Marketing Early Potatoes.
To those who are unfamiliar with potato growing, the high prices which early potatoes command might seem to make it an object to dig a large part of the crop and market it while the price is up. But there are several drawbacks in marketing potatoes early. The weather is hot, and while the skins of potatoes are tender, they will rub off their jackets if handled freely, and the potatoes are then almost sure to rot. Hence they are never sent far or in large quantities. In digging potatoes early there is great waste, as only a few of the largest are of marketable size, and those that will sell would grow still larger if left a few days longer in the hill.

How Much He'd Miss Me.
"Henrietta," said Mr. Meekin, "do you think you'll miss me?"
She looked at him in surprise and queried:
"When?"
"When I have gone to war."
"Mr. Meekin," she answered, "I have had reason for resenting a great many things, but I am willing to own that if Spanish marksmanship is such that you are missed in the war as often as I will miss you at home there won't be any risks for you whatever!"

NEWS AND NOTES FOR WOMEN

A Frook For Warm Weather.

Some charming warm-weather frocks are made of eorn batiste; the bodice of one is of similar tone of guipure, rounded off on either side of a soft mousseline pleated front, in bolero fashion, and descending a long way below the colored at the back. The guipure is cut away at the sides, producing a pleated fan-tail effect, which ends just above the plain linen skirt beneath.

Colored Lawn Petticoats.

There is quite a demand for colored lawn petticoats. The dainty pinks, blues, yellows and lavenders, heavily trimmed in flounces and lace, look well under grass linen or crash skirt, when just a faint gleam of the color is caught through the outer skirt. The colored skirt must be in harmony with the shirt waist, of course. There are dressing saques that come to match these skirts, and they both look well when worn to lounge about the dressing room.

American Girls' Home in Paris.

A delightful way of bringing the American art students together in Paris was the establishment of the American Girls' Home by a number of wealthy New Yorkers. The home is situated in a quarter accessible to the studios, and contains about seventy-five large, comfortably furnished rooms, which are rented exclusively to American students. There are three large reception-rooms and a library on the first floor, and many girls who live in apartments not convenient for receiving guests entertain all their visitors in the parlors of the Home. Every day at five o'clock tea and crackers are served, and almost all the American students in Paris are to be found there at that hour. Conversation is always animated on art, music, or the latest play, and the tea and crackers are a pleasing adjunct to the small talk floating through the rooms. No fee is charged, even to those not living in the Home, for the use of the reception-rooms at all hours, or for the five o'clock tea.—New York Tribune.

Neckties and Accessories.

A neck trimming is of black tulle, composed of a thick ruche spotted with chenille, and fastening in the center in front. It has one broad end, which falls over the corsage to a point in the center, and is ornamented with two rows of ruching edged with black chenille. Another neck trimming is of black tulle over black satin. It has a straight bow composed of two broad loops, edged with Chantilly insertion laid on. The ends are square and of unequal length; they are edged with insertion like the bow, and at the bottom of each is an elaborate design of foliage in black Chantilly lace.

Another neck trimming is of white mousseline de soie over white satin. It fastens in the center in front with a large, soft bow, very tightly tied in the center, and long, rounded ends of different lengths. These ends are edged down each side with black lace insertions, inlaid, and are ornamented round the bottom with a radiating design inlaid in very open black lace. Down the center of each end is a light floral design, inlaid.

Another neck trimming is of gray mousseline de soie over satin to match. The front is ornamented with a broad scarf, tied in a large, soft bow, with long unequal ends, which are edged with a light lace design, and at the bottom a very elaborate and handsome design. The ground of the ends is embroidered with small spots and with a Louis XVI. bow of very open lace, inlaid.—New York Herald.

First American Woman Suffragist.

When, on the 24th of June, the Assembly of 1847-8 was in session, doubtless occupied with discussing the affairs of the province, their rights as freemen, etc., they were startled by the appearance of Mistress Margaret Brent upon the scene, who demanded both voice and vote for herself in the Assembly by virtue of her position as Governor Calvert's attorney. Alas for Mistress Brent and her appreciation of the rights of her sex! The Governor promptly and ungraciously refused her. The injured lady, as her only means of retaliation, protested against all the acts of the session as invalid, unless her vote was received as well as the votes of the male members.

By this action Margaret Brent undoubtedly placed herself on record as the first woman in America to make a stand for the rights of her sex. It is surprising to find how little this fact is known. In so comprehensive and authoritative a work as the history of woman's suffrage edited by Susan B. Anthony no mention is made of this extraordinary woman. In fact, it is there stated that a Revolutionary dame, Mrs. Abigail Smith Adams, wife of John Adams, of Massachusetts, was the first champion of woman's rights in America. In March, 1770, Mistress Adams wrote to her husband, then at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia: "I long to hear that you have declared for independence, but I desire that you should remember the ladies. . . . If particular care is not paid the ladies. . . . we will not hold ourselves bound to obey laws in which we have no voice or representation." We are not told how John Adams replied to this epistle from his fair sponse, but we do know that in the famous Declaration of Independence, where all men are declared free and equal, the women received no more consideration than did Margaret Brent nearly one hundred and fifty years before.—Harper's Magazine.

LATE LOVE.

Love came to me through the gloaming
The dew on his wings lay wet,
And the voice of his wistful greeting
Was weary with old regret.
"O heart," he sighed at my easement,
"Must I wait for a welcome yet?"
He had come with the early roses,
In the golden shining of morn;
But I asked a gift he bestowed not—
A flower that bears no thorn.
So, through the glare of the noontide,
He left me, to toil forlorn.

And now—in life's quiet evening,
When long are the shadows cast—
He comes with the few pale blossoms
He has saved from a hungry past;
And into my heart unquestioned
I take him to rest at last.

A PLOT FOR A NOVEL.

One Offered Ready-Made for the Desperate Literator.

A novelist in Boston—do not laugh, there are novelists in Boston, yes, and actually living here—said to us the other day: "If I could only find a plot!" Here is a plot for him free of charge, and the story is a true one:

In 1730 a lady—a real lady—came into Birmingham, England, with a handsome equipage, and desired the landlord of the inn to get her a husband, being determined to marry somebody or other before she left the town.

The man bowed, and supposed her ladyship to be in a facetious humor, but being made sensible how much she was in earnest, he went out in search of a man that would marry a fine lady without asking questions. After many repulses from poor fellows who were not desperate enough for such a venture, he met with an excise man, who said he "could not be in a worse condition than he was," and accordingly went with the innkeeper and made a tender of himself, which was all he had to bestow on the lady, who immediately went with him to one who gave them a license and made them man and wife, on which the bride gave her spouse £200, and without more delay left the town and the bridegroom to find out who she was or uridride this strange adventure. Soon after she was gone two gentlemen came into the town in full pursuit of her; they had traced her so far upon the road, and finding the inn where she had put up, they examined into all the particulars of her conduct, and on hearing she was married gave up their pursuit and turned back.

Truly a noble dame, one worthy of a full length portrait in the gallery constructed by Thomas Hardy.

Why did this noble dame offer herself to the first comer? And why were the respectable males of the town so backward? There was no hint of scandal. Who were the pursuers? Did she wish by one sudden marriage to escape one deliberately contrived and repugnant? Was the excise man a petty fellow in spite of his abject condition? Did she ever see him again? Did she ever regret that she had not braved the world and lived with him? Perhaps the memory of her apparition haunted him; perhaps it roused him to doughty deeds. It's a pity that Mr. Hardy has not accounted for her action and her fate with his grim irony.—Boston Journal.

Ever Have a Dog Bether You
When riding a wheel, making you wonder for a few minutes whether or not you are to get a fall and a broken neck? Wouldn't you have given a small farm just then for some means of diverting off the beast? A few drops of ammonia shot from a Liquid Pistol would do it effectually and still not permanently injure the animal. Such pistols sent postpaid for fifty cents in stamps by New York Union Supply Co., 122 Leonard St., New York City. Every bicyclist at times wishes he had one.

The bicycle craze has decreased the consumption of cigars in America by about 1,000,000 a day. The decrease since the craze set in has actually been 700,000,000 a year.

Where Fingers Are Clumsy.

The countries where the long finger nail is most affected are Siam, Assam, Cochinchina and China. The approved length varies from three or four to twenty-three inches. A Siamese exquisite permits the nails on his fingers to grow to such an extent that his hands are practically useless. The aristocrats who affect these nails cannot write, dress themselves or even feed themselves.

The Siamese hold the long finger nail in the same reverence we hold the family tree. Many of them never have their nails cut from the day of their birth. On the first finger the nail is of moderate length—three or four inches—while on the other fingers the nails grow occasionally to two feet. The thumb nail, which is also allowed to grow long, after reaching a certain length curves around like a cork-screw.

In both China and Siam the owners of long nails wear metal cases over them to preserve them, made of gold or silver, and jeweled. While long nails are not regarded as singular in China, they are rarely met with except on fanatics and pedantic scholars.

Among the fakirs in Hindoostan a peculiar custom is that of holding the hand tightly clenched and in one position so long that at last the nails grow through the palm, emerging at the back of the hand and growing thence almost to the wrist. When the wasted muscles refuse to support the arm any longer it is bound in position with cords.

In Nubia the long nail is regarded as indicative of good breeding. The aristocrats constantly subject their fingers to cedar wood fire to insure a good growth.

The inhabitants of the Marquesas Islands are among the most expert tattooers on earth, and not even the crown of the head, the fingers and the toes are exempt from the needle. The hands are ornamented with utmost care, all the fingers having their own pattern, so the hand would look as though incased in a tight-fitting glove were it not for the finger nails of enormous length which complete the hand adornment of the wealthier natives.

Washing Milk Vessels.
All through the warm weather, particular care is needed to cleanse vessels that have contained milk. If any particle of milk is left in the crevices or corners of vessels, it will sour and affect any milk that is afterward added. Many people in cleaning milk from vessels wash them first with scalding hot water. This is a mistake. The hot water only coagulates the albumen, causing it to stick more closely to the sides of the vessel. If it be of tin, the scouring of the milk soon eats through the coating of tin, and causes rust on the iron beneath it. What we call tin is merely iron with a very thin tin coating. No such vessel is fit for long use, as the tin will wear through, and all the more quickly if the coagulated albumen, made by hot water and milk, requires hard rubbing to remove it. The right way to clean milk vessels is to rinse them well with cold water, and then scald them, to destroy any germs that the cold water may have left.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Mrs. Finkham Relieved Her of All Her Troubles.

Mrs. MADGE BARCOCK, 176 Second St., Grand Rapids, Mich., had ovarian trouble with its attendant aches and pains, now she is well. Here are her own words:

"Your Vegetable Compound has made me feel like a new person.

Before I began taking it I was all run down, felt tired and sleepy most of the time, had pains in my back and side, and such a terrible headache all the time, and could not sleep well at night. I also had ovarian trouble. Through the advice of a friend I began the use of Lydia E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, and since taking it I have had no more of these troubles.

My monthly sickness used to be so painful, but have not had the slightest pain since taking your medicine. I cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too much. My husband and friends see such a change in me. I look so much better and have some color in my face."

Mrs. Finkham invites women who are ill to write to her at Lynn, Mass., for advice, which is freely offered.
