snowball. These are equally valuable to the modern grower who has little time to devote to flowers, for after they are once established almost no care is required save the annual pruning and fertilizing. During their blooming season the profusion of blossoms is certainly ample compensation for the time and labor expended.

There are now many other shrubs to be obtained that are equally hardy and thrive with as little care, some of them even more desirable than the favorites of a generation or two ago. The white like, for instance, partakes of the good qualities of its better known sister, while to many the color

The spireas in their numerous species furnish most artistic decorations, the blossoms varying from the plum-leaved bridal rose to dainty plume-like panieler.

In midsummer, when there is a dearth of flowers, the hardy hydrangea is loaded with its immense panieles, as large and even more graceful than those of the tender hydrangea, as they are somewhat elongated rather than spherical. They are at first pure white, gradually assuming a pinkish blue, and remain fresh for weeks. They may be cut and dried for winter bouquets, retaining their original form and much of their beauty.—Agricultural Epitomist.

Capright, 1978, by The Product & Giablia Co., Chamanan. Baltimore and Ohio engine No. 99, which has been just laid aside at Grafton, W. Va., and will be consigned to the scrap pile, has quite a history. It is one of the Ross Winans camel engines and was built in 1851. There are only four of this class of engines now remaining. During the late war this engine was one of several captured at Martinsburg by the confederates, and hauled across the country by pike to Staunton, Va., under direction of Col. Thomas R. Sharp. President John W. Garrett, after the war was over, hunted up Col. Sharp and appointed him Master of Transportation, in recognition of the ability displayed in that unparalleled achievement.
